BRITISH INDUSTRIAL MAGNATES WILL CONFER ON STEEL CARTEL TO ATTEND CONFERENCE IN JUNE

Delegation Will Negotiate About Entering Existing Continental Compact.

AFFECTS MARKETS.

Strenuous Efforts Being Made To Unite European Steel Industry.

BERLIN, April 21—Strenuous efforts to complete a united front of the European steel industry through inclusion of Great Britain in the existing Continental Cartel are in progress here.

Far-sighted German industrialists, spurred on by the recent Berlin visit of Louis Loucheur, former French Finance Minister and a leading advocate of international economic co-operation, have persuaded eminent representatives of the British industry to come to this city for a big definitive conference early in June.

If the proposed parleys, which began last year with the trip of prominent German business leaders to England, bear fruit, the steel, iron and coal trade of all Europe will be operatively amalagamated into a vast cohesive whole.

That this combination is directed in any way against the United States is, of course, denied on every side here as emphatically as in Paris. Nevertheless, its power, not only on this continent, but on all the markets of the world, will be tremendous, and hence it cannot be without influence on the American manufacture of iron and steel, or at least on the American exportation of these products.

Horne to Head British Delegates

The sixteen English delegates who are coming to Germany on June 3 are described as being under the leadership of Sir Robert Horne, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, and as including Sir William Larke, head of the British Steel Federation, and Colonel Ashley, who entertained the envoys of German trade at his country place last year.

Their program calls for preliminary visits to Cologne and Frankfurt, following which they will confer in Berlin under the chairmanship of Herr Wassermann, Director of the Duetsche Bank. On June they will visit Leverkusen in the Ruhr as the guests of Dr. Duisberg, the Chairman of the National Association of German Industry and head of the Friedrich Bayer Company, the great chemical concern.

"I am of the opinion that a combination of German coal, French iron ore and English coal would completely subjugate the whole of Europe economically," Arnold Rechberg, head of the German Potash Trust and initiator of France-German trade collaboration, writes today in the Berliner Zeitung am Mittag.

Recounting the substance of his conversations with big English business men on his recent visit to London, Herr Rechberg declares that they were with him in accepting the imperative necessity for Britain's participation in the Continental Cartel.

Political Effects Also Considered

In his article Dr. Rechberg, who lays claims to having urged a Pan-European industrial alliance immediately after the French evacuations of the Ruhr, says that while British industry may not yet be sufficiently organized at home to permit its immediate participation in the Franco-Belgium Cartel, it soon will be.

Sir Alfred Mond, he says, considers it only a matter of a few months before the development in question will become feasible. English leaders, both political and economic, according to Herr Rechberg, have been watching closely the benefits accruing to Germany and France through the steel and iron compact.

He cites German industry's diminution of its debts to America and the salvaging of the franc as examples of the cartel's benevolent workings and adds:

"This kind of industrial alliance, however, cannot remain without far-reaching political consequences. They inevitably lead to political understandings among States whose economic interests become so closely interwoven.

"The English, therefore, are convinced that the Franco-German industrial alliance will force a political alliance between France and Germany in the near future.

"The outcome would be an economic race between a Franco-German bloc on the one hand and the British on the other, which would produce political rivalry in the end. Such a division of Western Europe, in the case of the existing world tension, would be altogether dangerous."

PRIESTS AMONG BANDITS, CALLES PARTY ASSERTS

Three of Leaders at Burning of Train Said To Be Clerics.

STEPS TAKEN.

MEXICO CITY, April 21 (Canadian Press).—Fifty-one bodies and thirty-two injured persons had been taken to-day from the charred coaches of the passenger train burned by bandits in a hold-up in the State of Jalisco. Unofficial estimates indicated that the total dead might reach 100. The military escort of 50 which was on the train when it was held up fought until all were dead or wounded. No foreigners were on the train.

A statement issued from the office of President Calles charged "Catholic rebels" with responsibility for the outbreak, asserting that three Roman Catholic priests were among the leaders. It is stated that Secretary of War Amaro had ordered "required measures for an energetic pursuit of priests who received their instructions from the Episcopate of Mexico City."

The bandits or rebels, estimated at 500 to 1,000, hastily disposed of the military guard, poured gasoline on the coaches, and as the terrified passengers tried to scramble through the windows to the ground they were shot down.

Church Accused.

"As the only comment on this painful happening," says the statement from the Presidential office, "we desire to call the attention of the people of this country who have common-sense and especially of the poorer classes, to which the passengers who were barbarously burned alive by this church crowd belonged to the low moral level of those who desire to constitute themselves into spiritual directors of our country and seize power. This is not to be considered strange because it is merely an exact repetition of the proceedings which the Catholic Church has always used from the time of the inquisition to the present time."

Aviators on Trail.

Eight aeroplanes have been ordered to assist in the pursuit of the bandits. President Calles is described as burning with wrath and indignation and has given orders that no effort be spared in the campaign to round up the attacking party.

General Jaime Carillo, chief of staff of War Minister Amaro, in a report to the President, said that the bandits, headed by priests of Vega, Pedroza, and Angulo, and a lawyer named Loza, Commissioner of the League for the Defence of Religious Liberty, with a bandit

TAILOR SHOP BADLY GUTTED

Damage Amounting To $75,000 in Toronto Store To-day.

FIREMAN HURT.

TORONTO, April 21 (Canadian Press).—Damage estimated at $75,000 was caused by a fire which completely destroyed the tailoring establishment and stock of Levy Brothers, of King Street West, here early to-day.

Damage was also caused to the firms occupying the buildings next door through water and smoke.

District Fire Chief Edward Kearns had a narrow escape from death when he was trapped by a falling platform at the rear of the burning building. He was pinned underneath the platform and was released only after energetic work on the part of the firemen. He was taken to a hospital, suffering from bruises and shock.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 21. Special to the Examiner. — Announcement was made late Wednesday afternoon of the selection of Samuel B. Botsford, member of the law firm of Botsford, Mitchell and Albro, and for years prominent in civic affairs in Buffalo, as general manager of the Chamber of Commerce here, succeeding Ryerson T. Ritchie, of Peterboro, Ont., who replaced Geo. C. Lehmann, following the recent reorganization. Mr. Botsford will assume his duties at once, it was stated.

Mr. Ritchie, who has completed a splendid piece of constructive work in various plans for the reorganization of the chamber, says in his letter or resignation: "The continuance of the organization in line with its adopted policies will become an everlasting influence upon the growth and prosperity of Buffalo. It will also I know reward the hope I have so long entertained regarding the future of the city. As you know it has not been my desire to assume the continuing duties and responsibilities of the office of secretary, and I will therefore appreciate your courtesy in expressing that desire to the board of directors. Pleased be assured of an ever-deepening interest in your own administration and in the future developmet of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce."

In making an announcement of the appointment of Mr. Botsford in the place of Secretary Ritchie and Assistant Secretary George R. Guild, resigned, Lewis G. Harriman, president of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce, highly complimented Mr. Ritchie's ervices. Mr. Harriman stated that with the valuable assistance of Mr. Ritchie, a distinguished expert in Chamber of Commerce work, the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce has now completed its new constitutional code and have planned the work ahead. Mr. Ritchie's excellent work is now completed, Mr. Harriman stated, and consequently the next step was taken in selecting Mr. Botsford to put the programme into effect.

Mr. Botsford was president of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce in 1919 and for many years has been a member in that organization. He has been engaged for twenty five years in the active practice of law, has a unique capacity for organization work, an intimate acquaintance with all the men of affairs of Buffalo, and a detailed knowledge of the work of the Chamber, acquired through his long membership in the organization. Mr. Ritchie late last night had not yet decided on his plans for the immediate future.

They fell on a garage which was set on fire.

-be a BOOSTER!

Any town is made up of two kinds of men—the "Boosters" and the "Do-Nothings." The former class must shoulder all responsibility for the growth and necessary progress of the community. They do more than their share, which is not quite just, do you think?

Mr. "Do-Nothing's" creed is: "Let well enough alone. Costs too much money to be Cleaning-Up and Painting-Up all the while. Let the other chap do it—I'm busy earnin' a livin'."

Mr. Booster says: "I want my town to grow and to be popular. It can't do either if it is a neglected town, with shabby, unpainted houses and down-at-the-heel gardens and grounds. My own home and my place of business will be kept always in perfect repair, even though it may mean personal denial in some other way. By doing this I help myself by helping my city."

RIVER ENCROACHING FURTHER ON LOWER MISSISSIPPI STATES CARRYING DEATH AND SUFFERING

Tributaries Also Overflow in Arkansas and Texas.

STORMS PREDICTED.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 21.—(Canadian Press.)— Death, famine and pestilence rode Gulfward to-day on the ever increasing tide of the greatest flood in the history of the Mississippi Valley.

Thousands of square miles of fertile soil lay inundated. Damage to property had already reached an unestimated figure in the millions of dollars. Thousands of persons, driven from their homes by the waters, were suffering for food, clothing and shelter, while others who had braved the flood to stay in their homes, had perished.

Seven States Affected.

Seven States — Arkansas, Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Mississippi, Tennessee and Louisiana—were battling against the encroachments of the river. Texas was receiving a quantity of water from western tributaries.

Arkansas, through which several major tributaries were rising above and casting aside all barriers, was the worst affected in the group, though danger points had developed at points in Illinois and Mississippi, which were not apparent yesterday.

The outlook through the valley was far from bright as overhanging skies and rain storms were forecast.

Cold Wave Follows.

A cold wave, accompanied by rain, added to the suffering of hundreds of homeless in Oklahoma and Kansas, where acute conditions were reported folowing a long siege of storms and floods. Red Cross branches in Oklahoma received urgent calls for food, while Kansas streams rose again after the rains last night.

Organized relief agencies estimate the number of homeless in the floods throughout the Mississippi Valley at 50,000 and up. The organization of relief stations was immediately started after the issuance of a call for financial aid by the American Red Cross. Other agencies were carrying on, on a smaller but effective scale.

Bolivia will extend its Atocha Villazon Railway at a cost of $1,000,000.

FLOOD AT GLANCE.

By Associated Press.

States affected—Arkansas, Missouri and Mississippi, and to lesser extent Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee and Louisiana.

Estimated area inundated—4,000,000 acres, or 6,250 square miles.

Estimated homeless—50,000 persons.

Persons affected—100,000 directly or indirectly.

Lives lost—Impossible estimate, more than dozen known dead.

Property loss—Not estimated, but far into the millions of dollars.

Persons homeless in Arkansas — Upward of 20,000.

The results — Epidemic in two Arkansas refugee camps; rail traffic and wire communication demoralized; cities cut off from the outside; schools closed and threatened breaks of other levees on major streams in the state.

Relief measures—American Red Cross; State and city government co-operating in rescuing homeless, establishing camps and caring for refugees. National Guard troops, members American Legion and Boy Scouts doing police and guard duty.

Outlook—Even higher stages forecast as cloudbursts and heavy rains, principally in Arkansas, added more water to that already in sight. River stages at many places already highest on record.

Probable duration—New Orleans weather bureau estimated from two to four weeks before flood waters will pass that city.

AROUND THE CITY

At 11.09 the fire brigade received a call to the corner of Lake and George streets, where an automobile had caught fire. At 3.25 p.m. the brigade responded to an alarm for a chimney fire at 861 Water street, and at 4.30 p.m., a grass fire was extinguished at 1043 Water St.

Man Reported Killed In Wreck Is Safe In England Dreamed Of Shipwreck and Refused To Make Journey

LONDON, April 21 (Canadian Press Cable). — Patrick Broderick, jockey, reported killed in the derailment of a Canadian National Railway freight train near Hornepayne, Ontario, two days ago, is alive in England. Through a dream he changed his mind about accompanying Captain J. Liddington, Garnet Bull, and H. Enderby to Canada with a shipment of horses. The latter were all killed in the wreck.

Broderick today said, "Five nights before I was to leave, I dreamed that the ship in which I was sailing collided with another vessel. I seemed to be drowning. After that dream I decided not to join the party."

Canadian National Railway officials were today endeavoring to ascertain the correct identity of the man, previously believed to have been Broderick, who with six others was killed in the wreck.

NEW REMEDY FOR DIABETES

German Specialist Offers Tablets Which Taste Like Candy.

RAPID CURE.

BERLIN, April 21 (Canadian Press).—The discovery of what is claimed to be a new cure for diabetes was announced by Professor Carl Von Koorden of Frankfort University, one of the world's greatest digestive specialists, at the annual conference of German surgeons in Berlin to-day.

The remedy, which is a powdered condensed extract of the pancreas glands of animals, is taken internally in the form of tablets. These look and taste like candy, which diabetes patients are forbidden to eat.

Prof. Von Koorden reported that rats and rabbits from which the pancreas gland had been removed were able to assimilate carbohydrates perfectly with his remedy. He claimed that human beings could be cured more rapidly by his method than by the use of insulin.

U. S. FARMERS MOVE TO CITIES

NOW 27,892,000.

WASHINGTON, April 21 (United Press)—"How are you going to keep 'em down on the farm?" seems to be one of America's biggest problems, according to farm population statistics issued by the Agricultural Relief Department. Last year the number of persons living on farms decreased 649,000, the largest agriculture exodus since 1920. Estimates by the Department fix the farm population at 27,892,000.

More than 2,155,000 persons moved from the country last year, the Department figures show, while 1,135,000 changed their residences from the cities to farms. Farm births, however, reduced the loss due to city-ward movements to 649,000.

WINDSOR HANDLES MOST OF LIQUOR

Large Proportion of Canada's Exports Go Through That Port.

WINDSOR, April 21. —(Canadian Press.)—Through the port of Windsor and its outports passed eighty per cent. of the total Canadian export of beer to the United States and 65 per cent. of the total export of whiskey. Of approximately 8,330,000 gallons of whiskey which passed from Canada to the United States in the six months ended Sept. 30 last, eighty per cent. passed through Windsor. A. E. Nash, auditor for the Royal Customs Commission, presented some interesting figures along these lines at the intial sitting here this morning. His figure showed that the movement through Windsor is growing.

In 1924, the proportion of whiskey going through this port was about 35 per cent. In 1925 it had increased to 58 per cent., and in 1926 it had gone up still further to 65 per cent. Beer exports through Windsor fluctuated between 70 and 80 per cent. of the total Canadian export. Mr. Nash stated that, of liquor exports from Canada in 1924, forty-two per cent. went to the United States. In 1925 this had gone up to 61 per cent. and in 1926 to 80 per cent. The port of Windsor includes Walkerville, Sandwich, Belleriver and other places as outports.

LIQUOR COMMISSIONER VISITS PETERBOROUGH TO VIEW SITES SUITABLE FOR LOCAL BRANCH

INSPECTED STORES

STEWART McCLENEGHAN
Member of the Ontario Liquor Control Commission, who was in Peterborough to-day selecting a site for the local store.

Stewart McCleneghan Expresses Surprise at Lack of Fitting Stores.

TWO CONSIDERED.

Local Store To Be One of Largest in Province, He Says.

Stewart McCleneghan, one of the members of the Ontario Liquor Commission paid his first official visit to Peterborough this afternoon. Accompanied by W. H. Bradburn, he spent most of the afternoon trying to find a suitable location for the liquor store which is to be situated in this city.

Mr. McCleneghen told The Examiner that he was surprised to find such a scarcity of suitable buildings which showed that the city must be prospering. The Commission did not wish to have its store on George Street, but at present it has not been possible to find off the main street, a store that is of the right size and meets all the requirements which are necessary for one of this kind.

The old Customs building at the corner of Water and Simcoe Streets had been thought suitable, but Mr. McCleneghan did not favor it, as there would be too many steps between the store and the store room. There are two buildings on George Street which at present are under consideration: the store occupied by R. Denne and the one at 408 George Street which was formerly "The Central Pool Rooms."

Mr. McCleneghan expressed himself as very well pleased with the latter as it is about the right size and has a back entrance. He asked that certain improvements be made, so in all probability the store will be situated at 408 George Street.

At present the three members of the Commission are looking over the territory in different parts of the province. D. B. Hanna, the chairman, is in Western Ontario; Hon. Dr. Manion has gone into the northern part, and Mr. McCleneghan is looking over the eastern district.

The store in Peterborough, said the Commissioner, will be one of the largest in the province, and the members of the Commission are very anxious to get the best possible location, so that the liquor Act may be carried out to the best advantage.

When asked by The Examiner if any appointments had been made, Mr. McCleneghan said that no applications had been opened by the Commission yet, and that a special day would be set aside in the near future for opening these applications.

Mr. McCleneghan said that the members of the Commission had been very busy lately. Many regulations had to be passed and they had been continuously in conference with the law clerks of the government. They were trying to do in six weeks that which should require six months' work.

Mr. McCleneghan paid a very high tribute to his chief, D. B. Hanna, and said that he was a fine man and was anxious that, as far as the Commission was concerned, the Act would be administered in the best possible way to all concerned.

It is hoped by the Commission

NO ULTIMATUM FROM POWERS IN NEW DEMAND

Drastic Action Will Be Proposed If This Is Not Met.

SPLIT PUZZLING.

General Chiang's Course Still Unknown To Foreigners.

LONDON, April 21 (United Press)—There will be no ultimatum in the new powers' note to Eugene Chen, Cantonese foreign minister, in connection with the Nanking disorders, the British United Press learns, but should the fresh demands for reparations result in no satisfaction drastic action will be proposed and in all probability taken.

The split between General Chiang Kai-Shek, leader of the Moderate Nationalists, and the Cantonese government at Nankow is perturbing the various nations involved in the Chinese crisis because the former is still an unknown quantity in so far as foreign interests are concerned. He did, it is true, tell the British representatives that he would take the responsibility for the disorders at Nanking, but whether this will prove a better deal than that made with the Hankow government remains to be seen.

BANK OF ENGLAND RATE IS LOWERED

Cut From 5 To 4 1-2 Per Cent as Predicted in Money Market.

London, April 21, Canadian Press. —The bank of England today reduced its rate from five to four and a half per cent., thus fulfilling the expectations of the money market.

The bank's action was made possible by a recent influx of gold, which since the beginning of this month has totalled more than 3,000,000 pounds sterling (about $15,000,000.)

FIRE IN GRASS IGNITES BARN

HIGH WIND CAUSE.

LINDSAY, April 21.A grass fire was responsible for a serious blaze in Sebright, Victoria County, on Tuesday, Mrs. Percy Nicholson, who resides on the Gould farm, ignited the grass in front of the house. There was a high wind blowing at the time, and the sparks ignited the hedge and then the large barn. Before help could be summoned, the barn and driving shed were soon enveloped in flames and totally destroyed with contents. Mr. Joseph Wright had a number of implements stored in the buildings and his loss will be a heavy one. A new binder was totally destroyed, together with the hedge and a number of fine trees on the property. There was a small insurance on the barn, but the contents are a total loss.

TORONTO MAN SHOOTS WIFE AND THEN SELF

Mrs. Clara Lyford Received Bullets in Stomach and Arm.

BOTH IN HOSPITAL.

Been Separated For Some Time Because of Domestic Dificulties.

TORONTO, April 21.—As a culmination to domestic difficulties which caused a separation some time ago, Henry Lyford went to his wife's home, 277 Victoria Park Avenue, yesterday afternoon, where she was alone, and after upbraiding her fired two shots at her from an automatic revolver, wounding her in the stomach and arm. After the shooting the woman flew from the house in terror to the home of the next door neighbor. Lyford turned the weapon on himself, inflicting a wound at the side of his head. Both man and woman ar now in hospital.

Lyford has been living at 1 Woodville Avenue since he and his wife separated, but is said to have been hanging around her home lately. He was seen outside the house Tuesday night.

Mrs. Lyford is 51 years of age. She ran into the home of Mrs. Frances Jessie Southgate at No. 275 and collapsed on the kitchen floor. Mrs. Southgate was alone with her little baby. She had heard the shots and was considerably frightened. After the first shot she heard Mrs. Lyford exclaim: "Oh, Oh," and then shriek.

A boy who had heard the shooting ran to summon Policeman Byrt, who resides in the vicinity, and had just reached home off duty at Dundas street station. Byrt went in to 277 and found Lyford lying on the floor, where he placed him under arrest.

The officer went into Mrs. Southgate's and secured aid for the injured woman. He states that Lyford admitted to him that he had shot his wife and had then attempted to end his own life.

The cottage where the shooting occurred is in the county. Constable Rapley reached Mrs. Southgate's house shortly after the shooting and took Mrs. Lyford into his car to remove her to the hospital and transferred her to the ambulance when he met it on Gerrard street hurrying in response to Byrt's summons. The ambulance went to the Southgate house, where Byrt had Lyford in custody, and the man and his wife were taken to the hospital together. His wound seemed to be a superficial one on the scalp.

Henry Lyford and his wife were rushed in the police ambulance to St. Michael's Hospital, where they are being attended to.

HOW ABOUT 'AGRARIAN'?

HARTFORD, Conn., April 21.—Pity the poor farmer—not because he may or may not need federal aid, but because the world "farmer" has been given an offensive and humiliating significance by custard pie comedians. At least, so says Willard Rogers, who has requested the aid of the New England council in substituting the word "agriculturist" for "farmer". The older term, he says, has given tillers of the soil an inferiority complex.

"Peaches" Arrested For Sassing Officer

CHICAGO, April 21.—'Peaches' Browning sassed a Chicago policeman Tuesday, and was held on charges of disorderly conduct. 'Peaches' had been driving with Al Mann, brother of Fred Mann, proprietor of Rainbow Gardens, where Peaches' is an entertainer. They were going forty one miles an hour. When motorcycle policemen drew up alongside 'Peaches' lost her temper. She was released on bonds of $400, which she produced herself. Mann was released on his own recognisance.

CLAIM GERMANS ARE BUILDING UP HUGE AIR FLEET

Sensational Disclosures Made By Pamphlets Issued in Paris.

LONDON EASY.

Could Wipe Out British Mercantile Marine in Few Days.

LONDON, April 21.—Sensational anonymous pamphlets issued in Paris and asserting that by 1942 Germany will have enough airplanes to wipe out the British mercantile marine, in a few days have been widely distributed in Great Britain, and the Government's attention has now been drawn to them.

The pamphlets anticipate that Germany's commercial air liners will be easily changed into aerial cruisers of 30 tons, and asserts that "they will sweep the great maritime routes of the world over a radius of 4,000 kilometers." Furthermore, it is pointed out every ship will be at the mercy of these airplanes, three of which could sweep an area of 2,000 kilometers by 100 kilometers in ten hours.

Little Importance.

The Air Ministry here, however, is not as yet inclined to attach any great importance to these "disclosures" because, while it is recognized that the air menace to shipping routes is growing greater every year, defence measures are also increasing.

Still, the spectacle of every passenger liner and cargo vessel being guarded by aerial escorts is considered by no means impossible, but at the same time the pamphlets have caused no sudden alarm, although every air development is watched with the closest vigilance and plans are being prepared to combat such a menace at any time.

The whole subject will most likely be discussed at a conference here next week of British, French, Belgian, Dutch and German delegates, who are assembling to deal with the problems of commercial aviation in their respective countries.

Famous Movie Comedian Agrees To Pay $1,000,000 On Taxes, Government Then To Release His Property

WASHINGTON, April 21. — Charles Chaplin will pay the Government about $1,000,000 in settlement of the Government's claim on unpaid taxes covering a period of more than five years. An agreement was reached here this week between lawyers for the movie action and the Government to satisfy all claims and permit the release of Mr. Chaplin's property.

The Government has been working on Mr. Chaplin's books for many months, but speeded action when suit was brought by Chaplin's wife, and it was said he was trying to dispose of his property.

Immediately the Government tied up his bank account in New York, but later released it on the filing of a bond. In addition to this liens were placed on Chaplin's properties in the Los Angeles Tax District. These two actions gave the Government security of more than $1,000,000.

According to Treasury officials Chaplin's cheque for this amount is now on the way East from the Pacific Coast. When it is received, the liens will be cancelled and the bond released.

PUBLIC HEALTH RULES STRICTER

Limit on Passengers On StreetCars—Licenses For Baording Houses.

BARBERS' ORDERS.

TORONTO, April 21 (Canadian Press)—Regulations issued by the Ontario government under the new Public Health Act and which have been approved by order in council, limit the number of passengers which may be carried on street cars, demand a thermometer in each car, call for the thorough cleansing of street car interiors each day, prohibit cushions which are not readily cleaned, permit only celluloid covered straps, and say there must be adequate ventilation.

What appears the most interesting rule is that which governs the maximum load. By its terms street railway concerns "are prohibited from carrying in any car at one time a greater number of passengers than is equal to one and two fifths times the proper seating capacity, with the additionof five passengers on the rear platform of each car." The new regulations have drawn protest from Eustace Smith, secretary of the Canadian Electric Railway Association, who claims they are too stringent. "They are impossible regulations. A literal interpretation of them would ruin some companies," he said.

The new regulations increasing the strictures in the public health laws of the province announced by Hon. Dr. Godfrey, minister of Health for Ontario, to-day, are aimed at the prevention of communicable diseases. With regard to lodging houses the regulations are particularly specific and all places where people reside even for a single night must be licensed. In addition each lodger must have a separate bed with a bedstand. All mattresses must have waterproof covering, comforters will not be permitted on beds, the wood bedstead will be taboo, and there must be a shower bath provided on every floor. Roller towels "in common use" are banned under the regulations in all business and public washrooms.

Barbers will be compelled to sterilize all shaving mugs, brushes, razors, clippers, shears, needles, forceps, combs, brushes, etc., and must themselves wear washable coats. Before shouting "next" they must wash their hands and they will not be allowed to use powder puffs or sponges.

OBITUARY.

DAVID POGUE.

The late Mr. Pogue was born on December 27th, 1875, near Omemee, and in 1887 moved with his parents to his late home. It was with deep regret that friends and neighbors heard of his death, he having been one of the old time residents of this district.

The deceased had been in failing health for the past eight years but he had been able to look after his farm until about three weeks ago, when his condition gradually became weakened.

Besides a sorrowing wife he is survived by a family of five: Chas., Ernest, Jack, Albert and Nettie, also two brothers and three sisters: Jas. Pogue of MacGregor; Ephraim, of Bagot; Mrs. James Moore, Mrs. G. Billings of MacGregor, and Mrs. S. Hickson of Vancouver, B.C.

The funeral was held from the family residence to MacGregor Cemetery. Despite the bad condition of the roads there was a large gathering of relatives and friends present to pay tribute to one who had resided in the district for forty years.

BANDITS MAKE BRUTAL RAID ON RAILWAY TRAIN

FIRE COACHES.

MEXICO CITY, April 21 (A.P.).—Sweeping down upon a Guadalajara-Mexico City passenger train near Limon, States of Jalisco, Tuesday night, a great force of revolutionaries or bandits slaughtered from fifty to one hundred of the helpless passengers and killed the entire military escort of the train, numbering fifty soldiers. They drenched the coaches with gasoline and kerosene and set them afire, and as the terrified passengers tried frantically to climb out of the windows to escape incineration, the bandits shot them.

Of recent outrages this is declared to have been the worst in Mexican territory. The attack came almost without warning. Suddenly the train was halted while passing through a desolate country and the attack, some reports have it, begun by from 500 to 1,000 armed men. They made short work of the military guard; then locked the doors of the coaches, applied the torch to the oil soaked wood and by the light of the flames that instantly shot up, poured savage fusillades into the bodies of the passengers as they hung half out of the windows in an attempt to reach the ground.

Over Half Escape

First reports reaching Mexico City said that all the passengers had been killed, but President Calles later received information that about half of them had escaped. The presidential office also received report that three or four Roman Catholic priests had led the attacking party, characterized by the government as "rebels" numbering a little more than two hundred.

The railroad authorities were of the belief than the train carried from 100 to 200 passengers and their estimates were than between 100 and 160 persons were killed or injured.

Former President Obregon's daughter Coquita, who is the wife of an army officer, Colonel Ponce de Leon, is reported among the dead or injured. No foreigners are known to have been on the train.

Work of Rebels

There is a belief current in the Mexico City that the outrage was the work of revolutionists, as was the case in the recent attack on a Laredo-Mexico City train, for the purpose of discrediting the Calles administration as much as possible, both at home and abroad and focussing foreign attention upon the revolutionary conditions in Mexico.

Relief trains and troops have been rushed to the scene of the hold-up, and the survivors have been taken to Irapuate.

Tore Up Tracks

The attack on the train was evidently well-planned, for the rebels or bandits tore up the tracks between the stations of Liman and Feliciano. The engine was derailed, but the coaches remained on the tracks. The soldier guards were taken by surprise and greatly outnumbered and were first to be butchered. Those passengers who descended from the train when it had come to a halt, were forced back into the coaches at the point of rifles. They watched with horror the preparations of the savages to burn them alive.

Their frantic efforts to escape were in some cases successful but most of them were shot in cold blood or fell victims to the flames.

A statement was issued from the office of President Calles last evening that the leaders of the band were a lawyer named Loza and three Roman Catholic priests named Vega, Pedroza and Angulo, all described as prominent Jalisco rebels, and by a rebel chieftain identified only by the nickname of "Number 14."

Begin Pursuit

The President has sent a message to Secretary of War Amaro, who is already in Jalisco, directing that he take personal charge of the troops pursuing the murderous band. High government officials were summoned before President Calles, who issued orders for the most vigorous military operations against the perpetrators of the outrage and the fullest investigation of the affair.

The modern record for highest batting average is held by Rogers Hornsby, who batted .424 in 1925. Hugh Duffy, in 1894, batted .438 during the season.

King and Queen To Open National Museum Of Wales

CARDIFF, April 21 (Canadian Press Cable).—The Joneses, the Evanses, and indeed all those throughout the Empire who hail Wales as the land of their fathers, will surely turn their thoughts to Cardiff to-day. His Majesty, accompanied by Queen Mary, will open the National Museum of Wales, an institution of 30 years development.

Standing on five acres adjoining the City Hall, the magnificent buildings to be formally opened to-day comprise both the National Museum and the National Art Gallery. Exhibits range from weapons and vestments of the Viking period to a full-length painting of Lloyd George as Prime Minister.

To-day's ceremony includes a short religious service to be conducted by the Archbishop of Wales. The earliest known Welsh hymn, dating from the 12th century, will be sung, and His Majesty's speech, although of only four minutes' duration, will be broadcast by wireless throughout the kingdom.

SIR ROBERT PEEL IN LABOR PARTY

Young Baronet To Participate in Politics on Labor Side.

BRITISH HOUSE.

LONDON, April 21. — Another member of the British nobility is to join the Labor party.

Sir Robert Peel, baronet grandson of the statesman "Bobbie" Peel, from whom London policemen derived the nickname which has clung to them since early in the Victorian period, has announced his intention of participating in politics on the side of Labor. The young peer already has under consideration proposals to stand for parliament in the Tamworth division of South Stafford shire, his home, which was the division represented by his grandfather when he entered politics.

While prime minister the elder Peel founded the modern police force and immediately the policemen became known as "bobbie," and also as "Peelers," but the latter designation lasted only for a short time. Sir Robert, husband of Beatrice Lillie, the actress, recently attracted attention by acquiring financial interest and personal control of a dance hall in Birmingham, which has been drawing great crowds since he took charge.

LIMITED TRUST PROBLEM RAISED

Price Agreement Loses Order of Southern Railway For British Firms.

BROUGHT IN SWEDEN.

LONDON, April 21 — Considerable surprise has been caused by the action of the Southern railway in placing a contract for 120,000 pounds' worth of electrical equipment with a Swedish firm in preference to an English one.

Sir Herbert Walker, general manager of the railroad, said that the contract was not placed in England because of the price agreement among British manufacturers and also because of the quota arrangement restricting the output of individual firms.

The existence of this agreement is admitted by Sir Hugo Hirst, head of the General Electric company, but, nevertheless, the action of the Southern railway is certain to raise the whole question of limited trusts which exist in all forms of British industrial life and often paralyze competition and progress.

LINEN MAKERS ASK PROTECTION

Say Imports Have Greatly Increased Since Change in Tariff.

BUSINESS POOR.

OTTAWA, April 21.—(Canadian Press).—Claiming that there had been a phenomenal rise in linen imports beginning in the year 1922, "coinciding with the tariff reductions made at that time" representatives of the Dominion Linens Limited, Guelph, Ont., and the Caldwell Linen Mills, Iroquis, Ont., appeared before the Tariff Advisory Board to-day and requested a readjustment of the tariff and an increase of the import duty.

The applicants requested a minimum duty of 30 percent ad valorem on a separate customs class of fabrics composed wholly or in part of flax. Statistics were presented to show that the production of linen goods in Canada had greatly decreased and it was argued that the chief cause for the decline was competition by "the products of cheap labor."

William Berry, vice president of the Dominion Linens Ltd., stated that sixty percent of the raw material used in Canadian mills was produced in Canada. The application was opposed by the British Agents Association of Canada, representing British and Irish mills.

NEW LEASE OF LIFE FOR RUSSELL SCOTT

Illinois Supreme Court Sends Case Over Till June For Decision.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., April 21.—Russell Scott, who has escaped hang ing oftener than any other murderer ever convicted in the State of Illinois, gained another two months' respite for the law when the Supreme Court of Illinois yesterday ended its April session without handing down a decision in his appeal from a second sanity trial before the Criminal Court of Cook County.

The case of the former Toronto promoter and night life figure now before the Supreme Court is concerned with the question of whether the Cook County court was within its rights in bringing Scott back from Chester hospital for the criminal insane in May, 1926, trying him for sanity a second time, and sentencing him to hang for the murder of Joseph Maurer, Chicago drug clerk. Scott's attorneys claim that the whole proceedings of the criminal court is illegal.

By the action of the high court in failing to decide the case yesterday, it goes over until the June term, when the court reconvenes and a ruling will be made.

In the meantime, Scott will remain in the Cook County jail until his fate is fixed by the Supreme Court and he is sent either to the gallows or back to the insane hospital for the remainder of his life.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

HOW EVEN HAPPIER

If I had known that life would be
Even a half as good to me
As life has been, with all my whining.
If I had only understood
How good life is, how very good,
In spite of sighing and repining,
The happiness that life has in,
How even happier 'twould have been!

Each day, concerned with tiny cares,
I had my joy, half unawares
Because my little ills obscured them.
I worried over things today
Tomorrow that had passed away—
A little waiting quickly cured them.
I thought so much of what annoys
I had no time for larger joys.

Oh, do not make the error I
Have made of life—let life slip by
And weep if just a raindrop spatters.
I had my house, I had my friends,
I had my lamp when daylight ends,
Loved and was loved—and what else matters?
Oh, if the larger joys we see,
How even happier life will be!

(Copyright, 1927, Douglas Malloch.)

OLD MASTERS

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound or foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark;

For though from out our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

—Alfred Tennyson: "Crossing the Bar."

SEEK J. J. MORRISON AS PICNIC SPEAKER

Cavan and South Monaghan U.F.O. Club Outing June 17.

BAILIEBORO, April 21.—The Cavan and South Monaghan U. F. O. club held its regular monthly meeting in their clubroom on Monday evening, with the president, William McElroy, presiding.

During the meeting, orders were taken for seed corn, binder twine, and also for carloads of stove and nut coal.

The meeting decided to try and secure Mr. J. J. Morrison, secretary-treasurer of the United Farmers of Ontario, to give an address at the annual picnic on June 17, and also to arrange to have a good lady speaker present.

The members also decided to join in with Otonabee and Peterborough clubs in a joint meeting, having a western member of parliament come and explain the question of organizing a wheat pool in this district. The resolution asked that the speaker be sent within the near future.

The local club not only ships its own farm produce to their co-operative company in Toronto, but also buys supplies, such as grain, seed, coal, salt, flour, binter twine, and other farm commodities through the co-operative company.

South Monaghan has a strong United Farmers' organization. The membership on last year's roll was about 130, and it is expected that there will be a great increase this year.

TO GAS CONSUMERS IN PETERBOROUGH

A Statement Regarding the Production and Supply of Gas in the City.

Apparently, arising out of the recent negotiations between the Corporation and the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, a rumor has been circulated that the Commission intends to close down the Peterborough Gas Plant.

This utility has been operated without loss, and the revenue has been sufficient to provide the necessary reserves for renewing the plant. Therefore, the Commission has no good reason for closing down this Utility, nor does it intend to do so. The Commission has, however, endeavored to dispose of the property to the Corporation in accordance with the general policy in respect to the disposal of all utilities within the municipalities on the Central Ontario System.—(Advt.).

Life guard overcomes effects of damp and cold

A beach patrolman at Atlantic City has found a way to avoid the muscle-lameness that results from standing around all day in a wet bathing suit.

Letters like this from hundreds of users of Sloan's tell of the wonderful relief that Sloan's gives to every kind of muscular pain.

Sloan's gives real and lasting help because it doesn't just deaden pain, it gets at the cause. Right to the place that hurts it brings a healing stream of fresh, new blood. Quickly and surely it carries off the "fatigue-poisons," takes out stiffness and drives away the aches and pains.

PRESENTATION TO DOURO PASTOR

Rev. M. T. McGuire Welcomed on Return From Holiday in South.

DOURO, April 21.—Quite a large crowd was out on Wednesday evening, when a presentation was made to Rev. M. J. McGuire, the pastor, on his return from a three months' trip to Florida.

Mr. James Walsh was chairman for the occasion and the following address was read by Reeve J. J. Leahy:

To Rev. M. J. McGuire,

Douro, Ont.,

Rev. and dear Father:

It is with feelings of the greatest joy that we have gathered here this evening to welcome you home and to give you some slight tangible proof of our abiding friendship and the happiness that fills our hearts at having you once more in our midst.

During the past seventeen years in which you have labored amongst us, you have endeared yourself to us by your kindly disposition and the fatherly interest you have taken in all our affairs, both spiritual and temporal. In time of trial and tribulation you have been with us, consoling and advising and when the clouds of sorrow have once more shown their silver lining, and the sun of joy and prosperity has again shone forth, you have been the first to rejoice with us. In a word, our joys have been your delight, and our sorrows you have made your own. Truly, then, have you shown yourself a true frined—and a friend is one of God's choicest gifts.

It would be impossible in this short address to recount the many spiritual graces and blessings which we have received through your hands. Suffice it to say, that there is not one among us, who has not been influenced and refreshed by your priestly ministrations. And we would not expect it to be otherwise, for your many years in God's holy priesthood, both here and elsewhere, is a lasting evidence of your sincerity and your burning zeal in carrying out that injunction of our blessed Lord, when He said to Saint Peter: "Feed my lambs, feed my sheep."

Day and night, in season and out of season, you have labored in our midst and truly you have been "All things to all men." So we were happy when we learned a few months ago, that you were taking a much-needed rest. And although the vacation from which you have recently returned was long overdue—since it was in reality your first vacation, we trust that it was a pleasant one and that you have returned to us once more, renewed in body and refreshed in mind.

So we welcome you again with a welcome that is heart-felt and sincere, and we trust that God in his mercy will spare you to us for many years to come. As an earnest, then, of our deepest gratitude for favors in the past and our constant loyalty in the future, we ask you to accept this purse and we assure you that what it may lack in monetary value will be amply supplemented by continued and fervent prayers and good wishes for your health and happiness for long years to come in St. Joseph's parish, Douro.

Signed on behalf of the parish,

J. F. Leahy,

Samuel O'Brien,

Ray Carlow.

Mr. Samuel O'Brien then presented a well-filled purse. Rev. Fr. McGuire was touched and greatly pleased by this tribute from his people. He expressed his appreciation of the gift and his pleasure that everything had run so smoothly under the guidance of Rev. J. McGuire during his absence. He gave a very interesting description of his sojourn in Florida and declared that the rest and change had helped him greatly, and that he was very pleased to be back again.

Parker Charges Nothing to Service Duofold Pens

A Policy Made Possible by adding Non-Breakable Barrels to the All-Enduring Duofold Points

$7 is the first and last cost

This new Parker policy, effective April 10th, is due to the fact that barrel breakage has been reduced to the vanishing point by Parker's new Non-Breakable Permanite, now used instead of rubber, as formerly. Coupled with our jewel-smooth Duofold Point which yields to any style of writing yet ever retains its original shape, this insures a pen of which the first cost is the last, and which we will maintain in perfect writing condition without charge.

The only thing to worry about is whether the pen you buy bears the imprint of master craftsmanship—"Geo. S. Parker—DUOFOLD." Insist on this.

. . . VOICE OF THE LOWLY AND OPPRESSED . . . ADVOCATE OF THE FRIENDLESS . . . RIGHTER OF PUBLIC AND PRIVATE WRONGS.

A GOOD SOLDIER.

Canadians who realise the worth of Major-General J. H. MacBrien as Chief of Staff of the Depaprtment of National Defence will share in the hope expressed by Premier King that the services of this very excellent soldier may be retained.

Major-General MacBrien tendered his resignation some months ago, but has consented to remain in office until June 1st, and the Government is hopeful that he may continue after that date.

He is recognized as one of the ablest soldiers developed in this country, and exactly the right man in the right job as Chief of Staff.

With Canada's militia units starved almost out of existence by meagre appropriations, the necessity of a sound and experienced staff becomes all the more urgent, inasmtuch as the work of organization in the event of an emergency would require expert handling.

It would be a pity indeed if Canada were to lose the services of an officer of General MacBrien's calibre, a soldier who could not easily be replaced.

THE TEACHERS' VIEWS.

Cadet training has received endorsation at the hands of those who are in the best possible position to judge of its value as a part of school life.

The Public School section of the Ontario Educational Association has passed a resolution favouring the continuance of cadet work in the Public Schools of the Province.

Nobody is better qualified to speak on this subject than are the teachers.

They, above all others, are able to estimate the effect of cadet training upon the individual pupil, and as a factor in establishing an esprit de corps in the school.

If the cadet corps were fostering a militaristic spirit among Ontario's school children, as some of its opponents maintain, surely the teachers would be the first to detect such a result and to condemn the system that produced it.

The action of Ontario's Public School teachers in placing themselves on record as endorsing cadet training is of much significance.

GRABBING CUPID'S CHANCES.

"Some of the seats salvaged from the old street cars abandoned at Jackson Park will be placed under the trees. The lights at present strung on the band stand will be moved so they will light up the row of seats."—Examiner report of Railway and Parks Committee meeting.

Are there no match-makers among the Aldermen?

Has every last bit of romance been extinguished by the hardening influence of public life?

Here they propose to provide seats where Peterborough's youths and maidens can comfortably discuss those things that are of peculiar interest when "the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love."

So far so good, but they spoil it all by going to the trouble of shifting a lot of lights so the world can gaze upon the smitten pairs.

What a disheartening programme!

And apparently not an aldermanic voice was raised in protest at this flagrant violation of the right of Dan Cupid to work under conditions that give him a chance to make good.

WATER SPORTS.

It is with pleasure that The Examiner notes that a programme of water sports is to be included in Peterborough's Diamond Jubilee celebration, and it is to be hoped that this will be the beginning of an effort to give this city a more prominent place in aquatics.

The home of the world famous canoe, and situated on a beautiful river, with many lakes close at hand, Peterborough should be noted for its expert paddlers and oarsmen.

It was much more to the front decades ago when Peterborough citizens occupied prominent positions in connection with the American Canoe Association, and when the annual camp of that body was held one year at Stoney Lake.

In modern times all our glory has departed.

We still make the best canoes in the world, but we use them so indifferently that we have not produced a racing paddler of major calibre in many years.

A rowing shell on Peterborough waters would be as rare a phenomenum as was a motor bus a few years ago.

With its advantages in regard to convenient waters, this city might well turn out crack paddlers and a winning war canoe crew, and perhaps develop a successful rowing crew as well.

All we lack is the ambition.

LABOR PARTY LOSES GROUND.

In the report of the convention of the Ontario Labor party held at Hamilton, it was noted that there were 10 delegates less at the meeting this year than were present last year and 25 organizations which had been previously affiliated with the O.L.P. had broken off. Considering the character of the propaganda at the convention in question, it is not surprising that a loss in membership has been sustained. Among other things demanded was the annulment of the British North America Act so that a workers' republic could be established in Canada. The delegates voted for a "hands off China" policy, and patted Agnes MacPhail on the back, but they went farther afield than that.

Other resolutions passed advocated sports for Labor, as the present sporting movement was "controlled by the capitalist class;" free school books and free lunches at schools; that religious items be deleted from the Public School curriculum; that the practice of saluting the Union Jack be discontinued, and that the religious teaching and prayers in the schools be eliminated.

The co-operative movement was favored and the delegates condemned the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Women's Christian Association, the Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, Cadets and other similar movements.

It was suggested in another resolution that the Lieutenant-Governor be put upon the same footing as workers with an allowance of $40 a month, and that no further official dinners be held in his residence.

And from the above hodge-podge what could be more fitting as a finale than that the famous Jimmy Simpson should be elected Secretary-Treasurer of the O.L.P.? How much influence have these delegates in their respective communities? Do they even command the respect of ordinary union labor? It is very doubtful. If the influence of the O.L.P. is commensurate with the number of members of Parliament elected in either House, then it is nihil. It would be more accurate to say that it about represents the number of votes Jimmy Simpson secures when he makes his perennial run for office. The people of this Province are not enthusiastic over the half-baked theories espoused by what passes under the name of the Ontario Labor party.—St. Catharines Standard.

LETTERS TO SCHOOL CHILDREN.

Below The Examiner publishes a letter that so cleverly satirizes the now famous epistle of Miss Agnes MacPhail to the schools of South Grey that it should be of general interest.

It appeared in The Ottawa Journal, and that paper editorially calls attention to it, as follows:

"In view of certain letters that have been going from Parliament Hill to the school children of Southeast Grey, 'Another Letter to School Children,' published in an adjoining column is not without interest. For with a delicate satire, which is often the best way to expose fallacies, the writer shows how, given a certain set of facts, most anybody can pervert history to suit most any prejudice.

"'All history,' said Napoleon, 'is a lie agreed to.' It may not be exactly that, or even half of that, but those who have read history, and who have taken the trouble to subject certain histories to the too-cold-light of documentary proofs know how it has been mixed with propaganda. The very best historians have been transgressors, and the pamphleteers and propagandists and special pleaders have been worse; with the consequence that a great deal that has been written about most nations and most peoples is utterly unreliable.

"'A little knowledge is a dangerous thing.' And when such history falls into the hands of people who know little of the rules of evidence, and who combine with this deficiency a propensity for taking their facts from their prejudices, the result is always bad. Just how bad and how foolish it can be, we have just seen; and 'Another Letter to School Children' delightfully emphasizes both."

Here is the letter:

"Dear Boys and Girls:

"Today I am going to write about what the French did in Canada a long time ago. The first Frenchmen who came were what are called militarists and capitalists, and they came to take the lands of the Indians away from them, and to make a great deal of money in the fur trade. The very first one to come, Jacques Cartier, by a mean trick, got an Indian chief and some little Indian boys and girls aboard his boat and carried them off to France where they all died of gout. This made the Indians very sad, and I am sure you would not like it yourself.

"Another French militarist was Samuel de Champlain, who built a fort near Digby, N. S., and then went down to Cape Cod to see if he could not get some slaves to do all his work for him. The Indians struggled to get away, and just for that he had a lot of them killed. Just think of that, children!

"Champlain then went to Ontario, and made several trips around the country, looking for trouble, and one day he went down into New York State and came upon some harmless Indians called Iroquois. He got the low, sneaking Hurons he had with him to make faces at the Iroquois until they were annoyed, and then he shot down seven or eight of them and scalped and burned as many as he could catch.

"The French capitalists who were greedy for furs, tempted the poor ignorant Indians with brandy (a kind of rum) and the Indians got to like it and gave up their nice warm furs for this awful stuff, and went home drunk and beat their wives and children.

"Dollard des Ormeaux was another dreadful militarist. He and 17 low, blood-thirsty companions made a fort at Long Sault and lay in wait for the Iroquois, who wanted to go down the Ottawa River on just a little peaceful procession to protest against the terrible conditions in the Algonquin wampum-mills. The Frenchmen shot at them with guns and killed I don't know how many.

"Now all this trouble came about because the French wouldn't stay in their own country. By rights this Canada we live in should belong to the Indians who are kept cooped up like chickens on the Indian reservations. I think you should tell your father he should give his farm to some poor Indian.

"I went to a lovely party the other night. We played post-office and had raspberry vinegar and seed-cake. Don't you wish you had been there?

"Dr Edwards has just sent me a lovely aspidistra and I have it beside the rubber-plant in my office and it looks simply wonderful.

"Now I must go and make a speech before the Canadian Historical Society, of which I have been elected an honorary member.

"Your sincere friend,
"ORPHELIA MAGINNIS."

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Ty Cobb stole home the other day. Isn't that young fellow ever going to grow up?

Peterborough's Diamond Jubilee celebration plans are rapidly maturing. With the co-operation of the public generally a huge success is assured.

The Liquor Control Board is right in refusing to permit any form of liquor advertising. Controlling the sale rather than stimulating it should be the aim of the Board.

Judging by the comment of some of the United States newspapers, the title of "Sweet land of liberty" is being passed on to Ontario.

Saturday Evening Post styles Washington "Nobody's Capital." There is something wrong somewhere. Isn't Canada buying a considerable slice of it for the use of Mr. Massey?

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., April 21 (Canadian Press)—The only export business reported on the Montreal grain market yesterday was the sale of a few loads of wheat to the continent. The trade in cash grain in the domestic market was also quiet, but prices were firm.

The flour trade was dull and featureless, but prices for spring and winter wheat grades were unchanged.

The undertone to the millfeed market continued firm under a good demand for all lines. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was quiet but steady.

The demand for butter showed some improvement and prices were marked up a fraction. The receipts were 463 packages.

The cheese trade was without any new feature to note, the demand being quiet and prices ruled steady. The receipts were 154 boxes.

A moderate amount of business was worked in eggs and prices were well maintained. The receipts were 1,577 cases.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, April 21 (Canadian Press) — With weather conditions showing improvement and with the Liverpool market unresponsive to upturns here, wheat took a downward swing yesterday. Wheat closed unsettled, 1-4c to 7-8c net lower. Corn 1-8c to 1-2c to 5-8c down. Oats, unchanged to 1-2c off and provisions unchanged to a setback of 15 cents.

Corn sympathized with wheat weakness but was relatively firm as a result of continued delay to field work. Oats were steadied by reports that seeding is much behind schedule.

Action of hog values largely governed the provision of wheat.

QUESTIONS TIME.

Sporting Editor.

Dear Sir,—I noticed in your paper to-night (April 18th), where it said that an Indian boy had run from Lakefield to Peterboro, a distance of about 10 miles, in 39 minutes. I rather think there has been some mistake made in the time, when the record time for the one mile is held by Nurmi, in 4 minutes 10 2-5 seconds, made on a real track. That gives this Indian boy the mile inside 4 minutes, and to keep it up for 10 miles on a hard road, seems to me doing the impossible, although I feel sure this boy is a great runner. To my mind, if he can do 8 miles in 39 minutes, and that is a good bit short of 10 miles, we have not far to look for the Marathon winner at the Olympic Games in Amsterdam next year. Thanking you in advance for your valuable space.—Yours sincerely,

David Kerr.

CITY BUSINESS.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

In Saturday's issue of The Examiner I noticed a proclamation, signed by the citizens. Take the roads, cleaning up of the city. In Monday's issue I read where many prominent citizens are advocating the Mayor's sentiments. How splendid it would be if every citizen cleaned and painted up his property. However, all properties are not owned by te citizens. Take the roads, they come under the Council's jurisdiction and it is their place to see that these are kept in good condition. Why, Mr. Mayor, advocate the individual to clean up his house and yard when the city fails to keep the roads likewise.

The road on Sophia street from Rogers street to Armour road and Armour road to the C.P.R. tracks is the most neglected specimen of city road I have ever seen. Time and time again the Council has been asked to clean it up and still it is neglected. All citizens owning their homes along this road keep their houses in excellent condition.

Please Mr. Mayor and Council, take a look at this particular piece of property under your care, then act upon your own proclamation.

Sincerely,
RATEPAYER.

THE D.O.H. EXPLAINS.

Editor of The Examiner,
Peterboro.

Dear sir:

In reading over your report of yesterday's meeting of the Board of Health, it appears to me that some people might get a wrong impression of the attitude taken toward pasteurization by the Local M.O.H. and myself, in the matter of lessening of vitamine content. This lessening is confined to only one of the vitamines and care was taken by us to point out that from the practical standpoint, this lessening was of no importance. Adults and children who are taking other nourishment as well as milk, get plenty of this vitamine from other foods. Bottle fed babies have any deficiency of this vitamine easily made up by a daily spoonful of orange juice, tomato juice and many other easily available fruit juice, or a few drops of raw Cod Liver Oil.

The day is long past when any of the specialists, men of great experience in infant feeding, have had any objection to pasteurized milk on this ground. They are unanimous in recommending the use of pasteurized milk and their verdict is in fact, that it is a crime against child life to use any but pasteurized milk for bottle fed babies and young children.

The M.O.H. and myself desire to be fair and bring out points for and against. We admitted the decrease of this particular vitamine in pasteurization, but pointed out how easily this could be made up. Similarly we would be prepared to admit that cooking of raw meat lessens its vitamine content, yet we do not eat raw meat or recommend that such be done. Also we would admit that a horse can be driven along the road at night without a light, yet we do not go back to horse driven transportation, since automobile headlights overcome this deficiency.

N. H. SUTTON,

ACCIDENTAL DEATH.

VANCOUVER, B.C., April 21 (Canadian Press)—A verdict of accidental death, freeing the driver of the truck, Willis M. Buzzar, from all blame, was returned by the coroner's jury at the inquest held Tuesday into the fatal injury of six-year-old Mary Louise Ward here last Saturday. Buzzar was charged with manslaughter following the death of the girl.

THESE VEGETABLES USE WITH CAUTION!

In any large city of North America the markets afford a wide variety of salad vegetables, such as celery, lettuce, tomatoes, cucumbers, carrots, turnips, parsnips and beets. However, it is sometimes difficult to get these desirable greens, and one is forced to fall back on some which are not as good from a dietetic standpoint.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS may be used as a salad vegetable, but, being of the cabbage family, contain a large amount of Allylsulfid, which will produce excessive intestinal gas with most people.

CAULIFLOWER and CABBAGE contain the same gaseous material as Brussels sprouts, and should never be used in their cooked form. However, if used as an uncooked salad, some people are able to use a limited quantity without noticing any flatulence.

WATERCRESS is a spicy, salad vegetable which should always be used in combination with other vegetables, and not as a complete salad.

Never Use These Vegetables!

PICKLES are made from different foods and are prepared by soaking the food in some sour preparation, such as vinegar. Cucumbers so prepared are useless as a food, and will invariably cause digestive disorders.

RADISHES are irritating to the stomach and produce a great deal of stomach and intestinal distress by the excessive gas which they produce.

ONIONS, GARLIC, LEEKS and CHIVES are so highly recommended as a salad vegetable by most dietitians. My experience with thousands of patients has been that these vegetables always produce so much digestive disorder that they should never be used by anyone, at any time, either as a seasoning or as a principal dish at a meal. The smallest amount of garlic or onion which is put in to flavor a roast will bring on headaches, nausea, bad breath, and often violent diarrhea.

Those who have used onions from early childhood develop a certain adaptability; and are not injured as much by their use. However, I do not believe there is a place in the diet where these vegetables can be used, either in the cooked or raw state, without being productive of a great deal of harm.

"THAT'S THAT"

A pre-glimpse of the program of "That's That" is most intriguing. The opening is shrouded in deep mystery. It's a secret, and you are asked not to tell the plots to anyone, as it might take away a bit of the thrill which they are sure to experience, if they attend the performance and arrive on time.

The second item on the program is an ensemble, "Hay, Hay, Dumbells Fever." Then "Red" sings "Charlie, Take It Away". Morley and Freddie, as two Italians sing "Where Do You Work-a John?" "Jock" and Pat Rafferty have a spanking good act with "Jock" as the mother and Pat as the little boy. Ross and a trio of boys appear in a production number, "Coming Through the Cornfields." Al Plunkett sings "That's A Good Girl." The next item is a comedy sketch called "Mind Over Matter" with Pat Rafferty, Ross, Jock and Morley. After that Glenn does a dance number and "Red" and Ross stage a serio-comic wedding number. The next sketch is called "Accidents." In this "Red" appears as the Old Man, "Jock" as his wife, Pat Rafferty as his son, Glenn as the daughter, and Pat Harrington as "the lady from next door." After this sketch, Morley does a black-face monologue and the first act closes with the ensemble in a Negro Spirituelle.

The second act opens with the orchestra in a varied program devised to appeal to all classes of music lovers. In this act the famous "cow shed" trio, Red, Pat and Jimmy, sing "New Mown Hay" and Glenn dances the latest dance craze, "Black Bottom." The third act opens up with a "Child's Book of Proverbs." This is a highly entertaining novelty, in which every sentence spoken is an old proverb. Following this "Jock" does another impersonation of Beatrice Lilly—this time singing "Rough Stuff." Morley and Glenn stage another acrobatic dance that promises to surpass their feature dance in "Joy Bombs." "Red" and the two Pats have a newspaper trio.

The next number is one that will be remembered for years to come. Al Plunkett in his wonderful mother song, "Dreamland." "Red" follows on with "The Baby Looks Like Me." The next innovation is a comedy sketch by the three "girls", Ross, Jock and Glen. Pat Rafferty then sings a little song about "The Queen of the Carnival", Jimmy Devon has a snappy dance and Ross and Al. each offer a final song number.

"That's That" closes with an old fashioned square dance and fiddlers frolic.

AT THE REGENT.

STRONG, UNUSUAL SITUATIONS IN NEW F.B.O. DRAMA.

The lure of a woman hardened by life—the little coquettries which grim experiences have taught her will arouse the passions of men and lull their sense of danger—the touch of hand— the feel of clinging lips —all these are wielded by Mildred Harris playing the role of Lenore Hardenworth in F. B. O.'s "The Isle of Retribution," now showing at the Regent Theatre.

This adventuress, striving to lure Ned Cornet (Robert Frazer), the rich wastrel, into the net of her wiles, forgets him in a panic when their little party are cast upon the forbidding Arctic island and come under the brutal domination of Doomsdorf, the escaped Siberian convict. And realizing that her only hope of salvation lies in playing her feminine role with him, she begins to lure him on with all the evil power of which she is capable. Two crooked natures playing their respective parts upon each other in order to express their innermost desires... Doomsdorf, shouting and ruling with a high hand, gleeful in this unexpected opportunity to cow a band of frightened survivors; Lenore Hardenworth, relic of a decadent society, accustomed to seeing the light of passion flare up in men's eyes, softly stealing her insidious way beneath his iron exterior.

This unusual situation is just one of the minor motifs of a stupendous drama. Each element in the group cast away on that island is a deep study in psychology; and when Lenore is finally repulsed by the wary Doomsdorf, the triumph of suspicion over seduction is complete. It is a situation well worth seeing; it affords not only entertainment but firmly-rooted social study as well. Miss Harris and Mr. M'Laglen in the roles of Lenore and Doomsdorf are particularly to be recommended for their moving performances in "The Isle of Retribution."

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story.

By Howard R. Garis

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY'S BIG CABBAGE

Hopping around his garden one day, Uncle Wiggily saw, growing in a corner, a fine large cabbage. Oh, it was the greenest, largest and most wonderful cabbage the rabbit gentleman had ever seen.

"And it is all the more surprising to have a big cabbage so early in the year!" exclaimed Mr. Longears, his pink nose twinkling in delight. "I shall take it home to my wife. It will keep her from being lonesome while I am staying with Boppy, Um and the Wogglejigs in the bungleumpy."

Cabbages, you know, only get large and ready to eat in the summer and fall, except in warm countries. And in Woodland, where Uncle Wiggily lived, it was little more than spring. No wonder he was surprised to see so large a cabbage in his garden where he had only planted seeds a short time before.

"But the sun must have been shining extra warm on this cabbage, and the rain wet it just enough and the wind did not blow too coldly on it, so the cabbage has grown large much before its time," thought the bunny rabbit. "I shall pull it up and take it home to my wife."

Digging with his paws around the stump stem of the cabbage, where it was growing down in the earth, Uncle Wiggily loosened it and soon the big, green vegetable was ready to be taken to the rabbit's hollow stump bungalow.

But here some new trouble arose. The cabbage was so large that Mr. Longears could not pick it up to carry it, and he felt sorry, for he knew his wife and Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy would be very glad to get so fine a garden vegetable of which to make sauer kraut.

"Well," said the rabbit gentleman to himself, "there is more than one way to eat a lollypop. If I can't carry this cabbage I can roll it along like a hoop. In that way I'll be doing my wife a favor and I'll have some fun and maybe an adventure."

So Uncle Wiggily began to roll the cabbage along the ground as you might push a football. At first all went well, for it was down hill to the bungalow. But soon Mr. Longears reached a place where the hill went up instead of down and then it was not so easy to shove the big cabbage. He pushed and he grunted, but the cabbage would not go up the hill. Or, if it did roll up a little way, it soon rolled down again, and once it nearly rolled on Uncle Wiggily's teeny, weeny tail.

"Ha! That must never be!" cried the rabbit gentleman, whisking his tail out of the way just in time. "Dear me! What am I going to do?" he asked sadly. "I can't roll this big cabbage up the hill to my wife. Oh, dear. Such troubles as I have!"

All of a sudden there was a rustling in the bushes at the foot of the hill, and Uncle Wiggily jumped up, fearing he might be bitten by a Fox or Wolf. But out of the bushes walked the six little Wogglejig boys and girls. Gazie Mazie and Dazie, with their brothers, Dumple, Wumple and Bumple.

"What's the matter, Uncle Wiggily?" asked Wumple.

"I can't roll this big cabbage up the hill!" answered the bunny.

"We'll all help you!" offered Mazie.

The six Wogglejigs, being made of strong wood, all began to push at once on the cabbage, and slowly they rolled it up the hill.

"You follow along behind us, Uncle Wiggily," said Wumple. "And when we stop to rest you put a stone under the edge of the cabbage so it won't roll back down hill while we are getting our breaths back."

This the rabbit gentleman did. The Wogglejigs would push the big cabbage a few feet up the hill. Then, while they held it, Uncle Wiggily would put a stone back of it to keep the cabbage from rolling down again. In this way the cabbage was soon rolled to the top of the hill.

But all of a sudden, while they were all resting there, all of a sudden Dazie jumped up, ran to the cabbage, kicked the holding stone away and let the cabbage roll bumpity bump down the hill.

"Hey! What did you do that for?" cried Dumple.

"Look!" answered Dazie, pointing to the bottom of the hill and there Uncle Wiggily and the Wogglejigs saw the cabbage roll right over the Fox, knocking him flat as a pancake. "The Fox was sneaking up behind us to get Uncle Wiggily," explained Dazie, "so I thought I'd give him a little surprise."

"And you did, my dear. Ha! Ha! You did!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. The Fox ran away howling, for he was bruised and sore. Then the Wogglejigs rolled the cabbage up the hill once more and soon it was safe at the bunny's bungalow.

"MATINEE LADIES," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Bob Ward, college student, gets work as a dancing partner for rich women in a New Jersey roadhouse. At the Inn he meets the prettiest, sweetest girl he has ever laid eyes on—Sally, the cigarette girl. Reciprocating his interest, she warns him against the mysterious and beautiful Mrs. Hammond, habitue of the Inn, who finds her "thrill" in "hunting" Bob for her lovenest apartment. Bob, taking Sally home, finds Mrs. Smith hostile; and learns he has a rival.

Thus delivering herself of the news that the favored Tom Mannion was going to call on Sally, Mrs. Smith, with a brief nod toward Bob, turned and disappeared into the house.

Bob felt sorry for Sally—sorry for the flames in her cheeks. He tried to quench the latter with a genial, dissembling smile; but Sally was too deeply hurt, too close to the point of tears, to be readily consoled.

She insisted upon explaining away her mother's hostility;

"Mother's very strict, Bob. She really doesn't mean anything by seeming so cross, but she's so afraid I'll meet someone at the Inn who isn't—good for me!"

Which was nothing like what Mrs. Smith—who even now was concealed behind the curtain of the inner vestibule door, peeking and eavesdropping—really felt. Mrs. Smith's true concern was to get for Sally a man with money. As a mother, she was neither original, or even rare in this desire. But, perhaps, her efforts were a little cruder than the average.

Mrs. Smith had allowed Sally to take the job—encouraged and aided her, in fact!—at the Palisado because she felt that the opportunities there for the girl to meet a man with a great deal of money were good. But Sally had disappointed her!

"Yes, I do like him—as a friend."

Hon. Thomas Mannion, Esquire, was balm to Mrs. Smith, though. There was a man for you! A member of the neighborhood church to which Sally went, a member in excellent standing and influence of Tammany Hall, and an attorney of growing note. Still in his early thirties, and an important figure among the elect of the city's court and council chambers.

And madly in love with Sally Smith, whom he had met at a church social, and had rushed ever since. To Mrs. Smith's great delight—if not to Sally's.

All of which was why Mrs. Smith had had seven kinds of conniption fits when Sally came walking home with a young man whose penury shone from each wellworn elbow, from every hint of his overpressed and overold garmenture. That was why Mrs. Smith was sniffing behind the inner door now—the while she silenced the Smith boys with the waggle of a long, bony forefinger that was not to be lightly disobeyed; and the while her incandescent mind was making up a sarcastic barrage with which to ridicule and beat down Sally's interest in this poor looking fellow (if she had an interest in him) as soon as she had left him and entered the house.

Meanwhile, Bob and Sally were fidgetting through the third and longest of the awkward silences that had oppressed them since they reached the home steps.

Then Bob asked, hesitantly, diffidently—yet most anxiously;

"Sally, who is this Mr. Mannion, may I ask?"

Sally, who knew her mother's tricks of old, lowered her voice to a whisper and explained reluctantly; "Oh, just a man—a big lawyer and politician from Seventy-second Street—who has been calling around a good bit to see me. Mother likes him."

Bob's dreams were standing still. It was a far cry, from the quaint little flower girl of the gaudy Inn to a neighborhood belle of New York's middle West side. Bob, just a bit dizzy from trying to orient his reactions and his emotions, could not bring himself to think of Sally in any other way than as the dear little Dresden doll, as she had first burst upon his vision. He could not—or, at least, did not want to—level her to prosaic realism; to the matter-of-fact things of every day life.

Falling head over heels in love with her, in the impetuousity and glittering confidence of youth, it had never occurred to him that perhaps there was someone already established in her affections and company. Sally had looked just too virginal to be thought of as having beaux.

Had Bob just gone charging up an already crowded lane? Was there really not a dream ahead of him—was there, after all, only a social and financial difference between falling for Sally Smith and falling for Mrs. Hammond? Was there no idealism involved? Bob held his breath, and his heart almost stopped in its thumping, as he looked full and fearfully into her eyes and asked;

"Yes," she said in a low tone. "Yes, I do like him—as a friend. She saw the growing of a stricken look in Bob's eyes, and hastened to explain: "But I could never think of him in any other way than as a friend!"

"Is there any one else you could think of as—more than a friend?"

Now if anyone else had asked her that, any of the neighborhood boys, for instance, little Sally Smith would have banteringly retorted, "Wouldn't you like to know!"—or some equally pert remark. But with this big, handsome boy it was all so different from anything Sally had ever known. She felt, by the telepathy of love's sensitiveness, that she could safely be frank and self-revealing with Bob Ward. He inspired the truth. He inspired levity of spirits—but not of emotions. So little Sally Smith said very bravely:

"Yes!"

The precious twinkle in Sally's eyes told Bob that there was small cause for alarm in her admission, so far as he was concerned.

"How long have you known this—err-r-r person?" he asked with mock severity.

"Since about two-thirty this afternoon!" said little Sally Smith, so softly.

Her cheeks were pink with quickened blood, but her eyes shone fearlessly into his. For perhaps a full half-minute they just looked at each other, intoxicated by the miracle the glorious Spring afternoon had wrought. Then impulsively Bob chuckled, in that queer, rumbling, deep way of his; and thrust out a big hand, into the palm of which Sally's tiny one was gently engulfed.

"Goodbye, little Sally Smith!" he exclaimed light-heartedly. "I'll see you tomorrow, and we'll ride home together again—okay?"

"Okay!" she smiled.

And then she was gone—swallowed up into the gloomy hall behind the grilled door; exposed to the verbal assaults of her acidulous mother; harassed by the reflection that Bob Ward was not alone going to see her on the following day, as he had so blithely promised; but that he was also going to see Mrs. Hammond.

Meantime, Bob, too, had gone—down the steps and away up the street; beset by a gnawing uneasiness at the pit of his stomach because of the unfriendliness of Sally's mother; uncomfortable with the knowledge that there were other fellows with their eyes on Sally Smith. He had romantically thought that no drabness could touch the life of so gossamer a creature as little Sally Smith; he had thought that such as she could only be produced by an environment and kin of the finest sort. It was Bob's first collision with the natural law that ofttimes the fairest flower rears its lovely head from the meanest garbage heap. And he was rudely shocked. About Mannion he was not over-concerned. Such was the ego of his youth—and such was his trust in the assurances given to him by Sally's own unstained lips.

STOMACH TROUBLE GONE, BAKES 40 PIES

"I was a nervous wreck with stomach trouble. Had dizzy spells and could scarcely walk. I began taking Adlerika, and now I run a restaurant and bake 40 pies a day. When my friends ask how I do it, I tell them about Adlerika."—Mrs. L. Amrol.

Adlerika differs from most medicines because it acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel. It gives the system a REAL cleansing, and clears out old poisons which usually cause sour, gassy stomach, nervousness, sleeplessness, headache. Just ONE spoonful stops GAS, and relieves that full, bloated feeling so that you can eat better and sleep better. Even if bowels move daily, Adlerika brings out much additional poison which you never guessed was in your system and which may have long caused trouble. No matter what you have tried for stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you. At leading druggists. In Peterboro at McDermid & Jury and other druggists.

Human Salt Licks

Almost from the beginning of the world metallic salts have been appreciated as remedies in disease not only by man, but by the lower animals.

The buffaloes of North America or the guanacos of South America can be still seen to leave their grassy plains and rush in a body to the salt licks. "Salt licks" is a term given to places where the deer and other animals come to eat a certain soil containing earthy salts. They dig it up with their hoofs and eat it. This is very common in the backwoods, and hunters lie there in wait to shoot animals when they approach.

The craving in man for peculiar articles of diet indicates a similar natural instinct. Thus persons recovering from a long wasting illness such as fever, show very capricious appetites. Typhoid fever patients crave for salt ham, a salt herring, or salted meat. To the therapeutist this indicates a loss of chlorides in the system which nature seeks to make good.

Whenever a mineral spring with metallic salts in its water is found, patients crowd to it. But for every thousand persons who can afford to rush to these salt springs, or human salt licks, a million have to stay at home.

Modern science, however, has so brought it about that if the patient cannot go to the salt licks, the salt licks come to the patient. This is one of the principal reasons why Kruschen Salts has obtained so great a name for itself. It is a preparation containing in itself all the principal metallic salts found in Nature. It has not the crudeness of any one particular salt, but is an elegant combination of them all in proper quantity. It is a preparation with one further advantage, that it contains no gas and does not effervesce.

Kruschen Salts
Good Health for Half a Cent a Day

The dose to cover a ten cent piece every morning is found in practice just the right amount for a most invigorating daily tonic. The medicinal dose for persons suffering from pains of rheumatism and gout, or habitual constipation, with inactive liver, etc., is that given on the label of the bottle, viz., half to one teaspoonful in a tumbler of hot water before breakfast.

ECONOMY.—A 75c bottle of Kruschen Salts lasts nearly six months. Health and good spirits for half a cent a day. Get a bottle at your druggist's today, and start tomorrow.

REV. DR. CHOWN GIVEN PORTRAIT BY CHURCHMEN

MANY TRIBUTES.

The attitude of the United Church of Canada, Presbyterian, Congregationalist and Methodist alike towards Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown, whose efforts in no small degree contributed to its creation, was well expressed last night when young and old members gathered to do him honor at the Timothy Eaton Memorial Church, and to take part in the ceremony of unveiling a portrait painted by the well known Canadian artist, J. W. L. Forster. The function followed the annual banquet at which the young people of the city Presbyteries were the hosts of the superannuated and retired ministers. Leaders of the church, both in Toronto and farther afield, vied with one another during the evening in expressing their admiration for the former general superintendent of the old Methodist church, while Mrs. W. E. Ross of Hamilton, former president of the Methodist Women's Missionary Society, brought him a message of love and esteem from the women.

Presiding over this unique gathering was Sir William Hearst, former Premier of Ontario, who humorously claimed the right to be present on the ground that he was a minister who had been "emphatically retired" some years ago, though unfortunately not placed upon a superannuation allowance.

Rev. T. Albert Moore, general secretary of the United Church, was the first of the long line of speakers. He confined himself to reading a letter of tribute to Dr. Chown from Rev. S. P. Rose of Montreal, who was unable to be present, and who described the former superintendent as a sympathetic, sane and trusted leader. Dr. Moore himself declared that all over Canada he was able to hold the love and esteem of every minister of the United Church. Rev. George Pidgeon, first Moderator of the United Church, pointed to the many great movements in which Dr. Chown had been among the leaders. The Methodist Church, he declared, had been the leader in the movement for local option at the time when he was at its head, and the other churches had been content to follow in that lead. Then had come the great movement for the reunion of the Christain churches, and again Methodism and the "great leader of Methodism" had been to the fore. "When the story of the birth of the United Church is some time told," he declared, "the patience and Christian spirit of Canadian Methodism will be shown."

Other speakers during the evening who added their tribute were Rev. Dr. Isaac Tovell and Rev. W. H. Heartz, of Amherst, N.S.

"Education, missions, social and evangelistic work, national and church issues in Canada," declared Dr. Heartz, "have all felt the thrill and benefit of Dr. Chown in his long and fruitful ministry. We thank God to-night for a ministry with a practical result."

Dr. Chown himself spoke briefly in acknowledgment, declaring that whatever he might have been to the Church, the Church to him had been the source of many and great kindnesses and of ever widening opportunities.

The banquet was presided over by Wilfred G. Davidson and some 225 guests were present.

PORTRAIT PRESENTED

The ministers of the United Church of Canada at a special service in Eaton Memorial Church last night presented Rev. Samuel Dwight Chown, D.D., LL.D., with the above portrait of himself. The painting is from the brush of Mr. J. W. L. Forster and presents its distinguished subject as he is known to-day to many thousands of churchmen throughout Canada.

"AUNT SUSAN'S VISIT"

Splendid Play Presented at Bethany United Church.

NORHAM, April 21.— very successful play and concert was given in Bethany United church on Thursday evening by a number of the young people, assisted by talent from Wooler.

The title of the play was, "Aunt Susan's Visit," which is the story of a man who had been poor, but became wealthy and married a wife who was quite a society lady. The couple had two daughters, now young women, one in particular being like her mother. Aunt Susan was well-to-do, but very pious and old fashioned. She had been a special friend of the father of the home in the days of his boyhood. Aunt Susan was coming to visit the family and the one daughter and the mother rather disapproved of her company. Aunt Susan came, however, and exerted such an influence over the family and the people of the village that everyone grew to love her. On the evening before she took her leave, a number of the folk of the village gathered at the home of her nephew to bid her goodbye and thank her for the good she had done while in their midst. John Thomas and his society wife had started attending church, with many others as well, who were attracted by Aunt Susan's example.

Other numbers on the program were, a quartette, "The Old Wayside Cross" by Samuel Hazelwood, Albert Thompson, Daniel Hennsey and Albert Vanblaricom.

Duets by Miss Terrill and Miss McCall, "I Want To Go On My Own Honeymoon," and "Mrs. Hennsey's Christmas Cake."

Duets by Henry Farrow and Mr. Hubbs.

Recitation by Miss McCall.

A guitar and violin orchestra composed of Kenneth Ames, John Goodfellow and Mr. Morrow, furnished music between the acts of the play.

Following is a cast of the characters:

Aunt Susan—Ora Goodfellow;
John Thomas Tibbs, a nephew—Oscar Vanblaricom;
Mrs. John Thomas Tibbs—Mrs. Lloyd Ames;

Mr. Guy DeMarchimont Coggs—Lyle Carr;
Mrs. Johnston Highbon—Bernice Ames;
Mrs. Tuggs—Mrs. Oscar Vanblaricom;
Madam Pauline Wizar—Mina Ames;

The proceeds amounted to about $30.00.

PERFECT CRIME WAS FAILURE

Trial Now Going On of Mrs. Snyder For Killing Husband.

LOVER HELD.

NEW YORK, April 21.—(Associated Press).— Another "perfect crime" that failed, the slaying of Albert Synder, art editor of "Motor Boating", while he slept in his Queens Village home on the morning of March 20, brought to trial his wife, Mrs. Ruth Snyder and her confessed paramour, Henry Judd Gray, on first degree murder charges.

Mrs. Snyder has been the center of attention since her arrest the day following the murder. She assumed the role of the misunderstood wife, married to a man many years her senior, who had tastes totally different from her own. Discord, she said, forced her to look elsewhere for happiness.

Gray, a corset salesman, with a wife and ten-year-old daughter, was a man of society in his home in East Orange, N.J. So sterling was his character believed to be that members of his family and friends refused to believe his guilt until they heard it from his own lips.

On the eve of the murder Snyder and his wife attended a card party at the home of friends. "Tommy", as Mrs. Snyder was known to her intimates, saw that her husband drank plenty of liquor, "to make him feel good" as she later confessed to the police.

When they got home Mrs. Snyder put him to bed. He was partly deaf and she took good care that his "good ear" lay on the pillow.

Some hours later the couple's nine-year-old daughter Lorraine found her father dead. He had been beaten, chloroformed, and his body bound to the bed with picture wire. In an adjoining room, Mrs. Snyder also had been bound. The house was in great disorder from top to bottom.

Mrs. Snyder told the police a man of giant stature had forced his way into the home and had killed her husband and had beaten her.

Detectives were suspicious from the start. In their attempt to accomplish the perfect crime the slayers had been too thorough. They had ransacked the kitchen.

"There is something wrong here", said the officers. "Regular murderers don't work that way. They wouldn't bother the kitchen."

There was no evidence of the head injury which Mrs. Snyder claimed the murderer had inflicted. Soon the jewels which she said had been stolen were found under a mattress. Other things were found to contradict her story.

After hours of questioning Mrs. Snyder confessed. She admitted an intimacy with Gray and said that he had hidden in the house until they returned from the party. After she had put Snyder to bed she and Gray committed the crime together.

Gray was detained by police in Syracuse. At first, he stoutly denied any connection with the murder. He had what seemed to be an airtight alibi. Clerks in the hotel where he was stopping remembered that he had called from his room about the time he would have been in Queens Village if he had committed the murder. His bed was rumpled as if he had slept there the night of the crime.

Police brought Gray to New York for further questioning. After hours of steady denial he suddenly confessed his part in the slaying. He told how he had struck Snyder over the head with a window sash-weight while Mrs. Snyder looked on.

Although he had confessed, police were not satisfied until they explained his alibi. Haddon Gray, a Syracuse friend with whose two children Gray shot marbles on the night following the murder, was brought to New York. He had substantiated Gray's story of his Syracuse movements. Taken before the Queens County Grand Jury he admitted that he had aided Gray prepare his alibi in the belief that he was helping him keep from his wife knowledge of an engagement with a woman friend. He admitted that it was he who had impersonated Gray in calling from his hotel room and had otherwise aided the hoax.

Both Gray and Mrs. Snyder repudiated their confession when brought into court, claiming they were made under duress. The love that had joined them in the killing seemed to have cooled in the several days they had been in prison for they did not speak to each other in court. They blamed each other for their plight.

One theory advanced for the motive was that Mrs. Snyder expected to collect her husband's $52,000 insurance policy, and then flee with Gray.

Another possible motive advanced by the police was that Snyder had learned of their intimacy and that they had killed him on this account.

A bottle of liquor containing bichloride of mercury was found in Gray's possession on the train trip from Syracuse. It was later revealed that he had attempted to take a drink of it on the trip, telling officers that it was cough medicine.

STAGE PLAY AT BENSFORT

"Cranberry Corners" Presented By W.M.S. of Bensfort United Church.

PACKED AUDIENCE.

BAILIEBORO, Ont., April 21.—The W.M.S. of Bensfort United church staged their play entitled "Cranberry Corners" in the Sunday school hall at Bensfort on Thursday evening. The hall was packed to capacity and several car-loads who came late had to turn away as the hall would not accommodate the large crowd.

The play was a thrilling one throughout, and the attentive audience were well entertained for two hours and a half.

The story of the play was—a farmer's son, Tom Dexter, falls in love with a pretty girl from the city, Carlotta Banister, who is spending her summer vacation at Cranberry Corners. Tom lives with his father, Andrew Dexter, and his old maid, Aunt, Miss Dexter; both his father and aunt do their best to discourage the love affair because they feel that although Carlotta is a very lovable girl, that Tom is not in a position to marry a girl who has been used to wealth.

Carlotta's rich aunt, Anstacia Banister, gets wise to the fact that her niece is carrying on a flirtation with the farmer's son, and she comes in great haste to visit her cousin at Cranberry Corners, Miss Muslin coming with the intentions of breaking up the match etween Tom and Carlotta.

During her stay at Cranberry Corners a tramp happens along to Tom's home, and it is afterwards discovered that the unfortunate man, Ben Nathan, who is actually Fredric Banister, is in truth Carlotta's father whom Carlotta believes dead. Nathan tries to see his daughter, but Anstacia Banister turns him away without seeing her and threatens that if he does see her, and tells her his story of serving fifteen years in prison it will ruin Carlotta's life. She then takes her niece back to New York when she learns her brother-in-law to be free from prison. Sidney Everet, a New York broker, who has Mrs. Banister in his power, is forcing her to make Carlotta marry him against her will, as she really loves Tom. Finally, just as she is about to marry the man of the world, whom she despises, her father comes with proof that he served fifteen years, an innocent man, for the crime committed by his brother, Anstacia Banister's dead husband, but before he could see his daughter, Sidney Everett comes from behind him and snatches the proof and destroys it. He leaves the house and even Tom, who has accompanied him cannot find where he has gone. Tom returns home broken-hearted because he has lost the girl he loved.

A few days later Fredric Banister returns to Cranberry Corners with him his daughter, Carlotta, and tells his story to all who have assembled at the Dexter home, of how he was staying at a fashionable hotel fifteen years previously in the adjoining room was his brother, and his wife Anstacia Banister, while next to their room Sidney Everett was occupying a suite of rooms. In a rage, his brother had fought with a companion and, during the fight, had killed the man. Fredric ran from his room into the room where the murder had been committed, and in his excitement picked up the smoking pistol. Anstacia to clear her husband and secure the Banister wealth, swore that Fredric had committed the crime and he was sent to prison. Carlotta was adopted by her aunt and uncle, and made to believe her father had died.

He then gives his daughter to Tom in marriage. Hezekiah Hopkins, a neighbour, Bella Ann, the hired girl and Nathan Speck, the hired man, added much to the humour of the play especially when Hezikiah and Miss Muslin get married and go to New York on their honeymoon, and Bella Ann and Nathan decide to get hitched up, as Miss Muslin would say "so to say."

Florine, the maid in Mrs. Banister's city home also took an active part. The heated arguments on politics between Andrew and Hezekiah also caused much merriment.

The cast of characters was as follows: Tom Dexter, Clifford Emberson; Andrew Dexter, Tom's father, Fredric Patten; Hezekiah Hopkins, a neighbour, Edmund Dawson; Nathan Speck, a hired man, John Harvey; Sidney Everett, of New York, Ross Moncrief; Fredric Banister (alias Ben Nathan), Reg. Perrin; Carlotta Banister, Mrs. Fer. Perrin; Anstacia Banister, Mrs. James Lang, Miss Dexter, Mrs. Stewart Thompson; Miss Muslin, Mrs. Frank Morrison; Bella Ann, Mrs. Wm. Walters; Florine, Mrs. Wm. Dawson.

The musical numbers between acts were provided by the Bensfort orchestra, composed of Mrs. Lawrence Tinnie, Messrs. F. Buckham, L. Finnie, W. C. Wood, Jim Wood.

The play was exceptionally well given, and each of the four acts were heartily applauded.

The door receipts amounted to seventy-five dollars.

THAT is the verdict of an extensive inquiry recently conducted among practising physicians. We found that 8 doctors out of 10 recommended the Nujol type of treatment. We found seven out of ten thought laxatives and cathartics harmful if used frequently.

Here are typical statements made by doctors. "Preferable to laxatives because it does not cause patients any pain or discomfort." "Not habit-forming." "Now recognized by all physicians to be honest because it is not absorbed." "Ordinary laxatives are too drastic in reaction, too exhausting." "Helps to establish habit-time." "Is a rational corrective for constipation."

Doctors Advise Nujol

Eight doctors out of every ten told us they were advising the Nujol type of treatment for their patients in place of laxatives—and for these reasons:

1. Nujol is not habit-forming.
2. A more natural method.
3. A lubricant is better than a laxative.
4. Does not gripe.
5. Is not irritating.
6. Nujol gives lasting relief.

Unlike Laxatives

Laxatives and cathartics act by irritating the intestinal tract. They cause the bowels to frantically expel the contents of the intestines and thus rid the system of the drugs that pills and potions contain.

Nujol acts entirely differently. It contains no drugs, no medicine. Its action is mechanical. It merely softens the dried waste matter in the intestines and lubricates the passage so that the muscles of the bowels can expel the waste matter regularly, naturally and thoroughly.

Nature-given Remedy

Nujol appeals to the medical man because it is a simple, scientific and safe remedy for constipation, no matter how severe the case may be. It is gentle in its action and pleasant to take. Children love it!

Get a bottle of Nujol from your druggist today. Doctors advise it for constipation, whether chronic or temporary. Avoid substitutes.

"You will be as enthusiastic as I am when you try Quaker Cake Flour"

WHO does not enjoy good cake? Who is not proud to make good cake? Who does not exclaim delight when cake is especially good?

Cake-baking is an art. Every good cake-baker takes delight in it. Never have I had more pleasure in cake-baking than with Quaker Cake Flour.

You will be as enthusiastic as I am when you try this new Cake Flour. You will find it easy and simple to use. You will have no fear of baking failures. You may use it with your own recipes or with those printed on the package. Your cakes will be at once the delight and envy of your friends.

Made from the hearts of the best ONTARIO winter wheat, Quaker Cake Flour is ground to surprising fineness and sifted many times through silken cloth. With it is mixed a portion of high-grade potato flour.

Thus it makes cakes of surprising lightness and fine texture, which keep fresh for days and days. Its very delicacy is a background for the fine flavours of the other ingredients. It is not a self-rising flour. Use it the same as ordinary flour, only use less for each cake.

Try Quaker Cake Flour. Then you will be just as enthusiastic about it as I am.

Many of my friends have baked with Quaker Cake Flour. All are unanimous in this verdict—"at last we have a cake flour superior to all others, which is made by a Canadian miller and, best of all, from Canadian wheat."

HANGED TO-DAY.

KINGSTON, Ont., April 21—Thomas McCoskey, Russian, convicted slayer of guard M. E. Jenkins, of Portsmouth Penitentiary, paid the penalty of his crime at seven minutes past twelve o'clock this morning when he was hanged at the county jail. The execution was one of the fastest on record. only thirteen seconds elapsing from the time McCoskey left his cell until the trap was sprung. He was pronounced dead eleven minutes later. McCoskey walked with a steady step until about twenty feet from the scaffold when he waivered and it required the assistance of two warders to place him on the gallows. Rev. Maxim Chawrink, Ukrainian Anglican clergyman, of Welland, attended the condemned man. When the rope had been adjusted around McCoskey's neck the clergyman started to recite the Lord's Prayer and hangman Ellis pulled the lever sending the Russian to his death.

Before going to his death McCoskey thanked the guards who had attended him.

On August 28, 1926, he killed Guard Jenkins by striking him over the head with a crowbar.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 21.—On Wednesday, April 19, 1876, at Petherick's Corners, by the Rev. Mr. Wilkinson, of the Blairton Methodist Church, Ann, youngest daughter of Gilbert Wright, to Daniel Petherick, son of John Petherick of Rush Point.

Relatives of the bride, to the number of 72, met at the home of Mr. Samuel Wright, her only brother, to celebrate the fifty-first anniversary of this happy event. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. David Brunton, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Atkinson, who were the bridesmaid and groomsman and were the only guests who were present at the marriage ceremony. They also constitute the complete family of the late Gilbert Wright. The youngest member will, in January next, celebrate her seventieth birthday. Lunch was then served by Miss S. Wright, assisted by the grand nieces and nephews present. A three-storey wedding cake, presented by the bride's sister, Mrs. Brunton, who also baked the wedding cake of 51 years ago, was cut by the bride. The remainder of the evening was spent in contests and was brought to a happy close by singing "Blest be the tie that binds."

Deloro Boy Scout News

MARMORA, April 21—On Saturday afternoon Scouts Fred Callery, Gordon Stewart, Dan Paquet and Jack McInroy with the Scoutmaster were over the rocks to start work on the week-end camp. The camp is on the first range of rocks, with a steep slope from the west, on the north it drops down to a creek, on the east the rocks drop away in small cliff forms an dit is under the shelter of one of these that the camp is to be built.

When the camp was reached it was found that one of the fires which had been burning for the previous two days was threatening a patch of trees nearby, needed for building the camp, and although the camp site itself was in no danger, being away from the woods fairly well, it was decided to check the fire if possible, and after two hours hard work the boys managed to kill the blaze for a stretch of about a quarter of a mile to the east.

The wind blowing from the south helped quite a bit and a rain coming that night killed all fires remaining to the north.

The programme for the Tuesday night meeting was a First Aid competition, semaphore signalling, some games and a sham battle, finishing up with some songs, around the Council Fire.

Next Saturday the troop will try and complete the week-end camp and have it ready for a hike over the week-end early in May.

A report of the Ladies' Aid told of work done. Among other things the whole one hundred and fifty dollars for putting a steel roof on the shed was paid.

Women's Institute.

On Thursday afternoon there was a good attendance at the Women's Institute. The summer series lectures will be here on June 15. A great many library books are out. Will all who hav ebooks please return them at the annual (next) meeting to be held on May the twelfth Will the teachers whose pupils exhibit at the Warsaw School Fair, kindly send suggestions for the Institute School Fair Prizes to the secretary, Mrs. Theodore Douglas, before the May meeting.

A committee, Mesdames T. H. Crowe, Geo Weller and J. Cooper, was appointed to try to have one evening of music during the Music Week, the first week in May.

An invitation from the Peterborough Local Council of Women, through the president, Mrs. Edwards, was read, inviting the women of the Institute and all women of the community to attend a lecture to be given in the G.W.V.A. Hall, Murray street, Peterborough, on Thursday afternoon, April the twenty-first. Miss Preston will give a talk on methods of using and preserving our home-grown fruits and vegetables. The farm women, especially should be interested in this.

"Power of Women."

Rev. H. B. Herrington gave a talk on the "Power of Women." It was a strong plea for women always to be and do their best, and to keep high ideals, for it is they who really control. Among other things he mentioned that man's power was more physical, woman has the surer instinct; man has to reason; woman has power to command man's strength. Man is head of the home. It is his to provide and protect, and he will do it gladly for love's sake. Man's decisions are influenced by woman, and women can generally get their own way.

He asked if women are using this God-given power as a sacred trust. Great writers always have heroines. Men who have risen to great levels have always had the influence of some good woman. That same influence may be and sometimes is, used to degrade. Women, using their best efforts to make the community better, can do much to have clean amusements, better homes, homes that reflect God. If women only fully realized the great power they have they would perhaps use it to greater advantage.

As a man he came to appeal for help for men that they might be enabled to live more nobly.

IT PAYS TO SAVE

KANSAS CITY, April 21.—Two weary "knights of the road" trudged along toward Kansas City berating the unkind fates that had left them without a dime or a meal in two days. Then they saw two high school boys struggling in the waters of a flooded creek, jumped in, saved them. Kansas City, appreciative, said it with $300, watches, clothing, food and offers of good jobs. But the pair moved on, accepting free bus transportation to St. Louis.

PNEUMONIA KILLS BIRDS

WATERTOWN, S.C., April 21.—A sudden change of temperature and humidity was ascribed by scientists as the cause of the deaths of thousands of migratory birds that fell from the sky here. Naturalists said the fowl contracted bronchial trouble much like pneumonia. Many that stopped to rest in trees fell to the ground a few minutes later.

DRESS
By MARY MARSHALL

White crepe georgette with lace is used here to make a frock showing the new compromise hemline that is quite short and at the same time rather long.

It is quite possible now to make a short skirt look long or a long skirt look short. It is, in fact, decidedly an era of compromises so far as fashion is concerned and instead of going from one extreme of fashion to another as has been done in other times, dressmakers go about their business of changing fashions with the utmost diplomacy. Women are too well satisfied with clothes as they are to accept, knowingly, any radical change. The skirt that is actually long meets with disapproval, but the compromise skirt long here and short there—is acceptable.

There are skirts with drapery so introduced that they are short at the back with points at the sides toward the front—there are skirts short all around with drapery at the front that suggests a skimpy little apron hanging at the front well below the normal hemline. There are skirts quite long at the back, and short at the front, and there are draped skirts long at one side and short at the other. Then there are frocks of georgette or chiffon made with short foundations and four or five deep points. Frocks of fine transparent materials are made with fairly long skirts worn over quite short slips. In these you have the gracefulness and coquetry of the long skirt with the smartness and chic of the short skirt.

There never was a time when fashions have shown such wide variety. You can find two frocks in the same wardrobe that look as if they belonged to two remote fashion epochs far removed from each other. For sports and practical daytime wear the fairly short, straight-line frock with straight, plain sleeves is still the usual choice. For afternoon an entirely different silhouette may be chosen and for evening you may have bouffant frocks with wide skirts and closely moulded bodices or slinky little draped frocks of an entirely different outline.

SAINT and SINNER
By ANNE AUSTIN

"You had no further conversation with him, other than that which you have testified to?" Banning prodded, as if dissatisfied with his witness.

"No, sir, except maybe about the weather. It was snowing, and I believe I said something about it's being a bad night for a long trip. But Mr. Wiley didn't answer, and when he started his engine to drive away I called out 'good night' and Mr. Wiley said 'good night' and Miss Cherry leaned across Mr. Wiley to wave at me and to call out 'good night. That's all." The witness seemed very glad indeed that that was all.

"Your witness," Banning curtly informed Churchill.

"No questions," Churchill surprised everyone by saying, with a dismissing wave of the hand.

"Call the Reverend Henry Bates," Banning directed.

When the gray-haired preacher, blinking pale blue eyes behind gold-rimmed spectacles, took the stand, he made an old-fashioned, courtly bow toward Cherry, who smiled and greeted him with a flutter of her tiny hand. Banning scowled at this bit of by-play, but the reporters "ate it up," and the jury smiled in sympathy.

"Your name?" Banning began the examination curtly.

"Your occupation?"

"I am the pastor of the First Baptist Church of Minturn, Marlboro County."

"Are you acquainted with the defendant, Cherry Lane Wiley?"

"I am."

"To what extent and under what circumstances?" Banning asked.

"I officiated at her marriage on the evening of November 25, last, to Christopher Wiley," Bates answered, in his gentle, deprecating voice.

"Will you tell the jury, as nearly as you can remember, the exact events of the evening, as they concern this defendant?"

"On Thanksgiving evening, at five minutes after ten—" Bates began.

"How do you fix the hour, Mr. Bates?"

"Ten o'clock is the retiring hour for my family. On that evening, I glanced at the living room clock, saw that it was three minutes to ten, informed my wife and daughter of the hour, and they immediately retired to their rooms." A smile spread over the faces of the reporters, the jury and the audience, for the gentle old preacher did not look the part of the stern disciplinarian which his words painted.

"Did you follow them at once?" Banning prompted him.

"I did not. I was locking windows in the living room, after having bolted the kitchen door and stoked the furnace, when I heard a car drive up an stop. A minute or so later there was a knock on the door and I admitted Miss Lane and Mr. Wiley."

"Did you know their names before they introduced themselves?" Banning asked.

"I did not."

"You were surprised, Mr. Bates? You had seen the newspaper accounts of the approaching marriage of Miss Lane to Mr. Ralph Winston Cluny?"

"Yes, to both questions," Bates answered, with the precision of an old man.

"Did you make an effort to dissuade the eloping couple from their purpose?" Banning asked. "If so, give your words and the answers of the defendant and Mr. Wiley."

Everyone in the courtroom knew that it was a significant question and every ear was strained for the gentle old man's answer.

"I cannot remember my own words with absolute clearness, but I can give the gist of my remarks, and I believe I can tell with fair accuracy just what the young lady answered." Bates replied hesitatingly, with a glance of sorrowful kindliness toward Cherry, who smiled at him reassuringly.

"Do the best you can, Mr. Bates," Banning encouraged him.

"I asked the young lady if she had given due thought and consideration to the step she was about to take. Mr. Wiley interrupted with some heat—or I believe I can quote his words, 'We are both of age, Mr. Bates, and the license is entirely legal, I assure you. A marriage license is good for six months in this state.' I turned back to the young lady, put my arm across her shoulders, and spoke to her as a father, with her best interest at heart. I said, in substance, 'My dear child, have you considered that you are about to cause a great deal of grief, not only to your mother and father, but to the man to whom you have given your promise and who is even now waiting at the church for his bride?'"

"And just what did Miss Cherry answer, Mr. Bates?" Banning asked, with evident relish for the expected reply.

"She burst into tears; indeed, I could see that she had been crying before her arrival at my house, and between sobs she said, 'He isn't waiting at the church. I've told him I won't marry him, and I won't. I'd rather die! Oh, Mr. Bates, he's so old, so old! I've just told him that I won't marry him. He knows. He understands now. Oh, I didn't mean to hurt him, but he understands'." There was nothing else then for me to do but to perform the ceremony, which I did, calling my wife and daughter, who dressed hurriedly, to act as witnesses."

"You are sure, Mr. Bates, that Miss Cherry said, 'I didn't mean to hurt him,' that those were her exact words?" Banning repeated the significant words impressively.

"Those were her words, but she referred to a hurt of the heart, not—"

"Please confine your answers to the questions asked, Mr. Bates," Banning instructed him curtly. "Now Mr. Bates, will you tell this jury whether Miss Cherry's manner was that of a happy bride or of a frightened—"

Churchill's violently stated objection, on the ground that the district attorney was "leading" the witness, was sustained and Banning rephrased his question:

"Describe the emotional conduct of the defendant before, during and after the ceremony, Mr. Bates, repeating such conversation as seems to have a bearing on this case." Banning instructed the preacher.

"The little lady was overwrought, nervous, tearful, until I began to read the marriage ceremony. As I proceeded, she brightened noticeably."

"Did the newly married couple leave immediately?" Banning asked.

"My wife asked them to stay a few minutes and to allow us to drink their health in new cider, but Mr. Wiley seemed anxious to be away. He asked if there was a farmhouse where they could be accommodated for the night, adding that they intended to drive on to Chicago the next day for their honeymoon. I referred them to a farmer, named Anderson—Jefferson Anderson—who lives about a mile west of my home on the outskirts of Minturn, and then I went to their car with them to bid them good-bye and good luck. Miss Cherry was in good spirits as the car drove away."

Banning looked not at all pleased with the preacher's last sentence, but there was nothing he could do about it. Rather sourly he put his next question:

"Now, Mr. Bates, when and under what circumstances did you next see the defendant?"

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

FRIDAY, APRIL 22, 1927.

This is an uncertain day, according to astrology, which finds that certain adverse planetary influences are strong.

The direction of the stars apparently forwards the interests of all who enjoy power or prosperity, while it thwarts efforts on the part of less fortunate persons.

Under this sway minds will be alert and there will be much seeking of intellectual or spiritual comfort.

New teachers of religion and philosophy may be expected to appear, for many will present segments of truth for the healing of nations.

There is an encouraging sign for those who seek employment, but the star favor most those who work with their hands.

The outlook for world peace today may be gloomy, for there are menacing signs that appear to warn the nation to be on its guard.

The seers prophesy for the United States such access of international influence that it will be the foremost of all the world powers within a quarter of a century.

It is well to beware of entrance into any sort of a quarrel today, which is threatening to domestic peace.

With all the seething of troubles in the Orient good is to result, astrologers foretell, for China is to be of great importance to the United States.

Chicago is to profit greatly from some sort of a condition that affects New York City, if the stars are wisely interpreted.

Mars rising is to add new international problems that will give the government at Washington a chance to demonstrate real diplomacy, it is prognosticated.

Persons whose birthdate it is should push their affairs all through the year and should be especially careful to avoid scandal.

Children born on this day have the augury of happy, prosperous lives, but they will arouse envy.

CLEAN-UP LESSON NO. 2.

There must be millions of cuss words squandered every year by people who can't find things. We are all familiar with the sensation experienced when one puts down a certain object, turns around once or twice, then finds it gone. And so many things that are really necessary to the comfort of the home have a crass habit of disappearing at unpleasant moments. Whisks, and tooth-brushes, scissors and needles; and collar-buttons, like the lost one in the picture, all have this propensity. Of course, it isn't often that one goes to the door-yard to retrieve the lost, strayed and stolen, but the energetic gentleman who has been laboring with his spade until bright noon-day has the reward of his labors in the treasure-trove he has unearthed.

If you want to find that lost receipt, or that important letter you forgot to answer, or the tie-pin you got last Christmas and have been unable to locate ever since, clean up those old desks and drawers, and when you do so, throw away a lot of the junk you find there.

DAWN OF WOMANHOOD.

A Time of Difficulties When Watchfulness is Needed.

Some girls upon the threshold of womanhood drift into decline in spite of all care and attention. Even strong and usually lively girls become weak, depressed and irritable, and listless. It is the dawn of womanhood—most important in the life of every girl—and prompt measures should be taken to keep the blood rich and pure. If your blood is not in a healthy condition at this stage, the body becomes ill-nourished and other ailments develop. If the health is not maintained by a sufficiency of rich, red blood, all sorts of weaknesses are likely to arise. Remember this, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have saved thousands of girls and women from being life-long invalids, because of their wonderful blood-making qualities.

The value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to young women whose health was failing has been proved over and over again. These pills are the most reliable blood builder, fortifying weak nerves and creating a liberal supply of red healthy blood which a girl needs to sustain her strength.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WRECKED PLANE TAKEN FROM ICE

Will Be Saved Unless Wind Shifts Temiskaming Floes.

HAILEYBURY, Ont., April 21.—A strong off-shore wind blowing up suddenly and with considerable strength, has opened a channel in the ice about a half mile wide along the Ontario side of Lake Temiskaming and the prospects are that the lake will be clear within 48 hours. The northeast arm is already free of ice and there is an open channel far to the south of the town.

The unexpected over night change in conditions had the effect of releasing the wrecked airplane of Patricia Airways, which has now been hauled on to the pontoons and efforts are being made to haul it to shore. This work is being hindered because no power boat is available for towing purposes.

The plane will be save unless a change in the wind brings back the ice.

Thousands of people who find their hair coming out badly try various advertised hair tonics and hair growers without results and finally resign themselves to baldness and its attendant discomfort. Yet their case is not hopeless. The following simple home prescription in many instances has made hair grow again after years of partial baldness and almost instantly stops dandruff and further loss of hair. It will not make the hair dry or greasy, is pleasant and easy to use, inexpensive and can be put up in a few moments by any good druggist. Bay Rum, 6 oz. Lavona de Composee, 2 oz. Menthol Crystals, one-half drachm. Add a little of your favorite perfume, if you desire. This preparation is absolutely harmless, but highly effective. Allen Boudria, engineer, or 432 St. Patrick St., is one of Ottawa's best known citizens. "My purpose in telling the facts of my experience," he said, "is to help others who suffer as I did.

"For five years I was in misery. My whole system seemed out of gear, but my stomach troubled most. Even a drink of cold water would cause my stomach to bloat and swell abnormally. Gas would prevent me from sleeping at night so that I had to get up and walk the floor for hours. Violent stomach pains nearly drove me wild. I've seen times when I was doubled over, unable to straighten up.

"My friend M. Lapointe told me how Tanlac had helped him out of similar trouble, so I got some and used 9 bottles in all. It just made me over. I feel 30 years younger than I am, and weigh 214 lbs. My appetite and sleep are both fine. I eat what I like and sleep like a top. Tanlac and nothing else, made this great change. I'm for Tanlac."

SAFEGUARDING MILK

BY PASTEURIZATION

Dr. Herman Biggs, formerly Medical Officer of Health of New York City, and later Commissioner of Health of New York State, in 1910 made some investigations in connection with certain outbreaks of typhoid fever in New York City, presumably from their milk supply. He was able to trace several of these outbreaks to the milk supply. The striking feature of these cases was that they were not traceable to any acute cases, or cases of recent development, but were all traced to chronic carriers who had suffered from the disease years before. These cases were only verified after excluding every other source and then making a bacteriological examination of the excretions from the bowels and also of the urine of the suspected producers and dealers.

In one instance of an extensive outbreak, it was traced to a carrier who had suffered from typhoid fever forty-six years before. His stools were found still to contain an enormous number of virulent bacilli. As Dr. Biggs points out, when you add to this danger that of other communicable diseases, it is apparent that no system of inspection, no matter how well organized, could possibly detect these cases. To make such an intensive investigation of a city's complete milk supply, such as Dr. Biggs made in these few cases, would be as impossible as it would be unwarranted. Obviously then the only safety lies in some method of treating milk that will render the entire supply safe at all times. This method is pasteurization.

It was on these findings, together with the information already in the possession of the Board of Health of New York that they decided to pass an Ordinance in 1912, requiring all milk not coming from cattle free from tuberculosis, as determined by the tuberculin test, and not produced under conditions necessary for the production of a certified milk, to be scientifically pasteurized. This Ordinance was not rigidly enforced until 1914, but it is of interest to note the following extract taken from the Weekly Bulletin of the Department of Health of New York City, June 6th, 1914.

CINDERELLA

(By Jeanette.)

The production of the comic opera, "Cinderella," at the Grand Opera House last night, was a decided success from every point of view. Every seat in the house, including the boxes, was taken, with a goodly number in the upper balcony, making a total attendance of nearly nine hundred people. The production, of pleasing length, was presented in a very professional manner, and won continued applause from an interested audience. The Asburnham Women's Patriotic League, under whose auspices "Cinderella" was staged, and Mrs. A. A. Perrin, who directed the production, are to be congratulated on the success of their venture, while those taking part, both principals and chorus, gave a performance that was well up to the highest standard of amateur presentations in the city. Mrs. Perrin was assisted througout the entire production and practices by Miss Margaret McCabe, whose careful and capable help did much toward its success.

The settings contrived, considering the limitations imposed by lack suitable scenery at the Grand Opera House, were very good, while the lighting effects used were very artistic and the costumes were beautiful. The latter showed just how much careful attention had been paid to detail in preparing the gowns for the principals and chorus, being extremely effective. The music also, with Miss Florence Gladman at the piano, added immensely to the general attraction of the production.

Mrs. Perrin made a very handsome Prince Charming, wearing a white satin suit with glittering silver embroidery, her small head done in a close boyish coiffure that gave it a very smart appearance. Her delineation of the romance-seeking sprig of royalty was really professional in type, giving an atmosphere of gay grace to the part that elicited much applause from the audience. The court costume of green satin in which the Prince appears in the final act was admirably suite to the debonnair figure, with its charming ease in posture and gesture.

Miss Mathilde Masson was exceptionally dainty in the role of Cinderella, giving an appealing atmosphere to the portrayal of the patient little sister, and making a lovely picture as the transformed beauty of the ballroom scene and the finale of the the last act. Although Cinderella has not much to say during the progress of the play, she is the dominating figure at all times, and Miss Masson left noting to be desired in her graceful delineation of the role. The white satin which was used in Cinderella's court costume, with filmy lace as a panel and a chaplet of pearls for her hair, made an exquisite frame for the graceful small figure.

Miss Geraldine Collins was really stunning as the Fairy Godmother. The appearance of the beautiful friend of the ill-used maiden was greeted with applause and her sweet presentation of the part of the benign fairy was one of the outstanding portions of the production. Miss Collins was wonderfully robed in brilliantly studded palest blue georgette, with floating, pointed panels and veil, tall, star-tipped wand and glistening ornament in her hair, with the upstanding, butterfly antennae of the real fairy of the old story-book tales.

The two cruel sisters, Patience and Charity, were taken in screamingly funny style by Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland and Miss Annie Crocker. They were extraordinarily good in their parts, entering into them with an astonishing degree of energy that brought out every bit of the comedy in the roles. They left no detail overlooked, either in costuming (which was carried out in the role of the vixenish Patience with an eye to vertical effects, and in the role of the slightly milder-tongued Charity with an impression of horizontal puffiness), or in dialogue, to give an effect of professional presentation to the two parts. Their conversation and appearance and even walk, all added to the total effect, which was watched with attention by the audience, and responded to with repeated applause after every effort of the pair. In panniered gowns of ugly design, with flowered petticoats and white wigs, they added much to the general excellence of the piece, doing their best with song and poetry, to win the Prince, and trying with all their might to don the silver slipper. The sisters deserved every bit of praise that was lavished upon them.

The lone gentleman in the cast, Mr. Norman Laing, was admirable in the part of the Father of the three sisters. Even his voice was suited to the role, and his exasperated demeanor at most times fitted in splendidly with the irritable character of the unfortunate parent of Patience and Charity, who gave him considerable trouble during the ballroom scene and the lessons on etiquette which he endeavored to impart to them. His vivid get-up of red satin gave a spot of color to the second act, and his delineation of the part had a professional touch that brought him much applause. The two daughters, with their awful noses and virago-like tempers, came honestly by their irritable temperaments, when their father's proclivities were revealed in his conversation.

The Fairies who carried out the wishes of the Fairy Godmother were adorable portions of the act. They were dainty, graceful, dancing sprites gowned in petalled, short frocks of yellow, orchid, peach, green and rose, with floral cinctures and headbands, and they danced blithesomely through several scenes, singing gay little songs. They were the Misses Nan Parsons, Margaret Hamilton, Louise Letellier, Jeanne Girard, Gertrude Doyle, Jean Duffus, Lorraine Middleton, Josephine Dobbin, Dorothy McGrath, Rhoda Deannard, Genevieve Leahy, and Dora Quinlan.

The two charming little pages, in appropriate costumes of piebald green, brown, black and yellow, with feathered flat hats and bright doublets, were Sophia Yeotes and Grace White, and the attendants on the Prince, also gowned in the court costumes of the period portrayed, were Miss Margaret Eastwood and Miss Alma Blanchard.

Her Ladies-in-Waiting, a truly feminine sextette who, left alone on the stage, proceeded to enlighten the audience with regard to the secrets of the queen's facial beauty, wore colorful court gowns in panniered, basque-waisted style, with white wigs and fans. They were Mrs. V. Morphet, the Misses Mary Scott, Olive Howland, Irene Collins, Minnie Allen, Stella Brady, Florence Pammett and Laura Jones.

A Minuet formed a lovely portion of the ball-room scene, with the Prince and Cinderella leading the dancers in the maze of figures of the charming old court dance. Ladies and Courtiers in this scene were gowned in the old-time costumes of the minuet, in colored satin surcoats and breeches for the Courtiers, and bouffant gowns of varied colors for the Ladies. The graceful number elicited much applause. Those taking part were Elva Jackson, Florence Pammett, Lahring Parsons, Florence Adams, Dorothy Kelly, Kay O'Keefe, Alma Fontaine, Stella Brady, Mrs. V. Morphet, Florence Evans and Irene Collins, as Ladies; while Courtiers were Isobel Couper, Ethel rae, Carrie Crookshanks, Mabel Walker, Margaret Cameron, Eleanor Dodds, Isobel Davidson, Mrs. O. M. Steer, Violet Walsh, Madelene Whaley and Julia Nicholls.

The story, which followed out faithfully the popular story-book romance of the Prince and the little kitchen-maid who becomes later the beautiful princess, helped by a kindly Fairy, was made very effective by the lovely dances and music introduced. An embarassed small pony and a golden coach appeared from the Fairy's incantation. The musical numbers included lovely solos, sung in beautiful voice by the three principals. Mrs. Perrin sang "When Trumpets Pealed," and "Now Midnight Hath Tolled," also taking part in a charming duet with Miss Masson, entitled "earie." Miss Masson sang as a solo, "Oh! Were I a Lady" and Miss Collins' solo was 'In Fairyland."

The opening chorus was "Hail, the Prince's Natal Day,' sung in tuneful measures, and followed by two comic numbers, in the duet by Patience and Charity, "At the Princes Ball To-Night," and the trio by the two and their father, "When to the Prince You Are Presented." The finale of the first act, sung by the Fairy Godmother and the Fairies, was "Cinderella."

Again, Mrs. McClelland and Miss Crocker had a duet in the second act, "O Dear Papa" in which they admonished their parent for his conduct at the ball, and choruses were "Good Health to the Prince,' and "The King's Fete." A Gossiping Chorus, "I Know 'Tis Very Wrong to Quiz," and song, "We're Ladies to the Noble Queen," by the Ladies-in-Waiting, appears in the third act, also a chorus, "'Tis Midnight Hour," with a lovely trio by Mrs. Perrin and her two attendants, Miss Blanchard and Miss Eastwood, entitled "Careless Wandering Minstrels We.' The Attendants have solos, "Will It Fit You," in the episode of trying on the silver slipper, and a finale, when the Prince, the little red heels of love on his dainty shoes, holds the stage with the dainty Cinderella, is "All Joy Be Thine."

A solo dance that brought repeated and enthusiastic applause from the audience, and a brief encore from the charming small dancer, little Sophia Yeotes, was an attractive addition to the third act. The small girl, gowned as Midnight Sprite, gave a graceful, sure-footed dance that was very effective.

During the intermission between the second and third acts, Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P., appeared before the curtain, to thank the audience for their attendance, and to voice appropriately the gratitude of the Ashburnham Women's Patriotic League, to the audience, to all who had assisted in any way in the production, and especially to Mrs. Perrin, for her excellent work in direction.

DOCTORS ADVICE TO THE SICK

Wash Away All Poisons in Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowels Before Breakfast

To feel your best day in and day out, no more headaches, indigestion, gas on stomach, bilious attacks, rheumatism, kidney pains, bad breath, you must bathe your self inside. Start today by taking one Tanol Calomel tablet before meals or two at bedtime, then next morning drink a glass or two of hot water to wash from the stomach, liver, kidney and bowels all the previous day's waste, poison and toxins before more food is taken in. Get a few Tanol tablets from F. C. Weber, Charlotte street, Peterborough. They are harmless to take, do not nauseate, no bad after effects, no salts or seidlitz next morning, like ordinary calomel. Then you can eat better, sleep better, work better, think better and look better.

INDIAN RUNNER UNDER HANDICAP

MILE IN 7 1-4.

Running on a bad track, and with a strong wind against him, the Indian runner, George Whetung, had little chance to show his ability as a runner at the Exhibition ground's last night. A large crowd of spectators were present, and although many were disappointed after hearing of the runner's claim to have run from Lakefield to Peterborough in 39 minutes, Louis Yeotes told the Examiner to-day that he had every reason to believe that when the runner had settled down to training he will make a real athlete, and that in a very short time he would give another trial run at the Exhibition grounds, when the track and the weather are more favorable.

The time for the run last night was 28 minutes and 55 seconds, for four miles, making an average of a mile in about 7 1-4 minutes. In his run from Lakefield he claims he made an average of a mile in 4 1-2 minutes.

TRENT RIVER UNITED CHURCH.

TRENT RIVER, April 21. — Beautiful weather favored the services on Easter Sunday at the United church when there was a large congregation assembled to hear the Rev. Mr. Archer deliver a suitable address. He took for his text Mark 12:10. The congregation read Psalm 148. Hymns were "Jesus Christ is Risen to-day," and "Mary to the Saviour's tomb, which were sung by the congregation. The choir rendered an appropriate number.

PILES DISAPPEAR

No Cutting or Salves Needed

External treatments seldom banish Piles and for the very good reason that the cause is inside—bad circulation in affected parts, veins are flabby and bowels walls weakened.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send fresh, healthy blood to the raw, sensitive membranes. Internal treatment is one safe method. Ointments and other external treatments can't give lasting relief.

J. S. Leondhardt, M.D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and it has proven successful in thousands of cases — so successful that now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists under a money back guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at McDermid & Jury, and McDermid Drug Store, who will promptly refund the purchase price if you are dissatisfied.

SECRETARY REPORTS ON C. A. S. MEETING

Tells Local Branch of Conference Held in Toronto.

The following report was read by John Edgar, Secretary and Agent, at the April meeting of the Children's Aid Society:

In presenting my report of the Annual Conference of Children's Aid Societies of the Province of Ontario, I wish to stress at the beginning the unanimous opinion of every speaker, "That the Children's Aid Society is doing greater work than any other social organization in existence."

This was particularly emphasized by such men as Dr. J. B. Harkness, education secretary, Social Service Council, and D. B. McDougall, Provincial School Attendance Officer. These men, whose duty it is to study social problems, are in a good position to know just what our Society is doing.

The Conference was held on Wednesday and Thursday, the 6th and 7th of April, 1927. The attendance was about the same as that of last year, and the interest manifested was of such as to give one the impression that every Superintendent is deeply intrested in his work.

The Hon. Lincoln Goldie told of the progress being made at the boys' school at Bowmanville. 84 boys have been received to date, 10 have been discharged, leaving 74 at present. It is proposed to increase the accomodation to 175 this fall, and the aim is to increase to 300. In speaking of the boys at Victoria Industrial School, Mr. Goldie said these could be divided into three classes: feebleminded, criminally inclined, and normal boys. It is the intention of the Government to have these boys separated. A census of the entire population will be taken and all the subnormals transplanted to Orillia; the criminally inclined are to be placed in a separate institution, and the remainder taken to Bowmanville. When the Government has succeeded in making the arrangements outlined above, feeble-minded children will not be admitted to shelters.

This was welcome news to every Children's Aid worker, as the feebleminded child is our greatest problem, and no doubt has been a problem to the State for many years, and it is pleasing to know that a solution is in sight.

Mr. Kelso gave his report as follows:

8,000 cases of neglected and ill-treated children during 1926.

3,489 since the Act came into force in 1921.

10 per cent of children only had been returned after adoption.

Under the Unmarried Parent's Act.—1,705 cases last year; 358 more than in 1925. 711 of these were in Toronto, 6,193 cases since 1921 when the Act came in force.

$88,000 was collected last year. $332,588 has been collected since the Act came in force. About $100,000 in banks to the credit of children. Our own Society has one-eighth of this amount.

Industrial Schools cost $192,000 last year.

Addresses were given on the Broad Highway of Education, The Education of the Adolescent Sub-nomal Boy, also a very good paper on The Placing of Children.

C. Frank Moore, Assistant Crown Attorney, Toronto, gave an interesting paper on "Preparation of Evidence for the Courts by the Investigators of Children's Aid Societies." The speaker outlined the procedure to be taken in the preparation of the evidence, and described and gave illustrations of what is evidence and what is not.

The Deserted Wives' Maintenance Act and its amendments was discussed by John Kearns, Crown Attorney, Guelph. This Act has been in force for a number of years, but the procedure of enforcement has been so complicated that it made the Act practically unworkable. The Act as amended is much simpler, for instance under the old Act 21 days intervened before a man could be brought before the Court; under the new Act only 10 days are required. and Mr. Kearns says "it is a wise wife who knows her own husband." A person brought before the magistrate and tried under the Criminal Code, no provision was made for the support of the children, the new Act does provide for the children.

The problem of the adolescent girl was the subject of an interesting address given by Miss Brooking, Superintendent of Alexandra Industrial School. Miss Brooking is a very humorous speaker, and certainly knows the way of girls. She says there is no reluctant feeling about the 1927 girls. They simply bounce in, was an expression made by her. The opinion of any one over teen age is of no value to her, they are old fashioned and behind the times. The teen age girls can compete in sports with boys and often excell them, but they cannot cook a meal.

Miss Brooking says the standard of a boy or girl is the standard of the gang they associate with. Quoting again from Miss Brooking, she says the results of teen age boys and girls are appalling; the adolescent girl problem is no longer a problem of the home, but of the state. As soon as girls become wage earners they dispense with parental control. They are always searching for excitement, and in the search trouble takes place. There are all kinds of labor-saving devices, but no home-saving device. The remedy is, give them something to do, something that will interest them, and occupy their minds.

The records of the Alexandra School show that in the busy times such as house-cleaning time or berry picking time, there is less trouble with the girls, than when there is nothing to do.

From 30 to 35 per cent of the girls are under 75 intelligence quotient.

A KENTUCKY BELLE.

The three-act comedy, "A Kentucky Belle," was presented at Brailey's hall, in North Monaghan, last evening, by members of the Lilly Lake Sunday School, and the clever acting of the cast brought much applause from a pleased audience. Miss F. C. Little announced the different numbers on the programme, which was enlarged by musical renditions between acts.

The play, which has to do with the romance of the village belle, Isabel Douglas, and her suitor, John Cason Gordon, parts well taken by Miss Evelyn Mason and Harold Middleton, was made very interesting by the inclusion of a strong comedy velin by Cindy, a negro maid, and Henry, her fiancee, Miss Annie Dixon and Cecil Hancock receiving much appreciation for their efforts in these roles. Other lovers in the piece also are Miss Mariah Douglas, the aristocratic aunt of the democratic heroine, and Colonel William McMillen, parts taken very effectively by Miss Mary Middleton and Arthur Hancock.

Other characters in the piece are Dr. Blake, a practitioner, (Fred Rowland), Marie van Harlinger, friend of Isabel Douglas (Eulah Hancock), Miss Madden, a trained nurse (Katheryn Rowland), who had a double role as Mrs. Gordon, mother of Jack Gordon, Miss Gordon, sister of Jack's (Amy Thompson), Telephone linemen (George Middleton, Clarence Hancock, Harold Thompson and Bert Rowe), and Young men and girls of the village (Sam Price, Jim Darling, Eric Mason, Evelyn Darling, Dorothy Rowland, and Lillian Mason).

Between acts, a vocal solo was given by Mrs. J. Mason, a piano solo by Miss Mary Hendren and a recitation by Dorothy Rowland.

TORONTO, April 21.— (Canadian Press.)—Trading was quiet and price movements irregular on the market of the Toronto Exchange to-day. THREE ROBBERS HOLD UP BANK

Take $18,500 From Bank of Toronto Branch To-day.

LEAVE NO CLUES.

TORONTO, April 21. Canadian Press. — Forcing the manager and four members of the staff of the King and Bathurst street branch of the Bank of Toronto, into the vault at the point of revolvers, three bandits this afternoon escaped with $18,000. A few minutes elapsed before the bank employees managed to open the door of the vault and give the alarm, and in the meantime the robbers, believed to be foreigners, made their escape.

The police are at present without a clew to help them trace the bandits.

The robbers cleaned out the teller's drawer and cage and then left the bank. All wore peak caps but no masks. The robbers carried out their plan without interruption.

Manager Coulson stated that he did not have much cash on hand and the official loss would not be known until the money in the bank is checked up.

J. A. Reid, the teller, says there was no gold in his cage, but there was $2,000 in $20 bills, $2,000 in $5 bills, a large bundle of $10's, and a miscellaneous assortment of smaller denomination.

Reid declared that there were several guns around but the staff could not use them as they were covered by the bandits. He himself was at the back of the cage, he said, and was unable to reach his weapon.

LEGION NOTES

A wonderful spectacle was presented last night at the Canadian Legion Hall on the occasion of the Euchre and Dance and Draw. The whole three floors were crowded, the top floor was reserved for Euchre, and those participating in this game keenly contested for the beautiful prizes so tastefully selected by the chairman, N. E. Crowe, and the committee consisting of Comrade O. Hurle, M. McGill and H. Payne to whose efforts the success of this gigantic enterprise must be attributed. This committee under the guidance of the chairman has accomplished great work for relief purposes during the past season, and a considerable amount of credit is due them, for it is largely due to their efforts that enough funds have been available for relief for those of our comrades in distress.

From start to finish the evening was full of activity. The dance floor was crowded to its utmost capacity, and though some 600 persons were dancing, all appeared to be fully enjoying the wonderful strains of music that emanated from Pat O'Keefes' Orchestra.

Shortly after 10.30 p.m., the fitbit of the evening was introduced. The main auditorium was a mass of people all expectantly awaiting the result of the draw for the Chesterfield Suite, Bridge Lamp and Library Table. The Vice-President, Captain James Abraham, was the hero of the evening, gallantly standing upon the chair provided for his use, with his usual debonair air, he proceeded to address the huge audience, apologizing for the limitation of space for the Euchre players who were unable to take part, thanking the patrons who had attended and supported the committee in their work throughout the season and congratulating Comrade Crowe and his committee for their unstinted work which had culminated in such a gigantic success.

The Chairman, Comrade Crowe, then had the bag containing the stubs of the tickets sold examined by the audience after which it was very thoroughly shaken by various people present. The draw was made by the Vice President. The result of the first ticket drawn was expectantly waited in dead silence and as the winning number of the Chesterfield Suite, an audiable sigh could be heard throughout the hall. The anxious moment of suspense had been lifted, and a hearty cheer was given to the fortunate winner, Prize No. 2 was won by ticket No. 682 and the third prize by ticket No. 1952.

The prize winners in the ticket selling contest which was keenly contested, were Mrs. Wager, who sold 436 tickets, receiving a prize valued at $25.00. The second prize was won by Mrs. Gordon, with a sale of 285 tickets, she received a prize valued at $17.00. Comrade Martin Gahagan came a good third, having sold 145 tickets and receiving a prize valued at $8.00.

At the conclusion of the draw, dancing was resumed and continued until long after midnight, when the evenings entertainment was brought to a close by the playing of the National Anthem.

The work of the committee under the direction of Comrade Norman Crowe has been stupendous, and the thanks of the whole branch of the Legion is due these comrades for whole hearted efforts which have culminated in one of the greatest successes yet achieved in the annals of the local branch of the war veterans.

The committee wishes to remind their patrons that the last euchre drive of the season will be on Wednesday next.

Stock Prices Stronger In Wall Street To-day

NEW YORK, April 21.—(Canadian Press.)—Stock prices turned strong after an early period of irregularity in to-day's market with major speculative operations for the advance shifting from the industrials to the rails. Banks called about $15,000,000 in loans during the morning, but plenty of funds were available at the renewal figure of four per cent. The reduction from five to 4 1-2 per cent. in the Bank of England rediscount rate revived hopes of a reduction in the four per cent. charge of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, the dirtors of which meet after the close of the market. Selling pressure against the steel shares was prompted by reports of a substantial reduction in sales and the relatively low commodity price level. Kelly Springfield was bad up to another peak but bullish enthusiasm for rubbers waned considerably when Firestone officials notified their dealers that no immediate increase in tire prices was justified. Pathe sold down rather sharply on talk of new financing. Southwestern carriers led the advance in the Rail group despite reports of serious property damage in recent storms.

BAKERS ATTEND DEMONSTRATION

Fleischmann Yeast Company Shows Moving Pictures.

IN VICTORIA HALL.

A large number of people interested in the baking industry viewed the showing of two films of the Fleischmann Company at Victoria Hall last night. The first picture called "What Shall We Eat Today," showed the great development of a modern retail bakery or confectionery, and how, through up-to-date methods, the baker can easily produce the variety of high quality baked goods which will please women as much as those they now bake themselves. The second film was a pictorial demonstration of a perfected formula, the use of which enables a baker to more easily produce quality goods. The film was entitled "Basic Sweet Dough." George A. McAllister spoke on the film "What Shall We Eat Today?" emphasizing five points of successful merchandising, namely, quality, exterior, interior, personal salesmanship and printed salesmanship. W. H. Linn spoke on bakery efficiency commenting on the handling of basic sweet dough. A final talk was given by A. W. MacKenzie, entitled "Cashing in on Basic Sweet Dough." The meeting was conducted by O. Blain, the Fleischmann Company agent in Peterborough. At the conclusion of the program a variety of baked sweet goods and coffee were served as refreshments. These products were baked by The Fleischmann Company demonstrator at the Stock's Bakery and were made by the Basic Sweet Dough formula.

WIN OPENER AT HOME PARK

Athletics Break Deadlock in Seventh To Defeat Yanks 8-5.

PLAY AT CHICAGO.

NEW YORK, April 21 (Canadian Press).—The Yankees bit the dust at Philadelphia as the Athletics opened their home season yesterday and scored 8 runs to the New Yorkers' 5. Philadelphia put the game on ice when they shoved across three runs in the seventh to break a 4 to 4 deadlock. Mickey Cochrane had hit a homer in the sixth that wiped out the visitors' one run lead up to that point.

Detroit saw their season there open with Tigers shutting out St. Louis 7 to 0. Earl Whitehill was master of the Browns throughout the whole distance. Fothergill drove in two Detroit runs with a circuit clout in the fifth.

Chicago pried off the American League lid in that city by succumbing to Cleveland 5 to 4. The locals jumped off to a lead but Lyons weakened and the Indians bunching behind his wildness drove him from the mound in the sixth. A crowd of 30,000 saw the opener.

Three games were scheduled in the American League yesterday.

INELIGIBLE AS AN AMATEUR

Mary K. Browne Ruled Out By U. S. Golf Association Committee.

LONG DELIBERATION.

NEW YORK, April 21. Canadian Press. — Mary K. Browne, for 15 years a conspicuous figure in sports, yesterday was declared ineligible to compete as an amateur golfer. Miss Browne is the only woman in the United States who reached amateur finals in tennis and golf in the same year.

After a day and a half of deliberation the executive committee of the United States Golf Association late yesterday afternoon handed down a ruling that the former California star of court and links had "acted in a manner detrimental to the best interests of golf" in turning professional tennis player.

The decision, officials said, would bar her from all tournament competition in this country as a golfer.

RALLY IN 8TH FOR 4-3 WIN

17 HITS FOR STARS.

NEW YORK, N.Y., April 21. — (Canadian Press).—Reading pounded Maley hard yesterday in the first appearance of Toronto here, but the Leafs rallied in the eighth to defeat the Keys, 4 to 3. Reading collected eight safeties, including six doubles and a triple off Haley in the seven innings he worked.

The Syracuse Stars had little trouble with the Skeeters at Jersey City, clubbing three pitchers for 17 hits and collecting as many runs. The Skeeters had a goose-egg and six errors for their share of the proceedings. Moore collected the single Jersey bingle of Russ Miller who pitched fine ball.

The Bisons at Newark had on their batting clothes and slammed out twenty-two hits, sixteen for extra bases. The resultant score showed 18 to 5 runs. Cliff Lee knocked two homers for Newark and led the attack.

Playing at Baltimore the Rochester Colts downed the Birds 10 to 9. Eight errors were registered and the game was ragged. Two errors in close succession by Urbanski gave Rochester the victory.

O.B.A.A. BULLETIN

The annual meeting on April 2nd was in the opinion of most of the delegates the best in the history of the association, keen interest being taken in the discussion of all amendments and suggestions for the coming season.

President Snyder has announced his appointees to the executive committee, viz., Messrs. J. C. Nott, Oshawa; W. A. Smith, Galt; M. B. Dulmage, Owen Sound, and W. Wiley, Ottawa.

The attention of all leagues, clubs and baseball enthusiasts is drawn to the resolution adopted at the annual meeting requesting all affiliated leagues and associations to arrange special events and games on July 1st and 2nd next, and to generally assist and promote fitting celebration in observance of Canada's jubilee year.

Special attention is also drawn to the following important sections of the bylaws: All leagues and associations should hold regular meetings at which all playing certificates must be filed and no player allowed to play unless passed at a regular meeting, making sure th amateur cards accompany all senior and intermediate certificates and birth certificates accompany all certificates in the minor series.

League schedule: Special attention should be given to the arrangement of playing schedules and care taken that they will conform with dates when league winners must be ready to enter the O.B.B.A. play-downs.

O.B.B.A. clubs and players must secure permission through the secretary before playing outside the association.

Strict observance of the bylaws and constitution by all leagues, clubs and officers will eliminate any of the tangles that the executive have been called upon to deal with in the past.

Minor series, change: The new age limit in the minor series is as follows: Junior under 20 years on May 1st; juvenile under 18 years on May 1st; bantam, under 16 years on May 1st.

Celebrate July 1 in Peterboro'

Unquestionably the role of pinch-hitter is one of the toughest in baseball.

Yet for two seasons, Ernie Johnson kept his job with the New York Yankees, while they were winning pennants, largely by his ability to step up to the plate and come through in the pinch.

During the season of 1924, as I recall it, Ernie Johnson made a record as a pinch-hitter that is without parallel as far as I know.

That season, in 15 times at bat as pinch-hitter, Johnson came through with 12 safe wallops, among them being doubles, triples and home runs.

The following year, although he didn't perform quite as efficiently, he came through with four hits in his first 10 trips and then went into a slump.

So that in 25 consecutive appearances as pinch hitter, running over one full season and part of another, Johnson made 16 hits in 25 times at bat.

While Johnson was at the height of his run as a pinch-hitter, I asked him if he had any pet theories that he followed. Johnson always had a good eye and was hard to pitch to.

"None," he replied, "other than that I try to do what the manager wants me to, make a hit in the pinch. Therefore, any time I get the pitcher in the hole, I always pick on the cripple. Sent up to pinch-hit, there is no sense in the batter waiting out the pitcher. Once he has him in the hole, he should always take a healthy swing at the cripple."

BOSTON, Mass., April 21 (A.P.).—Johnny Miles isn't disheartened because running on a tar-covered road, raised almost to the boiling point by the summer sun, blistered his feet and forced him out of the Boston amateur athletic marathon seven miles from the start Tuesday.

He is determined to come back next year and give his best. "I'll not only win the race," he asserted, "but I'll smash the record."

He said he did not feel badly over Tuesday's failure on his own account but was sorry because he hated to have his loyal supporters back home in Sydney Mines disappointed.

After he had rested a few hours at the Hotel Somerset he showed no ill-effects from his experience and attended a reception tendered him at the hotel by the Cape Breton Club of Boston. His admirers hailed him as a hero in spite of his failure to finish.

Johnny said that he had done much of his training by running over snow and ice. At present, he added, there were still big snowdrifts in his home town.

Perhaps his shoes had something to do with it. He wore sneakers as usual and the rubber soles quickly absorbed the heat.

"It's all in the game," he summed up. "We have to take them as they come."

Clarence De Mar Tuesday night received the following telegram from Sydney Mines: "Citizens of Sydney Mines congratulate you on your splendid victory."

OSMAND OUT.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 2. — Canadain Press. — The Joseph E. Widner candidates for the Kentucky Derby worked out at Churchill Downs yesterday before a gallery which included George M. Hendrie, President of the Windsor, Ont. Jockey Club; Dave Gillies another Canadian racing official and a gallery of prominent horse men.

The performance of Osmand the winter Book favorite for the Derby, was not up to that of his stable mate Kiev or Chance Shot.

Osman, with Earl Sande up, making possibly the 125 pounds Derby colts carry in the race, was sent over the mile course with Chance Shot. Jockey Willie Garner went to the front with Chance Shot and held his advantage, although Osmand gained to the top of the stretch, where he began to tire. Sande booted him down the stretch and he finished about a length behind, a very tired horse. The fractional time for Osmand was eighth .12; quarter .24 three-eighths .36; half .48 1-5, five-eighths 1.01 3-5; three-quarters 1.15, and the mile 1.43 3-5.

FIGHT CHAMPIONS LACKING IN CLASS

Most Divisions Have Title-Holder Who is Mediocre in Ability.

By NEA Service

NEW YORK, April 21.—Tex Rickard, premier promoter of fights, and his arch rival, Humberto Fugazy, will need plenty of ballyhoo to make the fans wax enthusiastic over the proposed open air shows now being planned. The reason—mediocre talent!

Probably never in the history of the prize ring have the various classes been dominated by such ordinary champions, most of them lacking color entirely. It will take plenty of the well-known Richard "hooey" to get the boys who pay their way unduly excited.

The only impressive champion in the lot is Jack Delaney, who presides over the light heavyweights. Even his possibilities are limited, as proved by the sorry showing he made when he stepped out of his class and took on Jim Maloney, now recognized as a Tunney contender.

When Louis "Kid" Kaplan suddenly realized he could no longer make the featherweight limit and retired, many contenders laid claim to the right to wear the crown but not one of them was able to present a convincing argument.

Johnny Dundee, who retired undefeated, and who now insists he can still make the featherweight limit, says he is the champion since he was never defeated at the weight. Other claimants are Phil Rosenberg, who forfeited the bantam title; Honeyboy Finnegan, Benny Bass, Red Chapman, Al Foreman, Eddie Shea and Johhny Hill.

More recently, Charley Phil Rosenberg, unable to make the bantam weight for his championship bout with Bushy Graham, retired after the fight, in which he decisively trimmed the highly touted Graham.

Prior to the Graham fight, the Chicago Boxing Commission named Bud Taylor as bantam champ when Rosenberg, for various reasons, failed to go through with the title bout between the two. Taylor is the western choice for the crown while eastern experts like Tony Canzoneri. Recently the two fought a sizzling draw. The question of superiority is therefore as undecided as ever.

In the flyweight class, Fidel La Barbara has suffered two setbacks at the hands of Johnny Vacca. Since the champion insisted Vacca come in overweight, the loss of the decision in no way affected the title.

Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion, acquired the honors in that division by taking down a decision over the veteran Rocky Kansas, who had passed the peak long before he won the title. Mandell may find the going very rough if he consents to meet either Sid Terris, Billy Wallace, Kid Kaplan or Phil McGraw. There is some mighty good stock in the lightweight division.

Pete Latzo, boss of the welters, has done nothing to stamp him as a great fighter since he beat Mickey Walker. Likewise, Walker's Chicago decision over Tiger Flowers to win the middleweight title added little to his ring reputation. Latzo also took a tumble in Texas from Clyde Hull.

There are still many who believe Jack Dempsey can whip Gene Tunney, king of the heavies. Surely these are sorry days for a rather sorry looking lot of champions.

OPEN SAME DAY.

Canada's diamond jubilee and the opening of the bass season fall on the same day—Friday, July 1. The Ottawa government has declared Saturday, July 2, also an official holiday.

It is hoped that fishermen will neither be so tired nor so forgetful, wherever they be in the wilds of this beloved land on Dominion Day, that they will fail to light a beacon fire that night as a symbol of the love of country, and sing songs for Canada and talk about Canada, and feel Canada right in the marrow of their bones.

demanding 100 cents from every dollar who buys
Silvertowns
. . . . who judges everything on the hard-boiled facts—sweeps aside all petty claims and looks every proposition square in the face.
To such men Goodrich Silvertowns appeal most. They buy Silvertowns because they know they get full value for their money—100 cents from every dollar—every time.
They know they earn a high rate of interest on their investment—many times higher than bank interest—on the added tire mileage Silvertowns so ungrudgingly gives them.
They know Silvertowns pay their way.
And remember there is no duty on Silvertowns. They are now made in Canada and cost no more than ordinary tires.
Reduce the cost of running your car—let your next tire be a Goodrich SILVERTOWN.

MANY CANADIAN GRADUATE MEN OBTAINING JOBS ACROSS BORDER

Serious Situation Discussed By Hon. Stevens at Winnipeg Club.

MAJORITY LEAVE.

Says That Dominion Not Making Most of Her Resources.

WINNIPEG, Man., April 22 (Canadian Press)—The application of the most modern scientific methods in the developmnet of Canada's natural resources and the solving of the problem of retaining the educated young men in the country, were two of the chief points stressed by Hon. H. H. Stevens, M. P., Vancouver, former minister of customs, when addressing the MacDonald-Cartier club here recently.

Canada's great natural wealth was not being utilized to the best advantage of Canadian citizens; wealth was flowing out of the country to the advantage of other people, and the chief objective of all Canadians, Mr. Stevens urged, should be the development of the Dominion's natural resources.

Sixty Per Cent. Leave

It was imperative, he said, that the young men of the country should be kept at home to aid in the development of Canada. Figures he had obtained from one university showed that more than 60 per cent. of its honor graduates were now working in the United States.

Many Mothers Dislike Setting Apart Mothers' Day

NEW YORK, April 22 (United News).—A surprisingly large number of American mothers regard "Mothers' Day" with disapproval, according to letters they have written on the subject to "Children Magazine for parents."

Mrs. Viola Lockheart Warren of Rochester, N.Y., who wrote the letter that was awarded first prize was in favor of the custom however; "Any appreciation from a busy daughter or undemonstrative son should bring a mother happiness," Mrs. Warren said.

Forty-eight of the mothers protested against any day "arbitrarily set aside for expressions of love."

"Mothers' Day," is May 8 of this year.

CANADIANS MUST GET PASSPORTS TO WORK IN U. S.

Only Those Born in Dominion Will Be Allowed To Cross Border.

MORE INSPECTORS.

WASHINGTON, April 22 (Canadian Press).—An order laying down definite regulations to control temporary crossing of Canadian citizens at border points was laid before Secretary Davis of the Labor Department today. Under its terms the general immigration law will become effective, but delay in the enforcement of the more stringent rules will be allowed.

The new regulations will require Canadians working in United States industrial areas while living in their own country to obtain a passport and Consular visa as a non-quota immigrant, paying ten dollars passport fee and eight dollars head tax.

At the same time a citizen of Canada not born in the Dominion will find it impossible to obtain such a passport.

More Inspectors Needed

ST. ALBAN'S Vt., April 22 (Canadian Press).—More immigrant inspectors and patrol officers are to be placed on the Canadian border by the United States Government, according to an announcement at the Customs office here today.

More patrolmen are needed to guard the roads and the lake region properly against the illegal entry of aliens and more inspectors to examine legal immigrants at the ports of entry, it was said.

Ottawa to Take Action

OTTAWA, April 22 (Canadian Press).—Efforts to clarify the situation respecting immigration which has arisen at the Detroit-Windsor border will be taken by the Federal authorities as soon as the details of the new regulations to be put into force on June 1 next by the United States immigration authorities have been communicated to the government. No official notification of the new regulations has been received here. Press despatches, last night, indicated that after June 1, residents of Canada who cross the border daily to work in the United States will be required to conform to the immigration laws of that country.

Under these laws, according to Washington advices, residents of Canada, who were born in Canada, could cross and re-cross the border to their work at present, but those Canadians who were born outside the Dominion, would come under the quota immigration laws respecting the country in which they were born.

Matter Discussed.

Officials of the Immigration Department met with Dr. H. C. Skelton, under secretary of state for External affairs, to-day, and it was stated that the whole situation at Windsor was under review. In addition to a decision of the possible result of the enforcement of the new regulation further consideration was given a communication from the Chamber of Commerce at Windsor, requesting a ruling os to whether the Jay treaty of 1794 was still in effect. This treaty provided that Canadians might cross and re-cross the boundary line for temporary visits without passports.

Dr. Skelton stated after the meeting that the matter was still too indefinite for a statement of policy on the present Canadian authorities but that a decision respecting action by Federal officials could be expected early next week.

9 Months' Work Plenty Says Medic Journalist

HOLLYWOOD, Fla., April 22—(AP) — Three months' vacation every year is the prescription for the business man to take if he would live longer and be more successful, says Dr. George H. Simmons, for 25 years editor of the American Medical Journal.

A man should be satisfied with ordinary successes, take time off to live and not be always scrambling for more gold, he advises. Every man is due a vacation, the editor adds, if he has worked steadily for nine months.

BOYS FIND BODY IN DON VALLEY

Suicide Identified as Young Finlander—Dead Four Hours.

NO INQUEST NEEDED.

TORONTO, April 22. — Two boys on a hike in the Don Valley yesterday found a body, later identified as that of Tauno Michel Vertonen, 25-year-old Finn, hanging by a clothes line from a tree on the property of John H. Taylor, on the edge of the Don Valley, near Donlands Road.

The body was found about noon, and removed to the Trull Undertaking Parlors, Danforth Avenue, where it was identified last night by the dead man's two brothers, Pauvo and Urea Vertonen, 2 Soho Place. They said that up to about two weeks ago their brother had been living with them but because they had asked him to move because of his excessive drinking Tauno moved to 204 John street, and he was last seen there on Wednesday night. The brothers said that one week ago last Sunday Tauno had threatened to end his life in the basement of the Soho Place house.

Ross Crawford, 154 Westlake ave., and Clarence Foster, 8 Epsom ave., the two boys who found the body, immediately summoned Chief McCann and Constable Masters of East York. Coroner Dr. R. H. Fleming arrived shortly after, and said that life had been extinct for more than four hours. He said that an inquest would be unnecessary.

LOADING OF LIQUOR ON SUNDAY AND "AFTER HOURS," EVIDENCE HEARD BY ROYAL COMMISSION

Members of Border Patrol Give Evidence at Windsor Sittings.

EXAMINE OFFICERS.

Used Fleet of Cars To Transport Liquor in Winter.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 22 (Canadian Press)—The Royal Commission on Customs was given some inkling yesterday of why the Port of Windsor is the greatest liquor exporting point to the United States in Canada. From two members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who patrol the border, and have been doing so since the summer of 1926, the Commissioners received some arresting information. Boats from the United States coming into outports under the jurisdiction of Windsor without supervision or examination; vessels loading liquor "after hours"; clearances of liquor laden vessels issued before the boats were actually loaded; vessels loading liquor on Sunday; boats cleared without sworn declarations by their captains; all these entered into the testimony yesterday of the Mounted Policemen and other witnesses examined.

Open at Windsor

It was the opening day of the Commission's sitting in Windsor. Before long, preliminaries were swept aside and the Commission found itself engaged in an investigation of the liquor movement which is the outstanding export business between this customs port and the United States. After Commission Auditor A. E. Nash had informed counsel and the Commissioners that eighty per cent of the total export of Canadian beer to the United States goes through this port and 65 per cent of the total export of whisky, Hon. N. W. Rowel, K.C., counsel, turned to an examination of port officers who are responsible for the operation of the customs in Windsor, Sandwich, Riverside and other pleaces nearby. A number of port officers were examined, but today will be devoted to further investigation of their work.

It developed that liquor boats act on a schedule insofar as loading and getting clearance from this port is concerned. From nine in the morning to six at night are the hours which they must and do observe. But, while the letter is obeyed, that is all. The vessel load before six o'clock at night, and then they wait until they get a signal from the other side. Then "watch them go," remarked Royal Canadian Mounted Policeman John Wals, one of those who patrol the border.

"Yes," was the reply.

In Winter, when the ice on the Detroit River is strong, the boat gives way to the motor car for carrying on the business.

"Did you ever see any of these fleets of cars going over?" Mr. Rowell asked Constable Wals.

"Yes," replied the witness. The "fleets" if cars, he said, consisted of five, six or seven motors loaded with freight.

"Are they speedy?" asked Mr. Rowell. "Did you ever see them cross?"

"Yes, pretty fast," responded Constable Wals.

Did Not Sign Papers

One of the points brought out yesterday which prompted Chief Commissioner Brown to unfavorable comment, was that sworn declarations required from the captains of these rum-runners are frequently not taken. George Lodge, who looks after the export business at the outport of Walkerville, was questioned on this point. He admitted that in certain cases he had not asked captains to swear their inward papers. These papers declared that the vessel had come from the port of Detroit, and Mr. Rowell pointed out that, in many cases, if the captain had actually sworn them, he would be liable for prosecution on a charge of perjury. The liquor vessels fre-

RANGERS HOLD SPRING PARADES

ENTHUSIASM SHOWN

Spring parades for the Peterboro Rangers commenced this week, with a good attendance of old and new members, although the unit is not yet up to strength. Lewis gun and rifle drill is being carried on, as well as foot drill, and the officers and men are displaying great enthusiasm in their work. The possibility of arranging a week end camp is being considered. The band is practicing faithfully, besides appearing on parade on drill nights. There is still room for a number of recruits, who will be received at the Armories on Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

At the next meeting of the Council, a by-law will be submitted providing for the numbering of houses and places of business in Cobourg.

FLOOD WATERS MOVING SOUTH

TWENTY-EIGHT DEAD.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 22—Sunshine came into the lives of refugees atop levees and in the concentration camps that dot the Mississippi Valley today as the flood waters moved slowly south. Hickman, Ky., temporary home of several thousand homeless, reported that it had "sand bagged" the Mississippi River into submission at Reelfoot levee after an all night fight. Unless the levee breaks at some unexpected point, the bulwark will hold, the workers said.

Greenville, Miss., which was laid open by breaks in the levees at Stops Landing, was invaded today by the muddy waters. Six thousand refugees from the flooded lowlands have reached the city, and a food shortage is feared unless supplies are obtained. Live stock driven into the city ran wild through the streets.

Loss of life was placed at twenty-eight, but it was impossible to accurately estimate the loss in the hundreds of square miles of inundated territory from which no word has come.

Property damage was estimated high into the millions and more than a hundred thousand people were homeless and suffering from want of food, clothing and shelter. The most serious condition continued to centre around practically the entire state of Arkansas, particularly the St. Francis Valley and the Mississippi Delta. Swollen streams in Kansas, Oklahoma, and Western Missouri receded today under clearing skies to permit the speeding of food and supplies to hundreds left homeless.

Check Canadian Workers From Crossing U. S. Lines

WASHINGTON, April 22 (by United Press)—A general order restricting Canadians from crossing the border to work in Detroit and other American cities is expected to issue from the labor department to-day, Immigration Commissioner Harry Hull, announced yesterday.

Hull said the department had been studying this problem for several months. Hitherto, many Canadians and Mexicans have been permitted to cross into the United States for labor purposes.

ALLIANCE APT TO BE HARMFUL

U. S. Ambassador Says It Would Not Help Relations With England.

FRIENDSHIP NATURAL.

MANCHESTER, Eng., April 22. — (Canadian Press).—Alanson B. Houghton, United States Ambassador, today seconded the recent suggestion by Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador to the United States, that an Anglo-Saxon Alliance would not better the relations between the United States and Great Britain.

"We must not hope or seek to develop those wholly natural helpful relations between the British and American peoples into anything like an alliance," Mr. Houghton said in an address at a luncheon given by the Manchester Chamber of Commerce.

"The idea may be tempting, nevertheless I believe it to be wholly false. To bring the English-speaking peoples together into an armed and executive group, prepared if need be to enforce its collective will by force, would, if it were possible, tend neither to promote peace, nor to assure our mutual security."

Gilberts' fine and incarceration followed a party at his home in the course of which he appeared at police headquarters and insisted that two of his guests be arrested.

CUT IN BANK DISCOUNT RATE MEANS EXPANSION IN TRADE BELIEF OF BRITISH LEADERS

Confidence in Future Restored Say Prominent Financiers.

LABOR TROUBLES.

Hostility To Trades Union Bill To Lead To Hot Campaign.

LONDON, April 22.—(United Press.)—As a result of the reduction in the discount rate of the Bank of England from 5 to 4 1-2 per cent. more British capital may be invested in Canada, according to opinions in financial circles here to-day, and it is believed that the cut marks the turn of the tide in the industrial recovery of Great Britain.

Industrial leaders, when interviewed to-day, declared that cheaper money means an immediate expansion in trade and industry and that, allied with the six months' industrial peace which Britain has just enjoyed, augurs good times ahead. Sir James Martin, treasurer of the London Chamber of Commerce, G. W. Guest, president of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce, and other prominent financiers emphasize their belief that confidence in the future has been restored.

Despite all this optimism, however, the political effect will be increased, Labor hostility to the Government's Trade Union Bill on the grounds that the bill will create fresh industrial troubles instead of promoting better co-operation between employer and worker. Rt. Hon. L. C. Amery, secretary of state for Dominion affairs, launches the Tory campaign in explanation of the bill this week end, and other members of the Government, including Premier Baldwin, will follow. This promises a piquant campaign in which Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the Earl of Birkenhead, Secretary of State for India, will be the bill's leading exponents.

In order to effectively combat the measure, Labor is likely to adopt the tactics of Asquith days when Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain's tariff reform campaign was in progress, and that is to follow immediately behind the Conservative speakers from town to town denouncing the measure.

Arrest For Everybody On Streets After Twelve

PORTLAND, Oregon, April 22 (United Press).—To bed by midnight or to jail is the alternative the City Council has given the people of Portland, so the curfew will ring for grown-ups and youngsters alike. Four hold-ups in nine days netted bandits $48,000 and nettled the City Dads, who decided something drastic ought to be done about it.

On Thursday night the Council passed the curfew ordinance and now everyone, regardless of age or sex who is found on the streets or in an automobile after the stroke of twelve must explain or go to jail for questioning. Thirty-five extra policemen were added to the department to enforce the order in the downtown district.

NEW YORK MAN FAVORS JURY SELECTION HERE

No "Flapdoodle" in Canadian Courts, Says Senator Baumes.

JUDGE RULES.

Picking of Jury Takes Only Few Minutes—Just as Intelligent.

NEW YORK, April 22.—(Canadian Press.— State Senator Caleb H. Baumes, head of New York State's Crime Commission, is watching with interest the slow progress of selection of the jury in the case of the State versus Mrs. Ruth Snider and Henry Judd Gray for the murder of Albert Snider.

While the number of jurymen selected in the case grew to seven yesterday, Senator Baumes expressed preference for the Canadian system of picking jurors. He has made several trips to the Dominion for the purpose of studying Canadian courts and will pay another visit shortly to Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto and Quebec.

"The Judge in Canadian courts is all powerful," the Senator explained. "There is no flapdoodle about the selection of jurors. The Judge asks the talesman whether he is 'indifferent as the Crown and the defendant' and if the man answers in the affirmative he is selected as a juror. That's all there is to it.

"The selection of jurors is often a matter of half an hour only and I venture to say that that jury is just as intelligent as ours."

T. N. O. TO ENTER ROUYN DISTRICT

TO BE READY THIS YEAR

TORONTO, April 22.—The final attainment of a complete accord with the Quebec Government whereby the T. and N.O. Railway can construct its branch into the Rouyn district was announced yesterday by Premier Ferguson. The 27 miles of right-of-way required for the project were declared to have been sold by Quebec to Ontario upon most favorable terms. Work upon the line is to be commenced immediately and is to be completed by December 1st next. The successful settlement of the much-vexed Rouyn question had been rumored at the Parliament Buildings for some days past, but it was not until yesterday that Hon. Mr. Ferguson was able to definitely announce it as accomplished.

"We have now made," he said, "all the adjustments and the necessary arrangements in a very satisfactory manner with the Province of Quebec for the purchase of the right-of-way for the extension of the Swastika branch of the Nipissing Central Railway into the Rouyn mining camp. We will advertise for tenders immediately and will close them on May 12th, after which we will undertake the work at once and push it as vigorously as possible. We expect to complete the construction by December 1st.

"The Governments of both provinces," Hon. Mr. Ferguson said, "realize the advantage not only to the respective provinces but also to the Dominion as a whole of linking together the vast valuable mineral areas which stretch across the northern section of Ontario and Quebec. By co-operation and vigorous action we will be able to impress the financial world with the opportunities for investment which lie there, with the result that Canada will take its place amongst the foremost mining countries of the world. Both provinces regard mining development from the broad national standpoint as well as from the standpoint of the immediate advantage that goes to the Province."

AROUND THE CITY

At 9.53 a.m. this morning the Fire Brigade answered a call at 294 Murray Street. Overheated pipes had caused a small blaze, but little damage was done.

GENERAL CHIANG WOULD DIVIDE FORCES OF NORTHERN LEADERS

Advancing By Two Routes With Railroads as Both Objectives.

CUT OFF SUPPLIES.

Assumed Moderate Government Will Be Recipient of Powers' Next Move.

SHANGHAI, April 22. Canadian Press. — With the new Nanking government launched, civilians supervising the details, General Chiang Kai-Shek, leader of the moderate section of the Nationalists, has suddenly turned his campaign to the north, reports say. His forces are advancing by two routes. They have reached Linhweikwan, on the southern section of the Tientsin-Pukow railroad. Their objective is Muchowfu, where there is a railroad crossing.

General Chiang plans later to take Hanchwang, where the Tientsin-Pukow railroad crosses the Grand Canal. The capture of these two points would sever completely communications and supplies of the northerners in the Nanking sector.

The number of troops engaged not determined. Two thousand of Chiang's troo. also are moving toward Chinkiang for the purpose of crossing the river and attacking Yangchow, 15 miles to the north.

These two drives would, if successful, serve to cut off the northern forces in the neighborhood of Pukow —the objective beyound Yangchow of the second drive Triangfu.

To Suppress Bandit.

Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, th Manchurian war lord in control of the Peking govrnment, has sent General Chu Yu-Puh to suppress the notorious bandit Liu Hh-Chi. This, however is not expected to divert many troops from opposing Chang's northward advance.

From Hankow come reports that Feng Yu-Hsiang, the so-called "Christian Gene.al" has not accepted his appointment by the Hankow government to replace Chang Kai-Shek as commander in chief of the Nationalist armies, possibly in the belief that Chang's removal might be a difficult task.

General Chiang is reported as feeling that the best way to enlist support of a united south for the new government is to resume the military campaign without delay, thus giving evidence that he really intends to make an effort to conquer the north.

Placate the Powers.

The immediate programme of the Nanking leader, outside of the military campaign, is first to placate the powers; second, purify the Nationalist party, weeding out the Communists; and third, to meet the threat of Marshal Chang TsoLin's advance.

It is assumed by those in control at Nanking that Chiang's government will be the recipient of the powers' next note, and it is predicted that it will comply with whatever demands may be made, because it is anxious to avoid disputes.

Expulsion of the Radicals from the Kuomintang (The Cantonese political party) will be more troublesom, especially in the country areas. Disorganization of agriculture and industry in the provi ce of Hunan and Hupeh is complete owing to lack of transport and the instability of the currency, and this tends to radicalism, which is rampant.

Work of eradicating the evil in Hunan has been entrusted to General Mu Su-Ming, who is moving to that province from Szaechwan with 80,000 troops.

Briefly the military position is as follows:

Marshal Chang Tso-Lin's northern troops have reached the Hunan-Hupeh border, where the main southern force of 700,000 men is opposing him. General Yu-Hoiang in Schansi with 60,000 troops, is unable to move through lack of ammunition, which the Hankow government has withheld prior to his appointment as Generalissimo, because of his anti-communist views. When he gets the the necessary supplies he will join forces with General Yen, Governor of Shansi, and attack the Fengthien right flank, in an effort to cut the Peking-Hankow railroad.

Englishman Visits Coolidge And Finds He Is Talkative

PHILADELPHIA, April 22 Sir Charles Higham came here from Washington yesterday with his previous views of President Coolidge left behind him at the temporary White House.

"Imagine my surprise when in vivacious, intelligent fashion, he talked with me on half a dozen subjects," said Sir Charles, "I had heard also that he was not shaking hands on account of his hands being crippled. He shook hands with me and said his hand was all right.

"Furthermore, be was the first man I had seen in the United States whose shoes were shined. I went away with a new impression of your 'silent man of the White House'."

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THE PLACE OF OURS

It's rather plain, this place of ours,
And yet we planted all the flow'rs,
And put the stones along the border.
And sweeping doesn't seem a task;
What greater joy could woman ask
Than keeping her own house in order?
Yet women leading idle lives
Think they are wives.

Some people think our place is small;
It doesn't seem that way at all
To us, who tenderly designed it.
A mammoth house we could not build,
So just a little house we filled
With love, and so we do not mind it.
Yet folks behind a cheerless door
Think that is more.

We love our pansies all in bloom,
We love our little breakfast-room
That saves so many steps for Mother.
We love the bench that Father made,
We love our single maple's shade,
And, best of all, we love each other.
Yet folks who spend their days in strife
Think that is life.

Say Man Who Had Typhoid Fever 20 Years Ago Remained a Carrier, Caused Epidemic In Montreal

MONTREAL, April 22—A man who had typhoid fever twenty years ago and remained a carrier is the only source uncovered to account for the typhoid fever epidemic which started in Montreal March 4 and carried on for more than a month before being brought under control.

Some 2,415 cases developed. This man unsuspectingly applied for and got work in a local dairy. He was dismissed as soon as it was learned that he was a carrier.

Asked as to the possibility of such a source of origin, a member of the medical staff of the Toronto Isolation Hospital declared that it was quite probably the correct solution. A man may remain a carrier of typhoid germs, and those of other communicable diseases indefinitely, he declared, without being suspected of the disease or even again suffering from it in its active form.

DENY REPORT.

That Fighting Took Place Between Russian and Rumanian Frontier Troops.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, April 22 (Canadian Press).—The Rumanian Foreign Office denied yesterday that fighting took place between Russian and Rumanian frontier troops as reported from Vienna yesterday quoting an unconfirmed report from Bucharest.

The statement also says that the frontier "is absolutely calm."

MORE HOSTILITY TO LABOR LEADER

Ramsay MasDonald's Seat In Aberavon Is None Too Safe.

LONDON, April 22—The challenge to the continued leadership of Labor by Right Hon. Ramsay MacDonald is going to become more and more acute during the forthcoming session of parliament, according to predictions by Labor observers, although a certain amount of unity is bound to be maintained among Laborites with which to combat the government's much-discussed and opposed Trade Union bill.

It is now being hinted that the former Labor premier's Aberavon seat is none too secure, and that he has been urged by his colleagues to move elsewhere, perhaps to the Seaham division of Durham, for which constituency Sydney Webb now sits. In this event, Webb would resign.

While at the present time the revolt against Mr. MacDonald's leadership has lost some spirit, the undercurrent of antagonism is said to be stronger than ever.

SOFTBALL LEAGUE SCHEDULE MEETING

Advisability of Joining Ontario Association To Be Discussed.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 22 — A meeting of the Softball Association will be held in the Public Library on Monday next at 8 p.m. All teams intending to enter are asked to send a representative. A schedule will be drawn up and other important business transacted. It is expected that the schedule games will commence the first week in May. One important matter to be settled is the advisability of joining the Ontario Softball Association. Practically all the players in the local association are in favor of the 12" inseam ball and the Ontario Association rules call for a 13" ball. In view of this the general feeling seems to be in favor of passing up the Ontario body altogether. However, managers are asked to get the general opinion of their players and lay them before the meeting Monday night.

He will assume duties here in about a month.

OLD MASTERS

O mistress mine, where are you roaming?
O, stay and hear; your true love's coming,
That can sing both high and low:
Trip no further, pretty Sweeting;
Journeys end in lovers' meeting,
Every wise man's son doth know.

What is love? 'Tis not hereafter:
Present mirth hath present laughter:
What's to come is still unsure:
In delay there lies no plenty:
Then come kiss me, Sweet-and-twenty,
Youth's stuff will not endure.

—William Shakespeare: Song from "Twelfth Night."

OMEMEE LOSES MANY FAMILIES

OMEMEE NEWS

OMEMEE, April 22.—Omemee is gradually losing families who came here from Oakville and other points when the E. and E. Tanning Company located here. The tannery here is very uncertain and work is almost completed. Mr. and Mrs. Ruddick and family, Mr. and Mrs. Brister, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Wass and family and Mr. and Mrs. Clement and family are among the recent removals to Cobourg, while Mr. and Mrs. Ryan and family have moved to their former home at Oakville.

The Adult Bible Class of Trinity United church held its annual meeting at the close of the Sunday school session on Sunday when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Teacher—Mr. D. Weir.
Assistant Teacher—Mr. F. G. Sandy.
President—Mr. A Scott.
Vice President—Mr. A. Laidley.
Secretary Treasurer—Mrs. R. Wilson.
Assistant Secretary Treasurer—Mrs. R. Williamson.
Membership Committee—Mrs. J. Courtney, Miss L. Race and Mr. T. C. Ivory.
Devotional Committee — Messrs. Laidley, Sandy and Ivory.
Social Committee—Mrs. I. Rehill, Mrs. Sandy and Miss E. Rea.

Invitations sent out for the E. and E. dance on Easter Monday in Coronation Hall, Omemee brought a fair sized gathering, in spite of outside attractions at nearby points. "The Collegians" five-piece orchestra supplied the music and a good time is reported by those present. Shaded lights and streamer decorations of colored paper added color to the scene.

BURNBRAE FARMERS PUT IN BUSY WEEK

Still Find Frost at Depth of Furrow in Some Places.

BURNBRAE, April 22.— Spring work is in full swing here now. Those farmers who are fortunate enough to have boys of school age who can handle a team got a good start during the holiday as many of these young lads do a man's work behind a three-horse team.

The land is drying out on top rapidly and those woh have grain sowed claim that the seed bed never worked better. However, in many fields the sub-soil is very damp and in some cases is still hard with frost. This spring has been a peculiar one in this district, inasmuch as the land seems to be dry and spring like conditions prevail while at furrow depth the land is still in the grip of winter.

Everyone thought that the roads had passed the worst stages a week ago and would continue firm, but with the coming of real warm weather a number of bad holes are appearing and motorists will do well to drive cautiously for some days yet.

Mr. Bert Hay has a record for this district of having over thirty bushels sown by Good Friday. His farm contains considerable high land and he has been able to get away to a good start. Several others are right behind, however, although many local farmers have not seeded any at all, preferring to work over all their land that is fit and hasten drying. Much ploughing was left from last fall, especially alfalfa sod wich was much too wet to work right. Little improvement is noticed, however, this spring and a number of farmers are having difficulty in ploughing. Will Bennett, Charles Hutcheon, and Herbert Watson are among those who have almost admitted defeat but they still stick at the job and they will not doubt be repaid for their labor as alfalfa sod invariably gives high yields of grain.

STIRLING FARMERS BUSY AT SEEDING

Land is in Good Condition Now for Spring Work.

STIRLING, April 22.—The farmers have begun spring work in earnest and report the land as being in a fine condition to receive the seed. All are anxious to get the seed in the ground. A warm rain is greatly needed to settle the soil and start vegetation.

FIRES AT LAKEFIELD

Brigade Receives Several Calls During Holiday Week-End.

LAKEFIELD, April 22.—The fire brigade were called out at 11.45 on Good Friday to a grass fire in the hedge at J. R. Robinson's house. The men arrived promptly but Mr. Robinson had, with the assistance of his neighbors, the fire almost extinguished. A few minutes work with the chemicals was sufficient.

Grassfires kept the brigade busy last week as they received four calls. Prompt action in every case prevented serious damage.

WEDDING BELLS.

BALL—MONTGOMERY

HASTINGS, April 22 — A pretty spring wedding took place on Wednesday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Montgomery when their daughter, Lillian Jean, was united in marriage to Mr. Claude Gordon Ball of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Ball of Toronto.

The bride was given away by her father and entered the living room to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Miss Helen Wilcox. She wore a gown of coral pink georgette and cream lace, shoes and hose to match and carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses. Her attendant was a little flower girl, Miss Audrey Jeffries of Peterboro, who wore a dainty dress of pink taffeta and carried a basket of sweet peas and fern.

Rev. M. L. Hinton performed the ceremony.

The groom's gift to the pianist was a lovely bar pin and to the flower girl a fountain pen.

After the ceremony the guests were served a sumptuous wedding dinner after which the happy couple left on a motor trip for Western Ontario. On their return they will reside in Toronto.

On Tuesday evening the many friends of the bride tendered her a miscellaneous shower. After the gifts were opened by the bride and the cards read a pleasant time was spent in music, lunch being served at the close.

WELFARE OFFICER WILL STAND TRIAL

H. W. Elliott Faces Four Serious Charges in Oshawa Court.

OSHAWA, Ont., April 22.—H. W. Elliott, superintendent of the Children's Aid Society and prominent in this city through his church connections and activities in the interest of child welfare, was committed for trial yesterday afternoon by Police Magistrate Willis on four charges of a serious nature alleged to have been committed against wards of the Children's Aid Society.

The case was heard in camera, and a great deal of time was spent examining seven juveniles, who are the chief witnesses for the Crown.

Elliott's arrest came as a complete surprise to citizens. Inspector Boyd of the Provincial Police conducted an investigation throughout this city and the county of Ontario for three weeks before sufficient evidence had been gathered to justify the arrest of Elliott. On the final day of the investigation here, Elliott was attending a meeting of children's aid workers in Toronto. He was placed under arrest at the meeting by Provincial officers, and was later released on $10,000 bail.

Elliott is also well known in Detroit, where he was connected with child welfare work under the supervision of Henry Ford.

New scientific methods of extracting and refining ore have once more made the mine profitable.

DRAMATIC CLOSE TO LIBEL SUIT

Declared Mistrial When the Judge Finds Jury Had Been Contaminated.

MAY SUIT TIMES.

DETROIT, April 22 (Canadian Press).—Aaron Sapiro's $1,000,000 libel suit against Henry Ford, and the automobile manufacturer's weekly, the Dearborn Independent, fell by the wayside yesterday when Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond declared a mistrial.

He found with the Ford attorney that the jury had been contaminated by newspaper publication of an interview with a juror, Mrs. Cora Hoffman.

Apparently this case must fall at this time," the court regretfully announced. "It falls to a large extent because justice has been crucified on the cross of unethical and depraved journalism."

He discharged the jury and immediately called John A. Baxton, acting Federal district attorney, and directed him to investigate, and if his findings warranted, file contempt proceedings against the publishers of the Detroit Times, the reporter who interviewed Mrs Hoffman and any others involved in the publication of her statement in that newspaper.

Judge Raymond stated from the bench that there seemed to be nothing to support other charges against Mrs. Hoffman and Sapiro made in fifteen affidavits, mostly by Ford detectives, in support of the motion for a mistrial.

The outstanding allegation was that Mrs. Hoffman frequently had been seen and overheard in conversation with J. "Kid" Miller who, in turn, had been observed talking earnestly with Sapiro and that Miller had been heard to say to Mrs. Hoffman that by doing certain things she could earn "thousands of dollars."

After Judge Raymond announced his ruling he met the attorneys in chambers to discuss a new trial but no agreement was reached and they separated to meet for a further discussion Saturday, April 30.

GOLDEN WEDDING

LAKEFIELD, April 22. — Ideal weather conditions played no small part in the success of the golden wedding celebration of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Spence which was the outstanding event of Easter week and which was celebrated on Easter Monday. Fifty years ago Samuel Spence and Jemima Payne were married by Rev. Mr. Richards who was at that time the Bible Christian minister in this community and on Monday with their five children and eleven grandchildren and many friends and relatives they celebrated the golden anniversary.

It was more than simply a great family gathering, it was a community event in which practically all Lakefield took part. Mr. and Mrs. Spence held a reception from two to five in the afternoon when more than a hundred called to express their good wishes to the popular couple. The guests were admitted by two little granddaughters, Misses Edith Spence and Phyllis Webster. The guests were taken to the tea room by Mrs. R. B. English (nee Edith Spence) where refreshments were served by Mrs. Percy Spence and Mrs. Harry Dunsford (nee Mary Spence), two sisters-in-law, Mrs. George Payne and Mrs. Nathan Payne poured tea. Mrs. Lorne Webster (nee Ethel Spence) and Mrs. G. H. Spence also assisted. The house was decorated for the occasion with yellow and white crepe paper and natural flowers.

Invitations were issued to the near relatives and old friends for six o'clock when a bountiful supper was served in the school room of St. John's church, loaned for the occasion to Mr. and Mrs. Spence as a small token of appreciation for many favors received from them in the past. The room was decorated in golden yellow and white and the tables which were loaded with good things were done in beautiful spring flowers, roses, daffodils and tulips presented a most inviting appearance.

Among the older guests were Mrs. Sarah Hamblin of Dummer and Mrs. Nathan Payne, sister and brother of Mrs. Spence, Miss Christina Spence and Messrs. John and Brydon Spence, sister and brother of Mr. Spence. Rev. S. A. Kemp, pastor of the Regent street United church, and Mrs. Kemp and Rev. E. B. Cook of Newcastle, who was privileged to be a guest at Mr. and Mrs. Spence's silver wedding, which was held at their home in South Dummer. Many of the guests had also been present at the silver wedding and many interesting reminiscences were given of that happy occasion.

When the supper was over Rev. S. A. Kemp, who acted as toast master, proposed a toast to the bride and groom, a toast which he was assured would be a popular one as every one knows the worth of Mr. and Mrs. Spence as citizens and all who are present are glad to be here on this auspicious occasion to tender good wishes for a continuance of their years of usefulness.

The elder son, Mr. Percy Spence, replied on behalf of his parents, thanking their friends for their good wishes and for the loyal co-operation which made possible this large assembly. Mr. Spence especially mentioned the generosity of the Anglican church in loaning their school room, which was so conveniently situated.

The next toast was to the guests and Rev. E. B. Cook responded in a happy manner, giving some reminiscences of those days twenty-five years ago, when he was a young minister attached to South Dummer church, which was especially noted for its pretty girls and also for the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Spence, who were pillars in the church, always ready to lend a hand to further any movement for the good of the community. Mr. Cook recalled that other great gathering on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary which he was privileged also to attend and saw in this gathering a great many familiar faces.

The toast to the grandchildren was responded to by Mr. Sam Spence, Jr., who referred to the special privilege of the grandchildren on an occasion of this sort and hoped that all might be spared to celebrate together their grandparents' diamond wedding.

The toast to those who so efficiently served the guests was replied to by Mrs. McMillen, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Spence, who in a witty little speech thanked their friends for their appreciation. Among those who served were Mr. and Mrs. George Spence, Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Webster, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. English, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dunford, and the two eldest grandchildren, Miss Mary Webster and Mr. Sam Spence, Jr., and several nieces and nephews, Mrs. D. H. McMillen, Miss Mytrle Payne, Messrs. Hilliard and Ralph Payne.

The evening was spent in social intercourse and a delightful time was spent.

The presence of Mr. John Spence, who supported his brother as best man on the original wedding day, was particularly happy, especially as he is completely restored to health after his recent illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Spence received many beautiful gifts from friends who marked in a tangible way the auspicious occasion. Many gifts of cut flowers and flowering potted plants were to be seen, as well as gold coins, several clocks, candlesticks, pieces of jewelry and a beautiful lamp which was the gift of a number of the relatives. The family presented their parents with a sugar bowl and cream jug on a gold tray, the grandchildren presented a large basket of daffodils, with the following address read by Miss Mary Webster:

"It has fallen to my lot, as the oldest of your grandchildren, to present you with an address testifying to our joy and the joy of all your friends at being able to be present on this, the fiftieth anniversary of your wedding. It is indeed a happy occasion for us all and one that is made the happier by seeing you both in the possession of such good health and vigor. There are many gatherings recorded throughout Canada similar to this one and it is doubtful if at anyone of them the same tale of undisturbed and contented years of married life can be told with equal truth and honesty.

"Yours has indeed been a wonderful experience and one that must surely make its mark upon the community. It will certainly leave its marks upon us as an example of what an ideal existence a perfect union of two hearts can accomplish. To the world at large your lives will be a pattern, to us, your grandchildren, an incentive to follow in your footsteps to become models of integrity, courtesy and charity.

"My dear grandparents, I now wish to assure you of the warm and devoted love of all your grandchildren coupled with the sincere hope that you will both be spared to enjoy many many years of happiness and health. As a slight token of our love for you we ask you to accept this basket of flowers."

During the evening four little grandsons, Masters Jack and George English and Robert Walter Spence passed plates laden with candy and sweetmeats for those possessed of a sweet tooth.

Among the guests in the evening were: Mrs. John Bedford of Fenelon Falls; Mrs. Booth of Peterboro; Miss Vera Botterill ,Mr. J. W. Botterrill, Mr. Geo. MRS. CURTIS WINS SET OF DISHES

OMEMEE, April 22.—The pretty twenty-two piece set of tea dishes which has been on display in the window of Mr. Fred Parker's barber shop was removed on Saturday, when the seal was broken on a jar containing various sized beans and the beans counted. Each lady getting her hair cut was entitled to a guess on the beans and the closest estimate received the dishes. The estimates ranged from 800 to 9000 and the correct number was 5223. The closest estimate of 5000 was given by Mrs. L. C. Curtis, who was awarded the dishes.

Upset stomach, sluggish liver, and acid condition cause bad breath. Seigel's Syrup gets at the cause. Try it and have a wholesome breath. Any drug store.

STOMACH TROUBLES ARE DUE TO ACIDITY

Tells of Pleasant Home Treatment to Bring Swift Relief

So-called Stomach Troubles—indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, sourness, etc., are, in probably nine cases out of ten, evidence of "too much acid in the stomach" souring the food, causing the formation of gas and starting acid indigestion.

Gas distends the stomach and causes a full, oppressive burning feeling known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate stomach lining. Get rid of Gas and Acidity, and you get rid of Indigestion.

To stop or prevent the sourness and gas, to neutralize the stomach acids and keep the stomach sweet and free from indigestion, a teaspoonful or four tablets of Bisurated Magnesia should be taken in a little water after eating or whenever gas, sourness, pain or acidity is felt. This quickly sweetens the stomach, neutralizes the acidity, stops the pain and is harmless and inexpensive to use.

Bisurated Magnesia, powder or tablets only, can be obtained from any drug store and its daily use keeps the stomach in fine condition, enabling it to do its work without the aid of artificial digestants.

. . . PROMOTER OF CIVIC WELFARE AND CIVIC PRIDE . . . BOND OF CIVIC UNITY . . . PROTECTOR OF CIVIC RIGHTS.

TWELVE YEARS AGO.

The cycle of the months has brought us to another anniversary that should always be remembered by Canadians, that of the Second Battle of Ypres, in which the citizen-soldiers of Canada had their first major clash with the German hordes, and astonished the world with an epic of stubborn resistance against overwhelming odds and in the face of a new and terrible agency of war.

Twelve years ago, on the evening of April 22, 1915, the Germans launched the first gas attack of the war, and so effective was this new means of waging warfare that the whole complexion of the struggle might have been changed, the grey swarms might have swept through to the channel ports, turning the allied line, had not the 1st Canadian Division fought with "a gallantry and determination that undoubtedly saved the situation."

The quoted words, it should be noted, are taken from the official report of the action.

French native troops, holding the line north of them, had broken, leaving a gap, but the Canadians extended their forces to cover the breach, and grimly held on, suffering heavy casualties but maintaining such an effective resistance that the enemy's golden opportunity to win the channel ports was swept away by the grim determination of the Maple Leaf troops.

The anniversary should never be forgotten by the Canadian people.

THE MILITARISTIC BOGEY.

When it comes to setting up strawmen to be knocked down, Miss Agnes MacPhail, M.P., is in a class by herself.

Who else could possibly have been guilty of such a ridiculous statement as the following made in the course of a characteristic MacPhail speech at London the other night:

"You are being worked very largely by the military machine that controls the press."

In the name of common sense, where is there in Canada anything that resembles a military machine?

Where are these militarists that Miss MacPhail and Mr. Woodsworth worry so much about?

There is nothing in our arrangements for national defence to indicate their presence in Canada.

We have a toy navy, contribute almost nothing to Empire defence, have a regular army not as big as a large city's police force, and maintain a militia force on starvation grants that make it merely a skeleton.

No signs of a military machine there.

And then that old soap-box charge about the controlled press, used by every half-baked agitator who tries to stir up strife!

Surely Miss MacPhail does not advance that seriously.

With many of her views The Examiner has no sympathy, but we have given her credit hitherto for being no intelligent than the Socialist orators who protest that the press is controlled by the "big interests."

THE PETERBOROUGH STORE.

The statement made here yesterday by Stewart McCleneghan, one of the members of the Liquor Control Board, that the liquor store to be established in Peterborough will be one of the largest in the Province, indicates that the local store will be expected to serve a large section of the Central Ontario district.

While the Commission has not yet made an announcement as to the number of stores to be established, it is assumed from what Mr. McCleneghan said here that there are not to be as many as was at first supposed, and that stores in large centres will be considered sufficient to take care of a considerable territory.

The size of the local stock, too, is probably being determined in the light of the fact that Peterborough is a recognized tourist centre, and that the store here will be called upon to take care of the wants of a large number of United States visitors during the summer months.

That the change in Ontario's methods of dealing with the liquor problem will lead to an increased volume of tourist traffic cannot be denied.

There are many thousands of people in the United States who expect to visit Ontario this summer because of the advent of Government control, and the Peterborough district will undoubtedly share in this increased traffic.

PROBLEM OF THE PEDESTRIAN.

So long as road builders remain blind to the obvious need of footpaths along country highways the slaughter of pedestrians in the open country will continue and probably increase. Pathless highways are to the open country what busy street intersections are to the city.

Those who walk on travelled thoroughfares, especially at night, take their lives in their hands, though both pedestrian and motorist exercise extreme care. The weaving automobiles and trucks are death-traps for unfortunate foot travellers. One driver distracted by other vehicles or blinded by the glare of headlights may mean death for one or several pedestrians.

It is easy enough to say motor highways are no place for persons on foot. Not all walkers are pleasure bent, but even so they have as much right to the roadway as the motorist where no footpath has been provided. Danger lurks where nature's beauties formerly lured the rambling hiker?

Has public enthusiasm for motor roads blinded the Province to the rights and welfare of the pedestrian? Improved highways are essential to modern transportation, but safety for pedestrians is quite as vital.

At comparatively small cost footpaths could be built along every heavily travelled highway and the expenditure of public funds for this purpose would meet with even more widespread approval from the motorist than from the foot traveller himself.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

SPORT AND SCHOOLS.

At one of the meetings of the Ontario Educational Association this week Principal W. J. Salter, of the St. Catharines Collegiate Institute, caused a stir by attacking the prominent part sport is taking in the lives of student bodies in the Province.

Mr. Salter was evidently of the opinion that students who distinguished themselves in sports were usually failures in other things, and he gave several examples of what he meant.

The St. Catharines Principal is needlessly alarmed.

So far at least Ontario schools have succeeded in keeping sport from forming too big a part of school life; we are in that respect much ahead of educational institutions in the United States where entirely too much emphasis is placed upon the prowess of school athletic heroes.

What should be aimed at—and in a great measure this is the case with Ontario's schools—is an all-round development.

Bodies must be built up during school years, and there is no reason why such building should interfere with the development of the mind, nor why a clever athlete must necessarily fail as a student.

As a matter of fact, everyone can recall pupils whose prowess in sport was paralleled by success in the classroom.

The St. Catharines Standard puts it very neatly when it says:

"But despite what Mr. Salter says, there will be people of the Anglo-Saxon frame of mind who will put their trust in the young men and women who have tried to build up both body and mind in their school life, who have developed the sense of fair-play in competitive games, and who also develop the faculty of thinking in the pinches and of taking the initiative. Our educational system may not be perfect, but it is reaching toward an ideal."

THE CONSUMERS' LEAGUE.

An interesting item from Ottawa the other day was to the effect that a number of Senators and M.P.'s have formed an organization to be known as the Consumers' League of Canada. It is proposed to incorporate and to be represented at all sittings of the Tariff Advisory Board. The Organizing Committee, in a statement just issued, points out that applicants for tariff changes have always been well represented before the Board, and it will be the aim of the League "to present the facts as it sees them on the other side of the question."

No reasonable person can object to this plan. The interesting part of it is to see such an idea sponsored by Senators and members of Parliament. The purpose of the organization emphasizes, once more, the great difficulty that arises in connection with the setting up of high customs tariffs. Protecting an industry and at the same time protecting the consumer of the industry's goods, is anything but an easy matter. That is why so many persons are opposed to high tariffs or, in some cases, to any tariff.

The ideal arrangement, of course, is the establishment of some neutral, permanent, non-political body to regulate such matters. A certain industry, for instance, asks for a certain degree of tariff protection. This is granted. Later it is found that the industry is taking advantage of this protection and charging the public an unwarranted price for its goods. In these circumstances there is only one proper course to be taken, and that is a reduction of the industry's tariff scale or, if necessary, the wiping out of this protection. Just as certain greedy hotelmen carried the whole business of keeping hotels into bad repute some years ago and finally brought on prohibition, so it is possible for a few greedy manufacturers to make conditions unpleasant and impossible for the whole manufacturing industry. If one manufacturer takes advantage of his protection in order to gouge the buying public, he establishes in the minds of a large number of persons an antipathy to the general principle of tariff protection and thus works a hardship on a dozen other industries that are selling their goods at fair prices.

The principle of tariff protection is an excellent one for the building up of a young country and the maintenance of large scale industry in others. There are limits, however, beyond which it is not safe to extend the idea. The United States, often pointed to as the most highly protected nation in the world, is slowly finding this out. Uncle Sam, surrounded by a towering tariff wall, now finds that it is not as easy to do business with other nations as before. International trade cannot continue forever as a one-sided proposition. If Uncle Sam desires to sell, he must also be prepared to buy, but those who have things to sell cannot do business with possible American buyers if the tariff wall extends beyond a certain point. It follows, then, that if these persons with something to sell cannot dispose of their wares in the United States, they will either lack funds with which to buy American automobiles, sewing machines and other products, or else make these purchases from countries adopting a friendlier attitude.

The tariff has been the football of Canadian politics for many years. It has been discussed from every imaginable angle. The appointment by the King Government of the Tariff Advisory Board is a step in the right direction. Eventually, it is hoped, something of great value will come out of this move. The Board, as at present constituted, has no real powers. It hears evidence, collects data and makes recommendations to the administration. Some time in the future, perhaps, the Board will be vested with more authority. Through it the tariff may be taken out of politics and put on a genuinely business basis. If this is done and if a high standard is maintained in the personnel of the Board, the change should be an excellent thing for Canada.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Now it is claimed that the Germans are building a huge air fleet. Hadn't Miss MacPhail and Mr. Woodsworth better collaborate in a letter to them at once?

The freight rates inquiry by the Board of Railway Commissioners will wind up next week. Any month now the Board is liable to get round to the question of the cost of transporting Alberta coal into Ontario.

Hon. J. S. Martin doesn't like canned music. And undoubtedly there is much that is disheartening in hearing a male chorus singing "Show Me the Way to Go Home" around 4 o'clock in the morning.

Teacher at the Ontario convention complains that a young fellow of his acquaintance who was a leader in sport at school is now selling ribbons. He couldn't have been a good hockey player.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, April 22 (Canadian Press).—With reference to the export business in Canadian Spring wheat in Montreal yesterday, exporters stated that cable advices received were very discouraging owing to the Canadian Wheat Pool underselling them in all foreign markets from 3 to 5 cents per bushel.

There was a fair demand for ocean grain room here yesterday and a moderate amount of business was done for May loading to United Kingdom ports at 3c to 3s 3d per quarter. The inquiry for room to the Continent continued good of which the offerings here were somewhat limited and rates were firm at 16 1-2c per hundred pounds to Antwerp and Rotterdam, and at 17 1-2c per hundred pounds to Hamburg.

The volume of business accomplished in the domestic grain market was small, but prices were firm.

Owing to the continued strength in cash wheat prices at Winnipeg, a stronger feeling developed here for Spring wheat grades of flour, and prices were marked up 10 cents per barrel. There was no change in prices for Winter wheat grades and business was quiet.

A feature of the millfeed trade was the continued good inquiry from the United States at high prices, but owing to the curtailed production by millers here of late the offerings were small and no business of importance was accomplished. The local and country demand was fair and values were unchanged.

The egg market was moderately active and firm. The receipts were 2,359 cases.

A stronger feeling developed in the butter market and prices were marked up 1-4c to 1-2c per pound. This was attributed to the temporary scarcity of creamery butter and the good demand. The receipts were 1,007 packages.

The trade in cheese continued inactive, but values were unchanged. The receipts were 406 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, April 22 (Canadian Press).—Widespread freezing weather, with reports of crop damage southwest and of increased delay to seeding northwest carried wheat sharply higher yesterday. The volume of future delivery trading was the largest witnessed in many weeks and North American export sales totalled more than 1,000,000 bushels.

Wheat closed strong 1-2c to 2 1-4c net higher; corn 1-4 to 3-8c off to 5-8c up; oats 3-8c advance and provisions varying from 22 cent decline to a rise of 5 cents.

Selling out of corn against buying of wheat to close spreads had a bearish effect on the corn market. Cash demand for corn failed to improve. Oats were responsive to unfavorable weather and to some export business at higher prices.

In the provision market lard was firm but meats were lower. Grain strength partly offset weakness of hog values.

Sound Security

THE first form of security was probably that of a first mortgage on real estate. The best real estate is that which is improved and centrally located on main thoroughfares in large cities.

We have on hand several blocks of First Mortgage Bonds as above described and which yield from 6½ to 7%.

DISTURBERS OF THE NIGHT

This is written while lying in my berth in a Pullman Sleeper—I have been trying to go to sleep, but someone down the aisle is keeping me awake by snoring.

Tomorrow is a strenuous day of lectures and I do so need the rest which will fit me for my work tomorrow. But it's no use—I might just as well write you a message while waiting for that man to choke or else turn over. I hope he reads this and passes it along to his fellow bugle players.

No one can snore consistently who is not troubled with some catarrhal disorder, affecting the nasal passages. When the breath is forcibly drawn in through the open mouth or through an inflamed nose a vibratory flapping of the Uvula or soft palate is produced, which makes the unearthly sound of snoring.

A single snore can disrupt an entire household. Only a little while ago I read of a woman who secured a divorce because her husband snored so she could not get a good night's sleep.

A patient recently came to me with a funny proposition. He said his wife insisted on building a separate sleeping room for him in the back yard, because no matter in what room he slept in the house he kept the family awake. He thought it might be cheaper to cure the snoring and sleep with his family. I assured him that the cure was easy and would cost him very little. I told him the greater hardship would be the throwing away of certain bad habits. He agreed to do anything, and so after a few days had lost his snore. WHAT DID HE DO? Simply stopped eating starchy food. This banished his nasal catarrh and allowed him to breathe freely through his nose. If he continues to follow good dietetic rules he will remain cured.

Children who sleep with their mouths open have either enlarged tonsils, adenoids or irritated nose membranes. Giving up the use of milk, bread, candy or whatever is causing the inflammation will bring results in a few days, as the glands or membranes return to their normal condition.

If all the snorers were compelled to sleep together for a few nights they would soon determine to search out the cure and give their families a chance to rest.

The hideous noise keeps up down the aisle, so I am going to open the window a little more, and maybe the healthier sound of the click, click of the car wheels will lull me into slumberland.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

THE NECK OF THE BOTTLE

By Dr. Frank Crane.

Thomas A. Edison recently was interviewed upon his idea of what the cities of the future would be like.

The thing that will bring about most of the big changes in our cities, he said, will be attempts to solve the traffic problem.

The cities of today were built for horses and pedestrians.

Narrow streets and sidewalks took care of all the slow-moving traffic of the day.

In less than twenty-five years the automobile has changed the whole problem of city building.

Automobiles take more people at greater speed from place to place. Movement is accelerated in all directions. When there is a tie-up its effect spreads to great distances.

"The contents of a bottle," says Mr. Edison, "are so much, the capacity of that bottle's neck is so much. Any mathematician who is worth his salt can tell you how rapidly those contents can flow in or out."

In every large city there are certain arteries of traffic that lead to and from busy sections. The traffic pours into them and there most of the serious tie-ups occur.

Increasing the capacity of such arteries, or building others to take care of part of the traffic, is the first step.

In many cities a single bridge spanning a river is the neck of the bottle through which the traffic of the whole city has to pass. Thus the movement of traffic all over the city is slowed up because the neck of the bottle is not equal to the contents that must be poured out.

Two other ways in which traffic will influence the future cities are suggested by the inventor.

Traffic lights will be synchronized so large blocks of machines can go for considerable distances at a time without being stopped; and in time two kinds of streets will be recognized. There will be "express" streets and "accommodation" streets.

The former will take care of the fast traffic and the latter of the slow traffic.

SOME FIGURES LIE

Figures don't lie; you can prove anything by statistics according to a New York statistician. We wish the professor would provide us with the figures that prove $36.50 is too much for a piece of felt with a feather in it just before Easter. . . . Among the early Greeks the wearing of breeches was a mark of slavery. But now the ladies are starting to wear the breeches, and if they're slaves then Nero was a cousin of Uncle Tom. . . Theatres

AT THE GRAND

THE DUMBELLS

Those patrons who are in the habit of arriving at the theatre just a few seconds after the curtain has gone up on the first act, are going to miss something really new in the way of revue openings unless they come a few minutes ahead of time to see the Dumbells newest offering, "That's That." The prologue of this new revue is shrouded in deepest mystery. The intensity of the action demands deepest attention, and no one will be admitted through the doors after the overture until the prologue is completed. It runs about seven minutes. The curtain rises on a darkened stage. Hooded characters dart to and fro. The arch criminal has gathered his conspirators together to swear them to the oath of allegiance and to perfect the final details of a crime that is about to be perpetrated upon a group of innocent people. So secret is the sinister plot that those who see the show are requested to refrain from discussing the action with any who have not witnessed it for themselves.

After this unusual beginning the action of the revue jumps immediately into the lighter vein so characteristic of The Dumbells' cleverly constructed musical entertainment.

Captain Plunkett announces no less than twenty-seven brand new items in his program of "That's That", and further states that they are not only new, in the sense that they have not been offered here before, but that they are different both in idea and treatment from the usual material included in his previous revues.

"That's That" is the attraction at the Grand tomorrow afternoon and evening.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"THE FIRE BRIGADE."

This feature is one of those productions in which the audience develops a strong personal interest. As it unfolds itself, they appear to get intensely interested, more so, perhaps, than in the war scenes of the picture, "Mons," which preceded it this week. There were quite a few audible sniffs in rear seats as the two fire-fighters, Joe and Jim O'Neill, gave their lives in pursuit of their duty. The spectacle of firemen engaged in the precarious work that entails so much risk, particularly in the immense cities, also carries a thrill, and the producers of this picture lost no advantage, in the inclusion of strong human interest, romance and tender humour, to make it appealing to the majority of its watchers. Even the early leavers who reach for coats and hats at the beginning of the last reel congregated on the stairs for the last glimpse of Terry, the "rookie" fire-fighter, as he received a medal for bravery, and for the final look at the old mother who had given two sons to the service.

The O'Neill family covered several generations of fire-fighters, and the picture shows the old "Grandpop," chief of an antiquated brigade whose three old white horses, 'rolling out" on the fourth alarm to the huge Orphanage fire, pass the motor-driven truck with the old engine belching fire behind them, and his three grandsons, Joe, Jim and Terry. Joe and Jim give their lives in attempts to save property that has been put up by unscrupulous builders, and then Terry goes after the head man of the gang, Corwin, and defies him in his own house, telling him of the children involved in the Orphanage, which has been put up with cheap concrete by his workers. Matters are complicated, of course, by the romance of Terry and Corwin's daughter, Helen.

Finally, the newly-built Orphanage, on rotten foundations, goes up in flames, and here is the big scene, with the might of the fire-fighters and their equipment demonstrated to the full. Terry is caught beneath faling timbers, but wrenches himself free and saves the life of a tiny child, walking near the edge of the upper coping. The picture ends with a satisfactory flourish for the boy and his mother and sweetheart.

One of the entertaining episodes in the career of Benson at Calford, in the "Collegian" series, is also included in the programme for the last half of this week. —Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT.

"ISLE OF RETRIBUTION' DARING DEPARTURE FROM USUAL MELODRAMA.

The lash of a thousand icy winds is felt in F.B.O.'s "The Isle of Retribution," presented at the Regent Theatre last night before a suddenly alert audience. The engaging title of this film bears out the really fine qualities James Hogan, its director, has injected into it. We have had pictures of the north before in plentiful but monotonous profusion, but I dare say that "The Isle of Retribution" will make a deeper impression upon the experienced movie public than any of its predecessors.

The reason might be ascribed to the peculiar atmosphere surrounding every foot of the film. From the standpoint of action the central figure is Doomsdorf (played excellently and with discretion by Victor M'Laglen) who is an ex-convict, escaped from the Sibernian salt-mines some years before, and living in brooding loneliness on a little known Arctic island with only a grimacing squaw to keep him company. In this forbidding world of ice, snow and cold comes a forlorn group from the most effete of modern civilizations, cast on the island by a shipwreck. In portraying the manner in which Doomsdorf, for the first time since his escape from Siberia put in contact with civilization, assumes a despotic and leering mastery over the bewildered group under his hand, Mr M'Laglen has done a notable piece of work. The plot is a sound and fascinating one, revolving about the motif of regeneration in the soul of a rich wastrel, coupled with his suddenly awakened love for a courageous woman. Lillian Rich is splendid, while Mildred Harris playing a scheming adventuress also cast up on the island with the rest, does the best work of her long career. Mr. Frazer, portraying the regenerated wastrel, is his usual competent self. "The Isle of Retribution" is decidedly worth seeing.

The Painter and Decorator is very important to the welfare and progress of the community. In the aggregate, he represents an army of professional knowledge, beautifying homes and preserving them against the ravages of time and the elements. He saves thousands of dollars for property owners—give him royal welcome!

Each recurring year has marked a step forward in their mercantile career, with a growing patronage exceeding their most sanguine expectations when opening up.

In both suits, coats and furnishings Maher and Wesley, to use their own words, "pride themselves on giving the utmost in value and complete satisfaction for every dollar left with them," and as a fitting observance of their business birthday they have prepared a striking array of special values in character clothing—ready-to-wear, semi-ready and made-to-measure. Discriminating men and young men who like to dress correctly, are invited to drop in at 188 Charlotte street, and look over the appealing toggery for all occasions—garments that look well, will fit well and wear well—being featured for this anniversary.—(Adv.)

SYNDICATE BUY ROCHESTER CLUB

Final Payment Made for 17,000 Shares of Common Stock.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., April 22.—(Canadian Press).—The sale of the Rochester Baseball Club of the International League to George T. Stallings, Walter E. Hapgood, and a "civic group" of seven whose identity has not been disclosed, was completed yesterday.

Hapgood announced that he had made to William C. Daly, real estate operator, the final payment according to contract, and had received 17,000 shares of common stock, giving the group control of the club. The sale price was not made public.

A tentative lease on the old ball park in Bay Street also passed into the possession of the group to be held pending the time when Daly may obtain full title to the plot. It is expected that the club's new stadium and grounds in Norton Street may be completed before the season ends, possibly by late in August, and that the club then will move to that location.

Present plans provide for the retention of Stallings as president and manager and of Hapgood as secretary and business manager.

GOLF IS COMING

With the coming of Spring comes the fascinating game of golf and many participants in this interesting game are longing for the near future when they can once more start "digging up the golf course." This year the local club has approximately two hundred and fifty members. Even now many of these have started the games for the season, but they are at present playing on a temporary course. Secretary F. L. Bradburn told The Examiner today that if the weather permitted they would open the regular course on the fourteenth of May, and that date will see many clubs taken from cupboards. After shining them up the owner will wend his way up to the links and engage in his favorite pastime.

The opening, as stated before will be on the fourteenth of May but the official opening will not be until the twenty-fourth of the same month.

BREWERY BOOKS UNDER DISCUSSION

Auditor Says He Did Not Authorize Their Destruction.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 22.—(Canadian Press).—Destruction of the books of three Ontario breweries, the Sudbury Brewing and Malting Company, the Soo Falls Brewing Company, and the Kakabeka Fals Brewing Company, was investigated further before the Royal Customs Commission yesterday morning. This case opened during the Toronto Sittings, when officials of the three companies concerned took the stand and admitted the destruction of books and documents.

George Milne, sales tax auditor, who went into the books of the Sudbury Company, said that he never gave authorization in any form for the destruction of the books. He told the officers of the company that he was finished with the books when he concluded his audit, but that was only in order that they might be put away. Today the counsel will argue the question as to whether or not the licenses of these three companies should be cancelled or suspended because of the destruction of the records.

EASTER SERVICES

AT MARMORA

MARMORA, April 22.—Easter morning services at St. Paul's were of the brightest character and exceptionally well attended. The church was prettily adorned with choice blooms sent by absent members of the congregation. The total number of communicants was eighty, the highest for many years, the church being filled with worshippers at the eleven o'clock celebration. At this service the choir gave a very fine rendering of the anthem, "Hosanna," by Jules Granier, Mrs. F. S. Pearce taking the solo part. The Rector's Easter message was based upon John 20:16. "There is no more beautiful picture in the whole Bible" he asserted "than the picture of the first Easter morn." Having portrayed the scene at the sepulchre upon the arrival of Mary Magdalene, he continued: "Mary's thoughts were turning backward to the life of Jesus Christ. She was recalling the bitterness of her life before meeting with Christ, and then that meeting with Him in His spotless holiness. He had loved and pitied her in that holiness, and thus led her to repentance and filled her soul with obedience and love.

"As He died, she had stood by the cross and later had watched where they had lain His body. All lay behind that stone. The future was a blank to her. Her consciousness lay in the past. She came to the tomb with the purpose of arresting the dissolution of His body. How sad she felt when it appeared to her that His body had been taken away. So she stood without the sepulchre, weeping unconsolably.

"Then His greeting of her with the word 'Mary' pricked her conscience to the fact that He who lay in the tomb stood before her, as her risen Saviour. Henceforth, her whole life vibrated with the fact 'Jesus lives.' The dead body of Jesus had been to Mary her Lord, but she was turned back to devotion to the living Christ. Is that the kind of devotion that is ours today? The rejoicing that Christ is risen from the dead is not very common. We are tempted to make devotion to Christ a sweet sad memory of the past. We want not to think so much of His having risen from the dead nigh on two thousand years ago, but that He is rising day by day. Day by day we crucify Him and day by day He must be resurrected. He rises day by day for us all, bringing before our thoughts and minds, a living loving Saviour, who now intercedes for us above, because He ascended up on high and sits at the right hand of the Father."

At the children's service preceding, another special address was given by Rev. A. B. Caldwell. Mite boxes brought in by the Sunday school members totalled nearly forty dollars.

United Church.

There was a large congregation at the United church on Sunday evening for the Easter service. Appropriate hymns and the anthem, "God so Loved The World" (Stainer), made the service most inspiring.

The pastor, Rev. C. J. Beekley, preached on the resurrection in very arresting style.

AT BETHANY

BETHANY, April 21—The Easter holiday passed very quietly in the village. Special service was held in St. Paul's church on Friday evening. Also on Thursday evening when Archdeacon Davidson of Toronto was the special speaker.

Again on Sunday special Easter services were held in both St. Paul's and the United Church. In the afternoon the Sunday School of the United church had a record attendance of 116, when an Easter programme was rendered.

AT BURNBRAE

BURNBRAE, April 21 — Easter was fittingly observed at St. Andrew's on Sunday when capacity crowds greeted the pastor, Rev. D. A. McKenzie, at both morning and evening services. Special music was rendered by the choir on both occasions with splendid assistance by the junior choir in the service of praise. Two anthems were given at the morning service, "Christ Arose" and "Jesus Lives." At the evening session Mrs. Charles Milne, retiring choir leader, rendered a beautiful solo, "He Keepeth My Soul."

In the morning Rev. Mr. McKenzie took as his text John 20:20 "Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord." Easter one of the greatest religious festivals because it celebrates the world's greatest personality, Jesus Christ; the greatest religion, Christianity; the world's greatest sorrow, death; and man's sublimest hope, the hope of immortality; the darkest and saddest day in history, Good Friday; and the brightest and gladdest Easter morn when Christ arose from the grave.

The resurrection one of the corner stones of Christian faith and hope. Christians should rejoice in the resurrection since it gives the hope of immortality.

Easter teaches a lesson of power enabling man to rise above the selfish nature and by faith cling to God.

Easter symbolizes a spiritual resurrection from a life of sin to a life of faith, each and every one must decide on his future destiny whether he will enjoy endless life.

The text for the evening service was Luke 7:14 "Young man I say unto thee, arise." The speaker showed the necessity and importance of Christian living and consecrating the life for the glory of God and the betterment of mankind. In closing Mr. McKenzie asked his audience to dwell in thought on the immortality of the soul.

A special Sunday school service before the morning session was very interesting with music by the junior choir. Seventy-seven were in attendance which is above the average for this season of the year.

IN WARSAW CHURCHES.

WARSAW, April 21.—On Friday evening there was the regular Good Friday service in the Anglican Church. It is some time since they have been able to have this service, and it was appreciated very much. At eight o'clock on Easter Sunday morning the Easter Holy Communion service was observed, and in the evening the beautiful Easter service of the church was held. The orchestra assisted with the music, and the pretty little church, which had been freshly cleaned, was beautifully decorated with cut flowers and plants.

The Baptist people had a special service on Easter Sunday morning. The regular pastor was away. Mr. Tramter, a student of McMaster, preached on the Resurrection Morn, and he and Miss Stenton from Toronto sang two duets. The first was "One Day" and the other was "There's a Hill Lone and Grey."

Rev. H. B. Herrington held Easter services on Sunday morning at Bethel, and in the evening at Warsaw. Bethel and Warsaw choirs united and were assisted by Misses Hamblin and Watley with their violins. Bethel Church was very pretty with plants, well arranged. Warsaw Church was decorated with Easter colors, Easter lilies, while geraniums and green plants. Mr. Herrington preached from the text, "And their eyes were opened."

FARM NEWS AND PROBLEMS

BURNLEY CHEESE MAKERS DECIDE CO-OPERATE WITH CHEESE BOARD

United Dairymen Propose Establishing Cold Storage Plant in Campbellford.

REAL CO-OPERATION.

Big Increase in Amount of Cheese Expected in Northumberland County.

A well-attended meeting of the patrons of Burnley Cheese Company was held recently at "Burnley Hall," in Northumberland County, when the milk routes of the factory were sold for the coming season and other business transacted. The Burnley Cheese Company has for many years enjoyed membership in the Belleville Cheese Board of Trade, and to the patrons of the factory the officers of the Belleville board conveyed greetings and best wishes.

After the business session was concluded, Mr. S. L. Joss of Belleville, representing the United Dairymen Company informed the meeting that his organization was providing cold storage accommodation at Campbellford to care for new business in the district, advocated the advantages of their system of selling and solicited the business of the Burnley Company, indicating the splendid and rapid growth of trading through his company. Mr. Joss predicted they would enjoy an increase of business approximating 40,000 boxes of cheese this season in the Campbellford section alone.

Favors Established System.

The meeting was then addressed by Mr. W. R. McCreary, an active member of the Belleville Board, and it was evident Mr. McCreary was well versed regarding the activities of the U. D. C. He took occasion to state after personal experience with both systems of marketing that he had definitely concluded genuine co-operation prevailed to the greater degree under the established system of board selling.

The Cheese Board membership is made up of salesmen appointed by the different cheese manufacturing establishments and the exporters themselves or their accredited representatives. Salesmen are invariably men of outstanding ability and integrity in their respective communities and all were anxious to maintain the high standard of quality of their product and keen to obtain therefor the highest possible price.

At the weekly sales of the board the business is conducted publicly, where the buying is achieved openly and fairly upon competitive basis. This system had developed the Belleville Cheese Board to its present enviable position as one of the leading barometers of value for high-grade cheese in the Dominion.

Such system of selling farm products is really the ideal method in the interests of producers, and in other parts of Canada to-day producers of farm products are advocating this identical system and demanding the elimination of the system entailing the risks, uncertainties and dissatisfaction of consignment shipping through commission firms.

It was pointed out that the advantages now enjoyed by cheese factories with direct representation in board selling was being radically altered in any departure therefrom and under which factories became but "regulars" in a consignment business from which brokerage fees were exacted from purchasers as well as the sellers.

The disadvantages of a central controlled system were clearly indicated by the failure of the New Zealand Control Board effort this present spring to maintain prices in England, and where now the cheese were being dumped on the market in enormous quantities to the detriment of sound business. The losses incurred thereby were running into millions of dollars and mostly from the pockets of the milk producers themselves.

Any conscientious cheese factory patron who believed in real co-operative effort was actually furthering such ideal in continuing to maintain and support the board system thereby retaining supervision of and conducting their own business!

Exporter's View.

Mr. Mark Sprague, well-known cheese exporter of Belleville and a member of the Belleville Cheese Board of Trade, also spoke briefly but with effect. Mr. Sprague has been engaged in the dairying business since he was thirteen years of age, and contended the board system of selling practised at Belleville had been entirely satisfactory to all factories there as evidenced by their unanimous and continued allegiance.

He claimed that the interests of the trader in Canadian cheese and the interests of the consumers who made the trade possible must be at all times considered. It was manifest that no one class was paramount in the business, but that the railroads and water transportation companies, the banks, and the traders who put their money into the product, were all essential factors in the successful conduct of the trade.

In closing, Mr. Sprague maintained it had been the united effort of all concerned for several decades past that had made possible the reputation to-day enjoyed by the Cheddar Cheese produced by Canadian manufacturers; and irrespective of theories advanced by any persons or organizations to the contrary he stated that the law of supply and demand would continue to operate in the cheese trade in like manner to that of all other business.

The marketing question was ably presented by the different speakers, and their effort brought forth the unanimous vote of thanks of the meeting. Immediately thereafter upon a vote being taken the patrons of the Burnley Company almost without exception decided to continue their co-operation with the Belleville Cheese Board of Trade.

New Plant Insecticide May Rival Nicotine

An oil prepared from pyradine, which is obtained from coal-tar distillation, soon may rival nicotine as an insecticide against plant lice, according to experiments conducted by the United States bureau of entomology.

Entomologists believe it possible that dipridyl oil, as the new compound is called, may prove more effective than nicotine for the practical control of some injurious insects.

OXFORD COUNTY STANDS ALONE

Only District in Ontario That Can Take Advantage of New Law.

BETTER BULL AREA.

WOODSTOCK.—Oxford County in the near future will become the only county in the Province of Ontario to be declared a "better bull area" under the protection of Cattle Act passed at the present session of the Ontario Legislature. After a lengthy discussion, the Agricultural Advisory Committee of the County Council, which is composed of two-thirds of the whole Council, decided to have a by-law passed taking advantage of the provisions of the Act, which applies only to counties in which over 80 per cent. of the bulls are pure bred. The latest census figures show that Oxford has 80.2 per cent. registered pure-bred bulls, 15 per cent. unregistered pure-bred bulls, and only 4.8 per cent. grade bulls, and that it is the only county in the province which can come up to the requirements of the Act. Notice has been received from R. W. Wade of the Live Stock Department of the Ontario Department of Agriculture to the effect that the department is prepared to accept the above census figures, and to have Oxford declared as Ontario's only "better bull area."

FLOCK MANAGEMENT.

Milk in Class By Itself As a Poultry Food Says Professor.

By Professor W. R. Graham, Poultry Dept., O.A.C., Guelph.

There are a few things that are within one's method of handling a flock, that may be done which, with us, increased the hatching power of the fertile eggs.

In order for hens to lay well, they generally have to have some animal protein; that is, insects, worms, meat, beef scrap, tankage or milk. Generally speaking, one feeds about one ounce of meat to each bird daily, or about 15 per cent of beef scrap or animal meat in a dry or wet mash, or both. One hundred hens should drink a pail of skim milk or buttermilk daily, if they are going to lay 50 per cent or better.

Our experiments show that of the above feeds that are available during the winter, milk in some form stands in a class by itself, as a feed to produce eggs for hatching.

We find that the addition of about one-half teacup of cod liver oil to the mash daily, for one hundred hens, also increases the hatching power of the eggs. With us, it is much better with milk than with the other meat feeds.

The feeding of clover meal, or the clover leaves that fall where the hay is thrown down for the other livestock, appears to help produce a better egg to hatch.

Then, perhaps the best and cheapest factor to help the hatch is direct sunlight; that is, where the hen sits or stands or scratches in the sunlight, not behind glass, but in the direct rays. You may have several easy methods of getting this hen out of doors i the sunlight. If she exercises in the straw, etc., in the barnyard, and in the sunlight, it may help your hatch of chicks as much as 15 or 20 per cent.

We are not so particular what grains or what mash you feed, as these do not appear to make as much difference in hatching eggs as to the feeds mentioned above.

Scratch Grains—½ Cracked Corn, ½ Wheat. Mash—700 lbs. corn chop, 500 shorts, 300 oat chop, 150 alfalfa meal, 7 fine table salt, 3 gallons cod liver oil.

The birds eat about 6 pounds of scratch grain to 4 lbs. of mash. The grain is fed in straw, night and morning. The dry mash is in hoppers or boxes before the birds at all times, and the oil in most cases is mixed in a moist mash and given at noon. Each hundred hens drink about a pailful of buttermilk daily.

Wool Shipments Heavier.—The Manitoba-Saskatchewan branch of the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers reports having handled 539,379 pounds of wool and pelts in 1926, which is an increase of 117 shipments or 122,265 pounds over 1925, an increase of approximately 30 per cent. The branch now has 4,700 names of sheep owners on its mailing list; 2,300 in Manitoba and 2,400 in Saskatchewan.

A RECORDBREAKER

Setting a world record for individual production in tests held at Agassiz, B.C., in 1926, "Hen No. 6," pictured above, laid 351 eggs in 365 days. The fowl was one of a pen of ten, all of whom were serious contenders in the competition. Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture in the Ferguson government, was given the credit of owning the hen, which is incorrect, as the hen was raised by the University of British Columbia. Mr. Martin is shown at the left, and in the centre is a view of a number of the poultry houses on his farm at Port Dover, Ont.

POULTRY CONGRESS IS GREAT EVENT

Six Thousand People Will Take Part in Exhibition at Ottawa.

The coming of the World's Poultry Congress to Ottawa this year will mean much to Canada. The dates on which the great convention and exhibition falls are July 27 to August 4. They coincide with the celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of the Confederation of the Dominion. The falling together of the two events is particularly appropriate.

In a foreword to the final program of the congress just issued from Ottawa, Premier W. L. Mackenzie King puts the matter admirably in the following words:

"It is fitting that a nation which embraces former citizens of many nations should entertain representative citizens of these nations, and that opportunity should be afforded the latter to note Canada's vast development in the sixty years since Confederation, and the prosperity attained by the stranger from a foreign land, who makes his home in Canada. The people of Canada extend to you a warm welcome, . . ."

It is conservatively estimated that six thousand delegates and others having to do with the congress will be in attendance. These will go to Ottawa for the business proceedings of the convention and to see the great poultry show in connection therewith. But many hundreds of them will take the opportunity to travel as far as possible over the Dominion. In two chief directions good results will flow from this friendly invasion of thousands of representatives of nearly two score foreign nations. It will lead to closer understanding between peoples, for there is nothing like personal contact to disperse prejudices and mistaken notions. It will lead to increased business in many important directions.

Canadians should be prepared to do all in their power to co-operate towards making the World's Poultry Congress the memorable success it ought to be. All interested may obtain particulars of this great and significant event from the World's Poultry Congress Secretary, Ernest Rhoades, Transportation Building, Ottawa, Canada.

SOFT-SHELLED EGGS

During this month and next there will be many complaints of soft-shelled eggs. These may be caused occasionally by a lack of shell material but, as a rule, that deficiency in the ration is much more likely to result in reduced production and undersized eggs with normal shells. A large majority of soft-shelled eggs are caused by derangements of the egg organs, due either to overstimulation or to the fowls becoming overfat.

ELEVATOR EXTENSIONS

Additions to three grain storage units at Port Arthur, increasing capacity by 2,600,000 bushels, for which contracts have been let, will give elevators there a total storage capacity of 32,750,000 bushels in the 14 plants. In the Twin Cities there are 34 elevators, with a present capacity of 63,850,000, and the additions will bring this to 66,450,000 bushels or nearly 10,000,000 more than St. Paul-Minneapolis, which now has 67 elevators.

VERY VALUABLE PEDIGREED HORSE.

Harry Clay, sired by Zombro Clay and Dam Jean Kelly, has been purchased by J. T. O'Connell the past week at Toronto, and brought to Peterborough. Mr. O'Connell should be complimented on bringing such a valuable horse to Peterborough county.

Results of sweet clover as silage would warrant it being used for this purpose, especially where the corn borer makes the corn crop uncertain. Few plants will give an equal amount of pasture to sweet clover or leave the soil in better condition for the following crop.

HENS ARE RAISED ON SYNTHETIC DIET

No Grain is Fed Hens From the Time They Are Hatched.

By NEA Service.

COLUMBUS, O.—The remarkable achievement of producing synthetic eggs from hens fed a purely synthetic diet has been accomplished by aA. R. Winter of the poultry department of Ohio State University.

Winter selected a group of one-day-old chicks and for 13 weeks gave them every advantage of sunlight and development of normal birds, except that he limited their food to a mixture of starch, casein, crisco, salt mixture, agar, cod liver oil and yeast.

The chicks were raised in Ohio State University cages with other birds to compare them with the normal fowl. The pullets fed a synthetic diet appeared normal and the quality of the eggs they produced were similar to normal eggs, except they were incapable of hatching, thus defeating any attempts to produce a real synthetic chick.

Eggs Infertile.

"Although the synthetic feeding of the pullets was a success," Winter explains, "the infertile characteristic of the eggs produced has made it impossible to produce a genuine synthetic chick. However, further experiments will be conducted.

"The shell of the egg appeared normal in every respect. The yolks were almost colorless and the whites appeared a little more watery than usual."

The pullets were fed only purified foods from the time they were hatched. They never tasted corn, wheat, oats, milk, grass or the things that make up a large part of the diet of the ordinary laying hen.

Vitamines Cause Changes.

"The only serious deficiencies in the synthetic ration," Winter explains, "were vitamines C and E. The lack of vitamine E may have been the cause for the eggs being infertile. This is the vitamine that regulates reproduction.

"Experiments show that the growing chick must have vitamines A, B and D for adequate growth. Apparently B is needed most of all and then A and D."

When vitamine B, supplied by the yeast, was intentionally eliminated from the diet, the chicks deprived of this food died within 14 days.

The benefit of vitamine C, obtained from lemon juice, in the chicks' diet was shown by the fact that the birds lacking this vitamine fared worse than the others.

GARDEN PATHS

Paths add much to the attractiveness of any flower garden or lawn. If a supply of limestone is plentiful and cheap, a pleasing effect may be produced by paving crazy style or in regular fashion. Simply dig out sod or soil the same size and exact depth of your stone and plant irregularly. If this is done carefully, the lawn mower will run right over and no trimming will be necessary. The central path of the garden should be in line with the centre of the back porch or with a window commanding the view if the porch is so placed that it is impracticable as an axis. To round off, have the path lead up to a rose-covered garden seat or archway through the flower garden into the vegetable patch. If there is room, the main path may circle a garden pool in which water plants are growing, or if this is too elaborate, a bird bath or sun dial may be used for similar effect.

Judging by the quality of much of the live stock coming on to the markets, it is as necessary as ever to continue to preach the gospel of using only the best sires and eliminate the mongreal or scrub from our midst.

When price of hogs is dropping the percentage of selects very often decreases, owing to a lot of underfinished pigs being shipped in the rush to unload before a further slump. It usually pays to condition all classes of stock before marketing.

Refused $4,000 Offer.—An Illinois Shorthorn breeder has informed the Breeders' Gazette, that he recently visited the herd of Jas. Douglas and Sons, Caledonia, Ont., and attempted to buy their champion herd sire Browndale Guard. So well did he like him and his development that he offered 4,000 for him, but Messrs. Douglas refused to sell, on account of the fact that he is now one of their regular herd sires.

Every little pig and lamb has a potential value and should be given every chance to develop.

SYMBOL

By PETER A. LEA

The fields are ready, and the plow-boy whistles
Gay to his horses as the earth he turns,
And the full rich loam rids itself of thistles,
While brave birds follow, and the blue sky yearns
Above his head . . . forth and on he rides,
A symbol of man's eternal youth,
And of infinite growth that ever betides
Those who sow in beauty and plant in truth!

THE GROWING AND FRUITION PERIODS OF SEED

To the Agricultural Editor:

Dear Sir.—As I have already dealt with the dormant and germination period of seed, I wish to deal briefly with the growing and fruition periods.

The plant is a factory. As soon as the seed establishes itself in the soil, it shifts its dependence for food from that stored in the seed by the parent plant to that of its own manufacture. Thus the plant grows into a real manufacturing establishment, most wonderful and mysterious throughout. The cells and their contents represent the machinery, the raw materials taken in are the carbon dioxide, water and salts. The power is the energy of sunlight, and the products are the three plant foods' protein, sugar and fat. In this period the plant requires all the requirements and conditions required during germination with the addition of plant food elements and sunlight, and here again good tilth is very important to permit mellowness to permit air to enter and also to permit firmness to permit good contact between seed and soil.

During the fruition period the plant arrives at its full maturity; it reaches its object in life either the production of fruit or seed to propagate itself. This is when the grains fill and harden and fruits mature and ripen. This is not a period of food manufacture, but one of change of foods from stems and leaves to the fruit or seed. Air, moisture, and favorable temperature are the necessary requirements.

Now it is very important to have the very best seed available; poor seed in poor soils means miserable failure. Good seed in poor soil renders just as little returns as poor seed in good soil. Successful crop production, therefore, depends largely upon hitching up that splendid team—fertile soil and good seed. The highest grades of seed run about 99.60% purity and from 90 to 95% germination. This corresponds largely with registered seed, according to the Canadian Seed Act, but in place of this we find very largely a No. 2 seed sown, which according to the Canadian Seed Act, will allow 200 weed seeds to the ounce or possibly from 85% to 90% purity with a germination of 75%. Each farmer should have a copy of the seed Act, and study it carefully and when buying seed buy nothing but the highest grade, and if your dealer has not got it, send where you can get it, regardless of cost. Seed should never be weighed by dollars and cents. There are three conditions required for a good crop—1st, good conditions; 2nd, good seed; 3rd, good care.

Thanking you, I remain,
Yours, etc.,
W. H. Merrill.

To The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I was favored with invitations to two splendid meetings lately, held for the farmers, one was by Mr. Gillespie, manager of the Milk Products Company and the other by the Rotary Club of this city, at the Empress Hotel, both of these were for the purpose of bringing before the farmers the things the Ontario Government is doing for the men on the farms.

They were certainly splendid meetings. The best speakers in the Province addressed them, and told what was being done and what the Government was willing to do for the farmer.

Very good, but not a word about the important part women take on the farm. Why not? Are they only to be considered as cogs in the machine? We read most interesting accounts in "The Examiner" of the work done by the Women's Institutes in other localities in the Province. Why not in this locality? I attach a clipping from "The Mail and Empire" of last week, giving an account of what the National Council of Women in Toronto are doing to bring about a better state of affairs in the community. Why cannot our local Council of Women take a hand in bringing about better conditions in our district.

"A Man Farmer."

COUNCIL REACHING OUT TO THE INSTITUTES

In accordance with the wishes of its wise and far-seeing President, Mrs. J. A. Wilson, the National Council of Women, through its secretary, Mrs. Horace Parsons, has approached Mr. C. A. Putnam, Superintendent of the Institutes in Ontario, regarding federation between the Council and the Federated Women's Institutes.

As I have mentioned once or twice on this page, Mrs. Wilson is very keen to have closer co-operation between the women of the city and country, and as she understands the point of view of both, and has energy to push a good thing to a successful conclusion, there is every probability of her desires being realized.

The President of the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario, Mrs. C. Field Robertson, has been asked to attend, quite unofficially, the executive of the National Council in Ottawa, at the end of March

BUILDING UP WEAK COLONIES

Spring is the Time To Make Sure Hives Are Strong.

In every colony of bees there is a certain amount of routine work that has to be done no matter whether there is a crop of nectar awaiting to be gathered from the flowers or not. The amount of surplus honey that any colony can be expected to store will be in direct proportion to the number of bees it has over and above required to perform the routine of that colony. These extra bees are known as the field force and to produce them at the right time and of the right age requires skill and a knowledge of bee behaviour on the part of the beekeeper. The field force must be as large as possible and ready for work at the commencement of the main flow of nectar and to be of the right age must be produced during the six or eight weeks just prior to the flow. The first step is to have each colony headed with a good, prolific queen during the spring and early summer, as the queen is responsible for laying the eggs that will produce the workers. The second step is to have each colony strong enough in bees to take care of the maximum amount of brood the queen can produce. Weak colonies can be strengthened by any of the following methods, given in order of preference:

By uniting to them combless packages of bees imported early in the spring.

By giving combs of sealed brood from extra strong colonies.

By shaking into them some bees from extra strong colonies.

By placing the weak colonies over strong colonies with a queen excluder between, and leaving them there for from two to three weeks.

Remember, also, that it requires skill to rear bees and that protection from cold influences the rate of expansion of the brood nest.

PLANTING POTATOES.

One or Two Eyes To Each Piece Should Be the Rule.

Cut seed potatoes may be planted immediately after cutting or they may be kept for several days. But prolonged delay of planting after the seed has been cut, lowers the vitality of the seed, especially if the seed pieces are small. The practice of spraying the cut seed with lime is of doubtful value, though not injurious to the seed. The size of the seed pieces is more important. Small seed pieces under dry soil conditions may result in poor stands and in weak plants. Larger seed pieces are better. One or two eyes to each piece should be the rule. One eye, with pieces planted 12 inches apart, should give a maximum yield. Seed pieces with many eyes produce too many stalks to the hill, resulting in many small tubers.

Man is a very important factor in turning home-grown feeds to the highest value through the livestock. Improper combinations, too much or too little feed, dirty mangers and irregular feeding all work against getting the most out of the roughage and concentrates.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS

MUCH MOISTURE NEEDED ON SITE FOR APPLE TREE

Orchard Ground Must Cater To Demands of Trees For Water.

SUNSHINE, TOO.

Excesive Humidity of Air Will Cause Fungus Disease.

The usual rainfall in a district has an important influence on the success of an apple orchard and should be well considered before setting out a plantation. Apple trees are exorbitant in their demands on soil moisture and unless cheap irrigation is available they require an annual rainfall of at least twenty to twenty-five inches. This is explained clearly in a new bulletin on the cultivation of the apple in Canada, issued by the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. Excessive humidity is also to be avoided, states Mr. M. B. Davis, the author of the bulletin, as it means much expenditure in the control of fungus diseases. Sufficient sunshine to develop high color in the fruit is necessary. Where the season is short and cool it is difficult to grow marketable fruit. Due consideration must also be given to the winter temperature as orchards suffering from excessive winter injury are not profitable. Perhaps the most important consideration of all, however, is the availability of marketing facilities. Districts with ready markets for their products have an advantage that will offset a reasonable amount of winter injury or other drawbacks.

FARMERS BEHIND WHEAT POOL BILL

Wants Right to Designate Terminal Elevator for Shipment of Grain.

CALGARY, Alta., Mar. 30.—Reaffirming the previous stand of the Canadian wheat pool a resolution was unanimously adopted at a conference of directors of the inter-provincial pools, which opened in Calgary recently, asking that all possible steps be taken to include the passage in the Dominion House of what is commonly known as "Bill Number 2," giving the farmer the right to designate the terminal elevator to which he wants his grain shipped.

Outside of the foregoing resolution the greater part of the opening session was occupied with a discussion on the best method to adopt for the purpose of improving and maintaining the export standard of Canadian wheat.

It is learned that one of the most important matters that will require consideration at the present conference is the forthcoming international wheat-pool convention which opens at Kansas City, Mo., on May 2.

It is anticipated that the conference will achieve the most far-reaching results so far in the history of the co-operative marketing of wheat, inasmuch as greater effort will be made to bring about greater efficiency in the orderly flow of wheat to the market.

H. W. Wood, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Alberta pool, stated very definitely that there will be no endeavor made to form a world-wide pool or wheat monopoly with the object of unduly raising the price of wheat to consumers. He states such a suggestion is entirely erroneous. The object sought is simply a working agreement with similar organizations in other wheat-growing countries in order to regulate the flow of wheat to market.

SURVEY MONUMENTS.

There exists a continuous line of Dominion Lands survey monuments along the water-route from northern Alberta to the Arctic ocean. These monuments, established by the Topographical Survey, Department of the Interior, serve to locate the positions of mineral claims, squatters' improvements, trading posts, etc. The surveys have been the basis of a series of map-sheets covering the transportation routes.

WOOD-PULP INCREASES.

Production of wood-pulp in Canada for the first nine months of 1926 shows an increase of almost ten per cent—732,856 tons for 1926 compared with 669,203 tons for 1925.

CANADIAN SEED GROWERS WIN CHAMPIONSHIPS

Native Grown Seed Commands Recognition on Foreign Markets.

SUPERIOR QUALITY.

Canadian Alfalfa Crop Increases From 238,000 Acres To 858,000.

Canadian seed growers have not only had marvelous success in winning world's championships with exhibits of wheat at international shows, but they are obtaining similar successes with other seed crops.

At the recent international Hay and Grain Show at Chicago they secured the championship in alfalfa, timothy seed and field peas, and stood high in barley, alsike, clover, sweet clover, field beans, flax and rye. The individual growers deserve great credit for these achievements, but they have no doubt received valuable assistance from the Dominion Seed Branch and other organizations which encourage the production of high grade seed.

Canadian grown seeds command recognition of foreign markets by virtue of their inherent qualities of hardiness and vigour of growth. It is a fact, of which Europeans have long being aware, that, in the Northern ehmisphere, the further north any plant can be brought to perfection the higher will be its quality and that of its near descendants. It is significant that the world's championship in wheat and oats for 1926 was won by a settler in the Peace River district, which lies north of the regions where the bulk of our crops are now produced.

The superior quality of northern grown seed is nowhere more strikingly shown than in the success obtained with Canadian alfalfa seed. For a long time it was found difficult to grow alfalfa successfully in many parts of Canada, but the development of an ample supply of a hardy strain of seed has, to a certain extent, solved the problem of winter killing, and our alfalfa crop has increased from 238,000 acres in 1920 to 858,000 acres in 1926.

Import regulations of both Canada and the United States now require alfalfa and red clover seed of foreign production to be stained to the extent of one per cent of the seed in the sack. Canadian grown seed going to the United States must be stained violet, while United States seed coming to Canada is stained orange. French and Chilian seed imported into either country is stained green, while red is the colour allotted to seed from very warm climates.

The distinctive colour thus allotted to Canadian seed is a much-needed dependable guarantee of hardiness. That some such guarantee is necessary may be seen from the fact that winter killing of Canadian strains of Red Clover seldom exceeds two per cent, whereas crops from imported red clover seed are sometimes winter killed to the extent of 50 per cent.—Issued by the Director of Publicity, Dominion Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

DANISH BUTTER.

Success On English Market Due To Stringent Requirements.

Much of Denmark's success in capturing and holding a large trade for their butter in the British market has been due to their requirements in making and packing butter for market. Butter to be exported from that country must be made from pasturized cream containing no more than 16 per cent water and at least 80 per cent of milk fat. Aniline dyes only are to be used in colouring, and all the butter from week to week must maintain a certain uniform quality. The net weight must be stamped on the package, which must also show an indication of the date of manufacture.

TREATMENT FOR SMUT

For the treatment of oats and barley for the smut diseases the use of formaldehyde is recommended by the specialists. In this treatment one pint of commercial formalin to 40 gallons of water is used. For barley the soaking method of treatment is best. It should be soaked in the solution two hours. The method can also be used for oats which should be immersed for only five to ten minutes.

Other methods of treatment of the oats and barley with formaldehyde are known as the open tank, sprinkling and dry treatments. The dry method of treatment is used for oats only. In all cases where the formaldehyde treatment is used, care should be taken not to allow the wet grain to heat or freeze.

Oldest Breed Society.—Among British breed societies the oldest is the Clydesdale Horse Society, which celebrates its jubilee thisyear. Next in seniority comes the Shire Horse Society, was incorporated on July 11th, 1878—as nearly as might be one year later than the Clydesdale. The Suffolk Horse Society came somewhat later, and the Hackney Horse Society, the Hunters' Improvement Society and the rest of them followed.

King of the Fairies' Calves.—King of the Fairies, the grand champion Shorthorn bull at the Royal and International Shows in 1926, for the Prince of Wales, and sold at Chicago, following his win, to the Baker Shorthorn Farm, Missouri, has given his new owner a fine crop of calves. Several visitors to the farm have reported that the King of the Fairies' calves are a promising lot.

TALK GIVEN ON CANADIAN FRUIT

Miss Ethel Pearson Demonstrates Preserving and Canning Methods.

HELPFUL ADDRESS.

Miss Ethel Preston, of the Department of Agriculture in Ottawa, gave a lecture and demonstration on the art of preserving and canning Canadian fruit and vegetables, under the auspices of the Local Council of Women, in the hall of the Canadian Legion, yesterday afternoon. Although there was not a large attendance, those present appeared to be extremely interested in the very lucid and comprehensive address given by Miss Preston, and the practical demonstration, carried out in detail with the aid of an electric cooking stove and sundry pots and pans, of the uses to which Canadian fruits and vegetables may be put. The speaker, evidently extremely enthusiastic over the merits of Canadian-grown products, gave an illuminating insight into their possibilities, including in her discourse much valuable information as to their nutrient and vitamin values.

The president of the Local Council of Women, Mrs. C. H. Edwards, introduced the speaker, and a hearty vote of appreciation was tendered her at the conclusion of her address, by Miss A. M. Lancaster.

In 1922, said Miss Preston, investigations showed that imports into Canada of fruits and vegetables were doubling, while hundreds of thousands of tons of Canadian-grown fruits and vegetables, particularly in the Niagara Peninsula, were rotting on the ground. It was decided that something must be done to remedy this condition, and conserve domestic products.

Going on to describe the mode of preparation of an apple relish, which was later tasted by those present, Miss Preston spoke of the large sugar content of the Canadian apple. "In the imported apple, you get raw starch instead of sugar, because, unless the fruit ripens on the tree, sugar will not collect, and this raw starch is one of the most indigestible of products." The use of too much sugar in cooking was also deplored, as making for a diabetic tendency, and apple-sauce made with skins and cores, rubbed into a sieve, was recommended.

Miss Preston was very enthusiastic over the virtues of the Canadian apple, which she declared was so rich in iron in its natural form.

A demonstration of proper methods of canning several vegetables was given, including spinach, cauliflower and carrots. The speaker deplored the use of canning powders as being harmful, and containing injurious elements in the form of benzoates, formalin and salicylic acid. Harmless preservatives, she declared, were sugar, salt, vinegar, spice or smoke, the latter for meats.

Showing various types of glass jars in use, the speaker warned against the use of jars with imperfections in the glass, as having a tendency to break easily and also demonstrated the value of proper rubbers, advocating narrow rubbers for the Crown sealers and wider bands for the Perfect Seal jars.

Carrots and spinach were blanched in wire baskets and with cheesecloth bags, and sterilization of jars and rubbers demonstrated. "One hour, from the garden to the can" was the slogan which should be used in doing fruits and vegetables, said Miss Preston, working quickly with her hot vegetables, which were placed in the cold dip, then packed in glass jars, with the top overflowing and requiring strong pressure to close the jar. Silver forks, knives and spoons, or silver-plated, were essential, as other metals might cause poisoning of the canned product.

Vegetables should be under-cooked, rather than over-cooked, as is the tendency, declared the lecturer, and done with as little water as possible, steam being preferable, or baking. A knitting-needle, rather than a fork, should be used for testing.

The benefit derived from eating raw vegetables was also stressed, carrots being emphasized, because of the iron, phosphorus, lime and arsenic contained in them, and spinach was lauded for its medicinal and cleansing properties. Food specialists, declared Miss Preston, say that spring fever could be absolutely done away with if people would use enough vegetables from October to May, and children, especially, should have at least ten different sorts of vegetables served during meals within a month's time. The beneficial results to be derived from the use of vegetables was emphasized, the lecturer declaring with some heat, "It is a crime that the Government allows doctors and druggists to give iron tonics that are made from scrap iron that will not absorb in the system."

Some hints with regard to proper methods in cooking vegetables were then given. Spinach is not a popular vegetable with many people, said Miss Preston, because it is usually cooked into a "black rag." As for cabbage, usually found indigestible, it may be prepared without such evil effects if it is shredded finely, left in boiling water for five minutes, then drained and served. Onions, to get the most benefit from them, should be placed in half an inch of water, whole, and baked in the oven. This method of cooking destroys their evil odor also.

WOMAN SENTENCED FOR MANSLAUGHTER

FREEHOLD, N.J., April 22 (Canadian Press)—Mrs. Christine Stoble, mother of ten children, to-day was found guilty of manslaughter for the slaying of her 15 year old unwed daughter, Rena, after she saw the child with a new born babe. Supreme Court Justice Lloyd sentenced the woman to ten years imprisonment. The jury deliberated nineteen hours and twenty-five minutes.

"This crime is one of the most atrocious that ever came to my attention," said Justice Lloyd. "A crime like this could only have been committed by a fiend incarnate," he said. "My only regret is that I cannot give you a longer term."

In summing up for the state yesterday Prosecutor John J. Quinn declared that "electrocution is too good for this woman" but asked for life imprisonment.

CHURCH MEETINGS

A large and enthusiastic crowd was present at the annual meeting of Zion Church. The minister, Rev. Charles D. Daniel, led the meeting in devotional exercises, after which the following reports were given:

The treasurer's report was most favorably received. Some $703 was raised from various sources. After an expenditure of over $500 for local expenses and for Stanwood Parsonage fund, a balance of $170 remains in the treasury. The congregation has also raised over $500 on minister's stipend and $235 for the M. and E. fund. This is a most favorable financial report for this congregation.

Charles Brunton is the church's treasurer. To assist him other members of the board of stewards are — Alfred Barnum, Lorne Barnum, Albert Petherick, and T. J. Petherick.

Receipts: Collection for July 4th, $11.27; donations, $17.50; total of 10 lots, $5.00—$33.77; debits: 130 cement posts, $17.75; cross cutting, $8.00 — $25.75, leaving a balance of $8.02 on hand.

Mrs. John Simpson and Mrs. Ernest Irwin reported for the Ladies' Aid. Twenty-[illegible] members were enrolled, 2 above last year. Ten meetings had been held during the year. Financial returns were very good. From the bazaar, tea, social, etc., some $250 was raised. Expenditures for local church the parsonage and charity purposes were most gracious, leaving a balance of $102 on hand.

President—Mrs. John Simpson.
Vice-President—Mrs. Fred. Barnum
Secretary—Mrs. Harry Barnum.
Treasurer—Mrs. Ernest Irwin.

The League report was given by Mr. Fred Barnum and Mr. Clarence Barnum. As its full year had not been completed, the report is somewhat incomplete. Some $28 had been given to M. and E Fund. There had been a few items of local expenditure and a working balance was still on hand. The attendance had interesting and instructive.

William Ford, George Brunton and Miss Jennie Fry presented the report of the Sunday School. There were 119 on the roll, with an average attendance of 362. The receipts for the year were $130, with various expenses of $65. A balance of $35 is left. Thirty dollars was voted to the M. and E. Fund.

The officers were all returned by the casting of one ballot:

Superintendent—Mr. William Ford.
Treasurer—George Brunton.
Secretary—Jennie Fry.

With a capable staff of teachers.

During the year, a series of spiritual evenings were held, which left a sincere influence for good. Six were received by profession of faith during the year: Evelyn Barnum, Hazel Brown, Laura Watson, Violet Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Hector Arnold.

The elders of the session are: Thos. Fry, William Ford, William Petherick, Jr., and Fred Barnum.

The congregation moved to try the weekly envelopes as a way of contributing to local expenses. This was afterwards adopted by the Board of Stewards.

OBITUARY.

JOHN BARRENS

WESTWOOD, April 21.—John Barrens, one of the pioneer residents of this district passed away at his home in Douro Township on Monday, at the ripe age of 82 years.

The late Mr. Barrens was a man of estimable character, and was born in Ireland, coming to Canada with his parents, in infancy. Deceased was unmarried and was the last member of his family, three sisters and one brother having predeceased him a number of years ago.

The late Mr. Barrens was an elder of the Westwood United church. The funeral took place on Wednesday from his late residence, his pastor, Rev. H. Moyer, conducting the service.

The floral tributes of sympathy were beautiful and included a wreath from the members of his church. The pall bearers were J. Barrens, D. Tucker, P. Cavanagh, R. Girven, J. Collins, and A. Knox. Interment was made in Westwood cemetery.

LOADING OF LIQUOR

quently cleared for Detroit, but did not go there and had not come from that port.

"It was a joke, only a joke," commented Commissioner Ernest Roy in regard to the observation of the regulation requiring the sworn declaration.

Mr. Lodge said that he had not been provided with a Bible on which to swear the captains.

John Wilson, customs officer at the outport of Sandwich, informed the commissioners that there were eleven liquor export officers in operation at Lasalle, near Sandwich yesterday. There had been as many as thirteen in the past.

"About forty," replied the witness. "Forty vessels in a day?" repeated Mr. Rowell. "Yes," confirmed Mr. Wilson. He explained that his desk was in the same offices as the customs broker located on the Bermuda Export Company dock. The broker, he said, was a son of the Collector of Customs at Sandwich, J. U. Fiche.

First Witness

The first witness to give evidence yesterday afternoon was John Bailey, sub-collector of customs at Walkerville. He gave his staff as 28, of whom two were appraisers. Appraisal work was done at the sufferance warehouse on the wharf at Walkerville. Rail shipments were sometimes passed by the examining officer without being looked at by the appraisers, he said.

"Do not the regulations say that the appraiser must examine one package in ten?" queried Commissioner Wright.

"Yes, but we have no truck to carry the goods from the railways to the suffrance warehouse," replied the witness.

"In Toronto they have quite a large cartage bill," said the commissioner.

Mr. Bailey said that was only the case in ports.

"Is there any reason why Walkerville should not be a full port?" asked Commissioner Wright.

The witness replied that he thought it should be.

"$5,345 last year," he stated.

"What do you do about appraisal?"

"I do the best I can, but I have no appraiser."

"Do you have much export business?"

"Just the liquor," responded the witness.

He said that he had five or six export houses at Belle River, but "they hadn't done anything since last fall." He had refused clearances "over the ice," to export companies.

"I am told that boats come in and clear from Belle River without seeing you at all," suggested Mr. Rowell.

"That may be," answered Mr. Strong. His office was four or five blocks up town, he stated.

Border Patrol

John W. Wals, a constable in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, outlined his work in patrolling the border. He had done this work since the summer of 1926. When he made his first patrol, he found boats coming in and out of Riverside without supervision or examination. "There was no serious attempt to stop them," he said. Boats were loading after hours at Lasalle and Amherstburg, and at the latter place he had seized two boats engaged in this practice. There were from 25 to 30 liquor export houses on his patrol between the outports of Riverside and Kingsville, he stated.

Constable Wals expressed the opinion that the examination by customs officers at the ferries crossing the Detroit River was more effective when he and his fellow patrolman visited them in uniform than when they went in plain clothes. This view was concurred in by Constable Thomas A. Shane, another member of the Mounted Police, who followed Constable Wale on the stand. He gave similar evidence as the previous witness.

NEW MINISTER IS INDUCTED

Rev. A. N. Reid Installed in Stirling Presbyterian Church.

EASTER SERVICE.

STIRLING, April 22.—The Kingston Presbytery of the Presbyterian church met at Stirling on Good Friday night at 8 o'clock for the purpose of inducting Rev. A. N. Reid, B.A., the recently chosen minister into the charges of St. Andrew's church, Stirling, and St. Andrew's, West Huntingdon. Rev. R. G. Stewart of St. Andrew's, Belleville, moderator of the Presbytery presided.

Rev. Mr. Laughland of Amherst Island preached the sermon. Rev. W. S. MacTavish, D.D., of Belleville, addressed the newly inducted minister and Rev. A. G. McKenzie of Burnbrae addressed the people. At the close of the services Mr. Reid was accompanied to the door by Messrs. A. B. Fargey of Stirling and H. Rollins of West Huntingdon where he was introduced to the congregation as they passed out. Lunch was then served to those from a distance by the members of the Ladies' Aid.

Mr. Reid is a young man and begins his work here with every prospect of success. On Easter Sunday he was greeted by a large congregation at both services when he delivered sermons appropriate to the season. The choir rendered excellent service in their anthems and solos. Mr. Arthur Duncan sang acceptably both morning and evening while he and Mrs. Williams sang a duet in the evening.

The service at St. John's Anglican church was in keeping with the day. Rev. Canon Byers the rector, being in charge. Mrs. (Dr.) Alger sang a solo which was greatly appreciated. There was a larger attendance of communicants than at any previous communion service held in the church.

The communion service at St. Paul's United church in the morning was largely attended. Special Easter music was rendered by the choir, Miss Bessie Cowley being the soloist.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

SATURDAY, APRIL 23, 1927

This is rather an unimportant day in planetary direction, according to astrology. Benefic aspects dominate.

Again the stars promise much to those who have solved the secret of winning all they desire in the world. The rich are to become richer in the next few years.

This is a day on which it is wise to plan new enterprises and to seek financial support for them.

It is read as a favorable rule under which to invest in real estate. The seers declare that all who are wise will possess land, for by and by this country is to be the centre of an immense population, a condition due to some sort of world upheaval that compels the United States to throw open its doors.

The old now come under a direction of stars that presages for them reverence and respect. Their knowledge and wisdom will be much sought.

This is read as an unlucky day for moving or for changes of any sort. It is not an auspicious date for starting journeys.

Under this sway friends may be as changeable as the weather, and for this reason it is wise to be chary of confidences.

More contention regarding oil and oil leases may be expected in the coming months when new resources will be discovered.

Mining booms may cause excitement, but the real bonanzas of the year will come through scientific discoveries that release hitherto unsuspected values, the seers declare.

New interest in African and Chinese securities will inspire speculation, it is forecast.

Precious stones as well as precious metals will be found in fields not previously explored, the seers prognosticate, and more Americans will be enrolled among the millionaires, it is prophesied.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of peace in which it will be most unwise to borrow trouble.

Children born on this day may have certain psychic gifts. Both boys and girls may be keenly awake to romance.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

"I saw Mrs. Wiley the next morning, that is, Friday morning, November 26," the Reverend Bates answered in his precise manner.

"Tell the jury in your own words how you happened to see her that morning," Banning directed him, a trifle impatiently.

"I arose at seven o'clock as usual, and after stoking the furnace, I went to the front porch to get the morning paper. When I unfolded the paper I saw headlines announcing the death of Mr. Ralph Cluny, coupled with the statement that the bride-to-be had disappeared. I summoned my wife and daughter and told them what had happened. My wife advised me to telephone the police of your city, acquainting them with the fact that I had united Miss Cherry and Mr. Wiley in marriage the night before. I did so, reluctantly, I may add—" and the kindly old man glanced apologetically at Cherry.

"After I had acquainted your chief of police with the facts in my possession," Bates went on, his waxy-white old face staining with a flush of anger, "I decided to drive over to Mr. Anderson's farmhouse. I found Mr. and Mrs. Wiley at breakfast in the kitchen—"

"Just a minute, Mr. Bates," Banning interrupted. "Will you carefully describe the defendant's physical appearance and manner as you observed them the morning of Friday, November 26, as contrasted with her appearance and manner of the night before, when you performed the marriage ceremony?"

Bates considered a moment, nervously fingering his black spectacle case. When he spoke, his voice was slow and reluctant: "Mrs. Wiley was very pale, with dark circles under her eyes. She—she looked very tired and unhappy, nervous, I might say."

"And Mr. Wiley? What was his manner, his physical condition, so far as you could judge?"

"He—he looked angry and sullen, and was quite pale, too," Bates answered conscientiously.

"Were they alone in the kitchen?"

"Mrs. Anderson was in the kitchen and let me in when I knocked. While I was talking, Mr. Anderson came in by the door through which I had entered with a load of stove wood in his arms. I should say he joined us within a minute after my arrival, so that he heard practically all of my conversation with the young couple."

"Now, Mr. Bates, repeat as nearly as you can remember the exact words of your conversation," Banning directed.

"I doubt that I can remember very much of what was said, due to the confusion," Bates protested. "After I had greeted the bride and groom and Mrs. Anderson, I asked Mrs. Wiley if she had seen the morning paper. She turned even more pale and jumped from her seat. She said something like, 'Is it Mother? Is she dead?' Before I could answer she snatched the paper from my hand. Her husband rose and stood beside her as she opened the paper to read."

"What were the defendant's first words after she read the headlines?" Banning was walking up and down before the jury, casting excited, significant glances from the witness to the jury. Churchill sat smiling urbanely, as if satisfied that nothing the kindly Mr. Bates said could damage his client.

"As nearly as I can remember, Mrs. Wiley's first words were: 'My God! Dead! It's all your fault, Chris! Oh, I hate you, I hate you'!"

In the sudden, complete silence that followed, Banning shot one triumphant, exultant glance at Churchill, then smiled beamingly upon the jury, as if asking them to note that he had at last put upon record what might be construed as a confession on the part of Cherry Lane Wiley.

Does Weakness Detract from Your Good Looks?

Mrs. Thomas Chapman of 3 Somerset Place, Toronto, Ont., whose picture appears here, said: "Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was very helpful to me and I know it to be the very best medicine a woman can take when nervous and run-down. I had a break-down—my nerves were so upset I could not sleep. I also suffered from nervous indigestion, but after taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I did not suffer with indigestion and I could get a natural night's rest, which I could not do before. No woman can appreciate what a wonderful medicine the 'Favorite Prescription' is until she gives it a trial."

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

This magpie frock is of black satin with a tucked vest and sleeves, and collar and cuffs of white georgette.

For some reason or other the all-black frock or street costume never seems to be so general a favorite here as it is abroad. French women who must count every franc they spend for clothes and who must at the same time look well dressed adopt all black because they feel that there is nothing so economical. A feeling seems to prevail here that unless you can get very expensive clothes it is better not to get black at all. American women don't seem to think of the all-black coat as a serviceable sort of wrap—so they choose gray or beige or brown instead. Then too there is the feeling that black is "old."

Black and white is also well liked by most French women, though they know usually that this magpie combination must be worked out with much care. One cannot wear any black clothes and any white clothes at the same time and consider it a smart black and white ensemble.

The important thing with this type of frock or ensemble is that the white must be always perfectly white. For this reason it is sometimes a good plan to have the white part of your magpie ensemble something that may easily be washed or cleaned. You may be tempted to introduce a touch of color in your black and white ensemble—not realizing that the black and white combination is of itself sufficiently striking. You may be tempted to wear green beads and other jewelry or to pink a rose buttonhole flower on your black and white street ensemble. As a matter of fact the effect is better if you stick to black and white. White violets or camellias or white carnations, or chrysanthemums made from cut pieces of white georgette, look much better.

The only woman who cannot wear black to advantage is the woman who is excessively pale, with a sallow sort of paleness. But this is a difficulty that most modern women can overcome without compunctions.

BOYS ASPHYXIATED AS RATS TURN JET

Youths Found Dead in Bed From Poisonous Gas Fumes.

DETROIT, April 22—Two youths were found dead in their room at 7609 Gratiot Avenue to-day by gas asphyxiation. The opening of a gas jet by rats is blamed for the deaths by the Coroner.

Harold Hicks, aged 15, of Wayne, Michigan, and George Curry, aged 18, of Verdun, Que., are the boys.

The sister-in-law of Hicks, in whose home the boys lived, said she entered their room about 4 a.m. and drew the covers over the pair.

At 6 o'clock this morning both were found dead in bed with the gas jet turned on. Two dead rats found in the room are believed to have tipped over the gas shade, turning on the jet.

HIAWATHA NEWS

Trappers on the river Otonabee have taken up their traps for the season. Those on marshes near the lake are reporting fair success.

Mrs. Robert Davis, of Peterborough, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cowie.

A new wrinkle has been noticed this year in the trapping game. Cotton cloth has been used by some as little flags to mark their traps.

Modern Women's Hygiene

Ends worries of old ways
Discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

SHEER gowns and gay frocks, business and social exactments under the most trying of hygienic handicaps are a comfort women of today enjoy.

It's 5 times as absorbent as ordinary cotton "pads." Thus you wear lightest frocks; dance, motor, go for hours without a moment's doubt.

Deodorizes, too; thus ending all fear of offense. 8 in 10 better class women now employ this way. Doctors advise it. Nurses widely urge it. Obtain at any store without embarrassment simply by saying "KOTEX."

Try today and you'll never again risk the uncertainty of old ways. Box of 12 costs only a few cents. Be sure you get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

KOTEX
No laundry—discard like tissue

The Symbol of Healthful Cleanliness

Old Dutch has won distinction as "The Symbol of Healthful Cleanliness" because there is nothing else like it for keeping the home hygienically clean and sanitary.

Old Dutch is a natural cleanser of a distinctive quality and character. It looks like a fine powder, yet, under the microscope its particles are flaky and flat shaped. Like thousands of tiny erasers, these particles simply, quickly and easily erase the invisible impurities as well as the dirt you see.

Old Dutch is so efficient because it is so different; it is free from harsh, scratchy grit, and does not scratch. This is a vital protection in the home, because scratches are catch-alls for unseen and unhealthful impurities.

Millions of housewives know that a little Old Dutch goes a long way and that it is the safest and most economical for all cleaning. As Healthful Cleanliness is a safeguard to health, so is Old Dutch your safeguard to Healthful Cleanliness.

LECTURE GIVEN ON PASSION PLAY

Rev. J. J. Garvey Gives Most Instructive Address at Lakefield.

LAKEFIELD, April 22—The Queen street theatre was filled on Wednesday evening by a large and very attentive audience for the interesting and highly instructive illustrated lecture on the Passion Play by Rev. J. J. Garvey.

Father Garvey visited Oberammergan in 1922 and saw the Passion Play which was then given for the first time since the great war. The play was instituted in this quaint little Bavarian village in 1634. A fearful pestilence visited the village that year and carried off large numbers of people so the survivors made a vow that if God would stop the plague they would enact the scene of the Passion every ten years and this has been done for nearly three hundred years and now the great play dominates the entire life of the community. The village which has about 2000 people is situated in the mountains of Upper Bavaria and the people live for the play which has made Oberammergan famous throughout the Christian world. No one who has ever committed a crime or lived an impure life is allowed to have a part so the community is a model one as the ambition person is to play a part. This has never been made a money making proposition and the villagers are singularly free from the greed of money which is the curse of many places.

An American syndicate offered nearly a million dollars for the screen rights to the play but the offer was declined. As an instance of the lack of greed, Father Garvey said that his board and lodging and ticket to the play amounted to about 75 cents in our money. The fulfillment of the vow and their fidelity to duty are strong in these people. One is struck in visiting Oberammergan with the simplicity and innocence of the people, they dress in mountaineer's garb and the men let their hair grow long. The play is given every Sunday and Holy Day and lasts eight hours from 8 a.m. till noon and from 2 till 6 o'clock in the afternoon. Eight hundred people took part in the play. Between the acts are given tableaux from the Old Testament and there is, too, a chorus which sings beautifully.

The first picture was of the village itself lying among the mountains, a peaceful scene and well fitted for the enactment of the play. Then the "close up" showing the church and the river flowing past, and the great theatre for while the stage is out of doors the seats are in a building with a roof. No matter whether the weather is fair or foul the play is given and everywhere one sees the religion and simple piety of the people.

Pictures were shown of the principal players. Arlton Lang, who for three terms had played the Christ. Judas Iscariot who played a strong and very difficult part. Pontius Pilate, St. John, St. Peter, Annos, Caisphus, Mary, the Mother of the Lord, Mary Magdalene, Nathaniel, Herod, and the leader of the chorus. The chorus consists of 100 to 150 persons.

The first scene is when Our Lord leaves Jericho for Jerusalem, just before the first Palm Sunday and each scene was given in a realistic manner which even in pictures leaves a powerful impression and which must indeed be impressive to one privileged to see the play. Step by step through Holy Week the pictures told the story from the glad hosannas of Palm Sunday to the Last Supper when the first Holy Communion was given and the sacrifice begun which the next day was to be consummated at the cross. The scene of the betrayal, the travesty of the trial and the denial by Peter of his Lord and Master which is an object lesson of human weakness and the results of evil companionship were all shown and the great scene at the tomb where Mary Magdalene was the first to see the Risen Lord who had said for our sins and follies with His blood, and died as man not as God and who, forty days after His Resurrection, ascended to His Father and ten days later sent to His apostles the Holy Spirit to confirm their belief. The Cross, the sign of the most ignominious death became, after our Lord's death and Resurrection, glorified and the symbol of the Christian faith. The character portrayal was wonderfully vivid and was especially good in the scene showing the greed and avarice of Judas and later his fearful remorse; and also in the grief of Mary, the Mother, and the devotion of St. John. The pictures were in colors and were exceptionally good and the lecture a vivid description of the mountain village and its pious inhabitants and the world famous play which every ten years is played as the fulfillment of a vow made nearly three hundred years ago.

Spring Poetry

"The April rains are falling down, the long-faced poet cries. And would he have them falling up, and moistening the skies?"

There's a verse for you—right off the bat, as it were. All one does is to get the first word, and "the" is extremely useful in most instances. Then a second line, with an amiable final word that lends itself to ryhme with the final in the fourth and last line. What could be simpler?

The poet is long-faced, it is true, but who wouldn't be long-faced who had yearned madly through long night hours (it will be observed that the sun is rising in the east) longing and longing for a flash of inspiration, and then, just as the heated orb touched the East with a warm glow, the above thoughts flowed from his pen. He don't happen to have a pen, by the way, but probably he memorizes as he goes along. He has just partaken of what appears to be a currant loaf and a third of a glass of water? Let us hope it is water. We do not think that anything so innocuous would have resulted if the beverage had been of a stronger brew. There is something lacking in the picture. Where is "Thou?" You remember that the old tentmaker of Persia asked for a little in life, beyond "ABook of Verses underneath the bough, a jug of wine, a loaf of bread, and Thou, beside me, singing in the Wilderness." This poet has the loaf of bread, something approximating the jug of wine, but he has no "Thou." It is a pity.

The Clean-Up and Paint-Up symbol is a Crusader, a Knight in glittering armor, sword in hand, ready for battle.

Back of the idea is a fight for Civic Pride, for Health, for Human Happiness, for Thrift and for increased real estate values.

It is most assuredly a fight for the generation to come, that towns may become cities and cities grow to metropolitan wonder-places. Where you find this Crusader at work you will also find beauty, fine homes, modern streets, and a vigorous stirring of the Civic pulse.

Matinee Ladies

"MATINEE LADIES," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Bob Ward, college student, gets work as a dancing partner for rich women in a New Jersey roadhouse. At the Inn he meets the prettiest, sweetest girl he has ever laid eyes on—Sally, the cigarette girl. Reciprocating his interest, she warns him against the mysterious and beautiful Mrs. Hammond, habitue of the Inn, who finds her "thrill" in "hunting" Bob for her lowenest apartment. Bob, taking Sally home, finds Mrs. Smith hostile; and learns he has a rival.

Bob Ward, shunting from his mind with the elasticity of youth the recollections of Mrs. Smith's grimness, attended his night lectures, boned until midnight over his engineering tomes, and reflected over the events of what had been the most wonderful day in his whole life.

But, somehow, try though he would to deride and banish it, the ravishing face of Mrs. Hammond floated omnipresently through his mind.

Freddy and Arch dropped into Bob's room for a while around midnight; and together the three of them wrestled with some classroom problems.

Something had communicated itself from Bob Ward's manner to these two puff-heads this afternoon—something earnest and fine, that inspired them in an intangible way quite beyond their infantile comprehension.

They were all very happy tonight; and after closing their books, lapsed into a serious discussion of their future. All of a sudden, it seemed as though the boys realized, with the apparent coming of real love into Bob Ward's life, that the cares and the lack of cares, the freedom and the frivolity of college days were fast coming to a close.

The rich baritone of Arch and the clear boyish tenor of Freddy rose on the quiet air.

"Only a month more—no, not quite a month; three weeks, and we'll be pulling out of here, for the last time," said Arch.

There was a tinge of regret, of sadness, in his tone, that deeply affected the three boys.

"If we don't flunk," said Freddy pessimistically.

"Oh, we won't flunk—not a one of us—if we plug and take pains from now on," prophesied Bob.

"Wonder what the future's got in store for us?" asked Arch. His eyes were wide, and a bit moody. Filled with the regret of a passing youth that could not be enchained.

The inexorability of Time is one of the saddest discoveries that any young man makes. The three chums were just facing this truth. It hurt.

Bob, in his sensible way, was the first to rationalize about it:

"Oh, come now, don't let's hold a wake. We can't go to college forever—though you will, Freddy, unless you bone up a bit! As for the future, well, I guess that's what we make it. And I don't mean for that to sound like a copybook platitude!"

Freddy and Arch rose to go; Freddy, with a redeeming gesture which showed that not all of his animal spirit was dead, knocking the ashes out of his pipe into Bob's best hat.

Ordinarily, Bob would have punished this act by cramming the ashes down Freddy's throat, or at least his back; but tonight, Bob just mechanically overturned the hat and shook the ashes upon the floor, the while he remarked wistfully:

"But it will seem sort of funny next autumn not to be in there when the referee's whistle blows! Not to know ever again the fun and excitement of running down the field after the kick-off!"

"Say," said Arch, following the example of Freddy and coming back to his normal light-hearted and light-hearied self with a chuckle, "the only kind of a sixty-yard dash you may be making next autumn will be down the church aisle, to make a touchdown with a wedding ring!"

That brought Bob back to himself, also. He made a dive for his chums, so that they could wind the night up with one of their customary house-disturbing rumpuses—that usually ended only when Mrs. O'Sully, in her nightgown, and a deputation of indignant student boarders armed with baseball bats and murderous looks, appeared outside their door.

But tonight Arch and Freddy eluded him and fled in safety.

Bob, closing his door and happily relaxing in his battered armchair, clasped his hands behind his head and closed his eyes—to drowse for a moment, before turning in, over the deep-coursing significance of this most eventful day.

In the hallway on the floor below, where their rooms were located, Freddy and Arch had paused to send a serenade up the stairway well. Bob listened wistfully; it was the last verse of the touching college classic, "The Palisades":

"But college friendships all must sever,
And fade as does the dying day,
And closest kinship all be broken
As out in life we wend our way."

All through the house, doors were opening indignantly as the rich baritone of Arch, and the clear boyish tenor of Freddy, rose softly on the quiet midnight air. But somehow, tonight it was different; those who opened their doors to protest, found themselves suddenly thrilled by the earnest undercurrent of emotionalism in the boys' singing. Even Mrs. O'Sully, sallying forth to quell the "disturbance," was vaguely touched and kept in the shadows of the lowest hallway without uttering a sound. She just stood there and listened and wondered why she felt so sad; just as she did at those sad movies.

Bob, meanwhile, sat back with closed eyes, and softly hummed the last four lines as his chums continued to sing:

"And yet, whatever be life's fortune,
Though mem'ry fail and friends be few,
We'll love thee still, our Alma Mater,
Our dear old N. Y. U."

The last echoes died away in the hallways. Doors closed gently here and there. Arch and Freddy, who had started their song in defiance, were vaguely and strangely moved by the realization that it had grown beautifully out of its original intention. Subdued, they patted each other's backs and parted—each to his tiny room.

In his poor and meagre little room on the socially despised top, or attic floor, Bob Ward brushed a suspicious moisture from his eyes. Never before had the words of the college classic stirred him so; never before had their underlying meaning occurred to him. Many an idle hour, in the parroty lack of understanding of their youth, Bob and his chums and friends had sung those words. Many a fall day, resting in the clubhouse between halves, he had heard the undergraduate body in the stands of Ohio Field outside, or in the more spacious banks of the great Yankee Stadium on the occasion of important games, swell into the moving words, with heads uncovered.

Now, for the first time, they really reached his inner consciousness, his heart, with their true signals—the carefree togs of youth to be dropped, the mantle of manhood to be assumed, and the present to fade into happy memory.

Bob sighed, then stood up and threw off his clothes. Stripped, he spent ten minutes in the rapid setting-up exercises which kept his fine body and muscles supple.

Over and over he told himself, as he snuggled down into even the grateful comfort of Mrs. O'Sully's worst bed, that this had been a day of days. He philosophized, as youth will, on the vast changes brought within the space of dawn to dark. An adventure, a job, undreamt of when he had arisen that morning, had been his by early afternoon; and a princess, more beautiful and sweet than his wildest dreams had ever pictured, had suddenly filled his life.

Once or twice he thought casually about Mrs. Hammond; but dismissed her indifferently each time from his mind, which was taken up solely and enthusiastically with the precious vision of a Dresden doll, with combed-honey hair and lustrous eyes. Thinking of little Sally Smith, and that there could only be good in a world that was trod by such as her, he fell asleep without a care.

His young head would not have settled so pleasantly to dreams could he have but glimpsed the immediate future; the cataclysmic changes in store for him, the swift and tragic shiftings of fate, the melodrama behind the next turn of the wheel. If he could have but known what Mrs. Hammond was planning even at that very moment!

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By ROBERT F. FOSTER.

IMPORTANCE OF THE SCORING.

(Copyright, 1927, by Robert F. Foster.)

Players who are familiar with the parent game of auction bridge usually have some difficulty in accustoming themselves to the difference between that game and contract on account of the variations in the matter of scoring.

In auction, the object is to secure the contract as cheaply as possible, so as not to run any unnecessary risks. Take such a hand as the following for example:

H. A K Q J 2; C. 6 4; D. A K 2; S. A K Q.

The dealer may be absolutely confident that he can make game at hearts on these cards, but there is nothing to be gained by bidding more than one, as he is not afraid of spades, and it might be to his advantage to hear some other bids. No matter how cheaply he may get the contract, or how high he goes, the score will be the same, provided he is not set.

But at contract, the beginner is continually being impressed by the fact that unless one bids game one can not win the game. This naturally leads to a habit of stretching the hands to more than they will meet, continually overbidding and getting set. The experience of the best players goes to show that this is a mistaken policy, and that there is a safe limit beyond which it does not pay to go. One of the worst mistakes a contract player can make is continually trying to win games by bidding game, when it is not in the cards. The best players try to arrive as accurately as possible at the value of their combined hands, and stop to look and listen when they are asked to pass that mark.

The beginner should have clearly before him the differences in the resulting scores according to the number of tricks bid and the number won in play. Let us suppose that it is admitted the foregoing hand can not make less than game, and might make much more. In the top line are shown what would be the results at auction, as these can not possibly be affected in any way by the previous bidding, apart from doubling, if the bidder makes good. In the lines under that are shown the scores that would result from the various bids of one heart to six hearts, at contract.

Winning:	4 odd	5 odd	6 odd	7 odd
At Auction.
Any Bid	237	245	303	361
At Contract.
Bidding 1	188	198	258	318
Bidding 2	176	196	256	316
Bidding 3	154	184	254	314
Bidding 4	212	262	342	412
Bidding 5	—	220	320	400
Bidding 6	—	—	478	578
Bidding 7	—	—	—	736

If these scores are carefully studied it will readily be seen that while the auction player gains nothing by bidding more than one, the contract player loses points by bidding more than one if he does not go far enough to bid game. It will also be evident that by bidding more than enough to go game he loses points if he can not go far enough to bid a slam and make it.

Against this difference in points as between bidding safe and bidding game, must be placed the advantage of winning game so as to get the first leg on the rubber, which is admitted to be an equity in three-fourths of its full value, as it is 3 to 1 that the winners of the first game will also win the rubber game.

On the other hand, compare the difference in the penalties at auction and at contract, in case the bidder fails. The top line shows the number of tricks a player might be set, up to 5. The lower lines show the cost in the two games, apart from any doubling, which would simply double each result.

Set:—	1	2	3	4	5
At Auction:	50	100	150	200	250
At Contract:	50	150	350	550	750

To show the use of these tables. Let us suppose you have in the combined hands an apparently safe contract to win two odd at spades. If you leave it at two and win four, you get, apart from honors, which you get anyhow, 16 below the line, 50 and 30 above, for your overtricks, total 96. If you stretch it to a four-bid, and win, you get 132, a gain of 36. But if you fail, and get two odd only, you lose 150; or 50 if you make three odd.

A careful study of these facts has led many players to decide that there is nothing in over-bidding the hand more than one trick, unless it is in the nature of a sacrifice when you are pretty sure that the other side can win the game or rubber. Some place the limit at two tricks, if the two will win game if it turns out well.

The deciding factor in the game seems to be the value of what are called "partial scores," that is, scores that do not quite reach game, but make it easier to go game on some subsequent deal, as it is not necessary to bid more than enough to reach 30 points from where you stand.

At auction, partial scores are seldom of value because if the declarer is 8 up, and bids one no-trump, making three, he would have won the game anyhow. But at contract he must bid three no-trumps, hearts, or spades, or he can not go game, even with the partial score of 8 to help him.

At contract, the partial score has a great advantage on account of the tactical position. If you want only 12 points, you need not bid more than two in anything. The other side realize this, and it is in such situations that they will continually outbid you to "keep the flag flying," until you have piled up penalties enough to disregard the eventual loss of the game.

At auction, the average rubber among good players is five deals, and its value about 400 points. At contract it runs from seven to eight deals, on account of the partial scores, and is worth nearly twice as much as at auction. For this reason the usual auction stakes should be cut in half at contract.

The gist of all this is that it is the safe game that pays, on account of the partial score values; that the limit of overidding should be two tricks; and that the stakes should be reduced, and more time allowed for playing a rubber.

Other Scoring Systems.

Before Contract settles down to an established or standard game, it will probably go through the same processes that auction went through, and in the absence of any authority we already have several methods, some merely suggestions; others adopted by various clubs.

All of these are wide departures from the scoring at auction, and therefore do not tend to improve one's bidding in that game, which is one of the chief recommendations of contract.

Several of these systems will be taken up at another time.

Uncle Wiggily

By Howard R. Garis

To-day's Bedtime Story.

UNCLE WIGGILY AND WUMPLE'S SANDWICH

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

"Uncle Wiggily, will you come with me, please, on a picnic?"

Wumple Wogglejig, the little yellow wooden boy, looked up at Mr. Longears one morning, just as the rabbit gentleman was about to hop away from the bungleump to go adventuring.

"What did you say?" inquired the rabbit, whose big ears were turned toward the bushes, listening for any noise which might be made by a fox or wolf.

"I said would you please come on a picnic with me?" went on Wumple. "I've got a fine sandwich we can eat for our lunch."

"But I say—look here now—I like picnics and sandwiches and the like of that!" said Uncle Wiggily, "but how is it you are out of school in the middle of the day, Wumple?"

Let's eat our sandwich here!" cried Wumple.

"The lady mouse teacher let me come home early because I knew all my lessons," Wumple answered. "I had a sandwich for my recess lunch, but I saved it for you and me to eat on the picnic. You'll come; won't you, please?"

Wumple looked anxiously at Uncle Wiggily and pulled out his yellow tail, putting it in again upside down. I mean Wumple pulled out his own tail, not Uncle Wiggily's. For the rabbit's tail didn't come loose, though Wumple's did.

"Why, yes, I'll go picnicking with you," offered Uncle Wiggily. "But do you think one sandwich will be enough for both of us?"

"Oh, yes," answered Wumple. "It is a large, thick sandwich," and he pointed to a package he carried slung around his neck by a piece of honeysuckle vine. The package was wrapped in white birch bark.

"Ah, that looks good!" explained Uncle Wiggily, rubbing his paws. "That sandwich looks good!"

"It is good!" said Wumple. "It's a fine sandwich."

So the rabbit gentleman and the yellow Wogglejig boy went on through the woods together, Mr. Longears looking for an adventure and Wumple looking for a good place to have a picnic and eat his sandwich. But adventures seemed to be few and far between that day. But Wumple saw many little nooks and dingly dells that seemed just made for picnics.

"Why not sit here and eat our sandwich, Uncle Wiggily?" asked Wumple when they had traveled on about a mile. The Wogglejig boy pointed his left front leg at a shady nook.

"But let's go on a bit farther," said Mr. Longears.

"Let's eat our sandwich here!" cried Wumple.

"I'm getting hungry!" sighed Wumple.

Not long after that they reached a tangled wildwood, and the Wogglejig boy exclaimed:

"Oh, this is the very place to eat."

"Yes, that's what I think, too," suddenly exclaimed a savage voice.

Was that you, Uncle Wiggily?" asked Wumple.

"Oh, no," answered the rabbit gentleman. "I didn't speak."

"I did!" went on the savage voice. "I agreed with you that this was a good place to eat and I'm going to have my lunch right now!"

With that, out of the bushes leaped the Fuzzy Fox. He opened his mouth and his white teeth gleamed against his red tongue.

"Oh!" cried Uncle Wiggily.

"Oh! Oh!" shouted Wumple. The bunny started to hop away and Wumple started to jump away, but the Fox made a leap, intending to catch Mr. Longears by his pink nose. But the paws of the Fox slipped on a wet leaf and, instead of grabbing the rabbit, he grabbed the brick bark bundle that hung from Wumple's neck.

"Oh, he's got my lovely sandwich!" cried Wumple. "The Fox has my sandwich!"

"Yes, and I'm going to eat your sandwich and then I'm going to have a rabbit pie!" howled the Fox. But, all of a sudden he began to splutter and cough and a sort of dust flew out of his mouth and nose and he dropped Wumple's sandwich on the ground and started to run away.

"That's a nice trick to play on a hungry Fox!" howled the bad chap as he slunk under the bushes. "Wah! Woo! Zoopie! Churk! Chuck!" and he spluttered again.

"What was in that sandwich of yours that made the Fox choke when he ate it?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Sawdust," answered Wumple. "My sandwich was a lovely one made of two pieces of wood with sawdust in between. It was a fine sandwich!"

"Well," said the rabbit with a laugh as he looked at the sawdust on the ground, "I'm glad the Fox bit into it before I did. I'll buy us some lollypop sandwiches at the six and seven cent store."

So he did, and he and Wumple had a fine picnic.

SUICIDE WAS TORONTO MAN

Body Taken From Detroit River That of John Brodie.

REASON NOT KNOWN.

DETROIT, April 22.—The body of the man who committed suicide on Wednesday afternoon by leaping from a ferryboat into the Detroit River was recovered by the Harbormaster's crew yesterday after an hour's dragging. Papers found in the clothing identified the body as that of John K. Brodie, 52 years old, an insurance broker, and former residence of Toronto, his residence being given as 202 Jarvis Street. Brodie had been rooming at 449 West Willis Avenue for some time. On Wednesday he asked his landlady to loan him some money, but she refused. The Coroner's office, which investigated the case knows of no reason for the suicide. A telegram yesterday from Toronto stated that an undertaker from that city is on his way here, and will take the remains back with him for burial.

Absence Of Frost Causes Wheat Price To Turn Down

CHICAGO, April 22.— (Canadian Press).—Wheat eased down early today, influenced by better weather. The frosts that had been looked for were not much in evidence. Opening at 1-8 to 3-4 decline, wheat underwent a further sag. Corn, oats and provisions were also easier, corn starting at a shade to 3-8 off, and subsequently holding near to the initial range.

Opening prices were: Wheat, May 134 3-8, July 131 1-4; corn, May 71 1-2, July 77 1-8; oats, May 45 1-8, July 45 3-8.

Massey Harris and Nickel Features Toronto Exhange

TORONTO, April 22 (Canadian Press).—Massey Harris and International Nickel featured the market on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Both issues were in constant demand with both selling at higher levels. Massey Harris sold as high as 38 1-4 to close at 36 1-2 for a gain of one. The Preferred was unchanged at 109 1-2. This stock led the market in activity with over 12,000 shares changing hands. Nickel was second in activity and moved up 1 1-4 to 54 1-4. Dominion Stores was a strong feature, advancing 4 5-8 points to 83. Brazilian was active and stronger, selling up 1 3-4 to 135 1-4. B. C. Fishing was a weak feature, declining 1 5-8 points to 81. Canadian Oil was strong, with a gain of two at 147. The distillery stocks were all weaker. Seagram sold off 3-4 to 24 1-2. Walker, under heavy selling pressure, dropped one to 43 1-2, G. and W. eased a half to 57 1-2, and Canadian Brewery was off 1-2 to 28. The oil stocks were dull and fractionally softer.

Mine Market Irregular With Losses In Majority

TORONTO, April 22.— (Canadian Press.)— The market was quiet and irregular on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day. The losses outnumbered the gains by a considerable margin with the dividend paying gold stocks practically all selling on a lower basis. McIntyre declined 20 cents to 26.15, Lake Shore dropped 15 cents to 19.05 and Teck Hughes 8 to 6.92. Kirkland Lake was stronger, selling up 2 cents to 1.19. International Nickel gained 2 points to 54.25, while Keely moved up one to 1.43.

Wall Street Trading Shows Irregularity

NEW YORK, April 22. Canadian Press. — Frequent shifts of speculative sentiment characterized today's stock market, with a rather persistent demand for a selected list of industrials and rails in which special departments are believed to be pending.

Considerable irregularity developed in the early trading due to the spottiness of general business conditions, but sentiment improved later in the day, when General Motors, Dupont, General Electric, Frisco common, Delaware and Hudson, and other recent favorites, were bid up to record high levels.

Banks called about $25,000,000 in loans, but this was believed to reflect only the usual heavy week end demands for currency. Steel and oil shares bore the brunt of the early selling pressure but scattered liquidation also took place in the motors and a number of specialties.

Commercial Solvents 'B' broke from an early high 334 to 335 1-2 and then rebounded about 5 points.

1,000 DELEGATES AT CONVENTION

Ontario Conservatives Deal With Coming Dominion Gathering.

OTHER BUSINESS.

TORONTO, April 22 (Canadian Press).—Upwards of a thousand delegates from all parts of the province were gathered in the city to-day attending the Provincial Conservative convention. The convention is dealing with preliminary matters relating to the National Conservative convention projected for Winnipeg next October, besides discussing the usual routine questions.

The convention this afternoon heard a number of speakers on phases of the national convention, including Hon. H. H. Stevens, Arthur Ford of London, Ont., Hon. Robert Rogers of Winnipeg, T. A. Stinson, M.P. Lindsay, and Mrs. Howard Fallis of Peterborough. A victory banquet in honor of Premier Howard Ferguson of Ontario will be held to-night.

After a spirited contest which featured the convention, John R. MacNicol was re-elected to the presidency. His rival was George B. Spotton of Wingham. "I regret there are some high-ups in the councils of this party who still oppose, though it is their right, the move of the rank and file to meet with our Parliamentary representatives in the great convention," said Mr. MacNicol in his address.

LAWYERS ARGUE OVER PENALTY

Counsel For Breweries Says Act Provides Fine Only For Loss of Books.

NO CANCELLATION.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 22 (Canadian Press)—A proposal to cancel the licenses of three Ontario brewing companies precipitated a battle between counsel before the Royal Customs Commission this morning. R. L. Calder, K.C., one of the Commission counsel, moved for cancellation of the licenses of the Sudbury Brewing and Malting Co., the Soo Falls Brewing Co., and the Kakabeka Falls Brewing Co., when the commission met. The main ground for the motion was that the books and documents of these companies have been destroyed and Mr. Calder asked the commission to find that the destruction was deliberate and with intent to defraud the government.

L. J. O'Flynn of Sault Ste. Marie, appearing for the three brewing companies, looked at the matter from a different angle. Not only did he insist that there was nothing to show deliberate destruction to defraud but he declared that there was no power under any act to cancel the license of a brewing company for destruction of records. Parliament, he declared, had laid down penalty for destruction of booksfl. It consisted of a fine of not less than $100 and not more than $1000. The Minister of Customs had no power to do more. Why then recommend something which could not be done.

"There might be a recommendation that there be no more renewals" interjected Commissioner Wright. The commissioners took the recommendations of Mr. Calder under consideration.

What Gasoline gives you

—Utmost Satisfaction?
*—Greatest Economy? **

THE ANSWER to the most exacting motoring requirements is found in Imperial Ethyl Gasoline. Whatever make or model of car you drive you can get the most out of your car by filling your tank with this superior fuel. You sweep over hills, you slow to a crawl in traffic—all without touching the gear-lever. Gone are the knocks, the "bucks," the vibration and the strains! What you really have in place of these, is an engine performance finer than you've a right to expect from your car—for Imperial Ethyl simply transforms a motor—cures the knock and turns the carbon into power.

* The advantages of Imperial Ethyl Gasoline are so marked as to make the small additional cost a real economy. It will be found that Imperial Ethyl more than pays for itself in (1) elimination of the engine wear-and-tear that "knocking" causes, (2) more power from each gallon of fuel, (3) freedom from the expense of carbon removal.

IMPERIAL ETHYL

A Truly Economical Gasoline

IMPERIAL ETHYL GASOLINE Knocks out that "Knock"

What You Should Know About Imperial Ethyl Gasoline

1. What is Ethyl Gasoline?
It is gasoline containing enough Ethyl Brand of Anti-Knock Compound to eliminate "knocking." Imperial Oil Limited—the Company which mixes Ethyl Brand of Anti-Knock Compound with its gasoline to make Imperial Ethyl Gasoline—has agreed to use such portion of the Compound with its gasoline as may be necessary to maintain a given standard of anti-knock value, and that the Compound will not be mixed with any gasoline that does not conform in sulphur content and distillation characteristics to the specifications set by the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation.

2. What is that "Knock" that Ethyl Gasoline "Knocks Out?"
Science has found that what has been called an "engine knock" or "spark knock" is in reality a fuel knock—due to the tendency of straight gasoline to explode too quickly beyond certain temperature and compression limits.

3. What are the effects of that "knock?"
Your motor was designed to deliver a certain number of r.p.m.'s (revolutions per minute). But that is on the basis of a new and clean motor. As carbon forms and the "knock" becomes pronounced, the r.p.m.'s drop and you notice it in the form of a sluggish motor, loss of power on hills and in pick-up, vibration and wear-and-tear on the motor.

4. Why does Ethyl Gasoline "knock out that 'knock'"?
"ETHYL" fluid controls the combustion rate of gasoline. It keeps it from burning too quickly in the presence of carbon and at high temperature.

5. Does Ethyl Gasoline harm the motor or any of its parts in any way?
No—Ethyl Gasoline contains no ingredients that could possibly be harmful to any motor.

6. Does Ethyl Gasoline increase power?
Yes. Carbon deposits increase the compression of the present-day motor because they decrease the size of the combustion chamber and thereby furnish greater pressure against the piston. Since "ETHYL" fluid neutralizes the heating qualities of carbon and maintains the normal combustion rate of gasoline, this increased pressure becomes increased power. In other words, carbon is transferred from a liability into an asset.

7. Does Ethyl Gasoline give more Mileage?
By preventing "knocking," permitting full spark advance and reducing gear-shifting, Ethyl Gasoline tends to give increased mileage as a car becomes well-carboned and therefore higher compressioned.
With engines of the higher compressions which Ethyl Gasoline makes possible, a considerable increase in fuel economy will be noticeable.

8. Does Ethyl Gasoline overheat motor parts or the cooling system?
By converting more of the heat units into power, Ethyl Gasoline cuts down the number that enter the cooling system and exhaust gases—thus actually making the engine run cooler.

Bright Outlook Held for Season at City League Meeting

CITY LEAGUE DISCUSS PLANS FOR SEASON

Good Attendance at First Official Meeting of Baseball League.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Will Petition District Towns to Form League With Peterborough.

The City League Baseball got away to a good start when they held their first official meeting in the Chamber of Commerce last night. A good attendance of both officers and players turned out and by all indications, it looks like an excellent season for the hard ball enthusiasts. In the absence of last year's president, Dr. Craig, for the first part of the meeting, Roy Taylor took the chair and carried on the opening of the league in a very capable manner.

Secretary's Report Read.

W. Prindible was called upon as last year's secretary, to read his report, who showed that after paying all accounts for a representative to go to Toronto to make an application and to pay an entrance fee, there was not as many funds to start the season this year as there was in the year 1926. But it was brought up by some of the members that as there was some balance at the end of each season it was clearly shown that the league was not losing anything for the only real expenses for the season were the cost of the balls, as nearly all the transportation is supplied gratis by men for whom the different clubs represent. Mr. Prindible also received a letter from Deloro requesting the names of the officers for 1927, and a motion was passed to send them a letter immediately following this initial meeting.

Election of Officers.

The officers elected for the season of 1927 were as follows:

Honorary President— R. M. Waddell.

Honorary Vice-Presidents — R. Denne and R. Glover.

President—Dr. Craig.

Secretary— V. O'Connel, with W. Prindible as assistant secretary.

An executive, composed of Max Swanston, E. LeBarr and Stan. Lowe were elected to assist the president.

After the election of officers, the following teams enterd the City League for the Junior, Juvenile and Bantam series, with no entries for a Midget team in any of the clubs.

Teams Entered.

The following teams were entered in the League:

(Junior)—
Kiwanis, with Jack Deannard as manager.
Rotary, with "Bill" Prindible as manager.

(Juveniles)—
Royals, with N. McFadden managing.
Kiwanis, with J. Dennard as manager.
Canucks, with J. Burke managing.

(Bantam)—
Kowanis, with W. Hunt as manager.
Canucks, with J. Burke managing.

Mr. Deannard then suggested that a letter be written immediately requesting Port Hope, Cobourg, Lindsay and Curve Lake to enter into a league with Peterborough to play Juvenile, Junior or Bantam, and Lakefield was also mentioned as a possible bantam team to enter the league with the rest.

The fee for each club will be $5.00, whether a single team is entered or three teams, and this means the same for any outside club unless they are unable to pay it.

Playing Grounds.

Suitable grounds for playing games on and practising were then discussed and it was found that the Exhibition Park diamond was available every Monday and Thursday. A motion was then made by Jack Deannard that the secretary write a letter to Mr. Greene, chairman of the Parks committee, requesting him to try and do something for the City League Baseball by erecting cages in King Edward Park and make that a permanent playing diamond for the bantam series. One night a week is also available at the James Stevenson Park (Riverside).

Will Send Protest.

Dr. Craig then made a motion that a letter of protest be sent to the Board of Education in regard to the playing of softball as an official game in the Public schools. He said that some time ago the matter had been brought up to the Board, though they evidently thought that softball would die out, for Doctor Craig told the members gathered last night that on inquiring into the matter the other day with the different principals of the schools, he was surprised to learn that most of the new balls had been purchased with a view to a successful softball season.

"Bill" Prindible then suggested that all players have their birth certificates attached to their applications before handing it into their respective managers before any games have been participated in, so that all trouble would be avoided in the coming season. It was then decided that the Spalding ball would still be used under the same conditions as last year, meaning cups and medals offered to the different clubs by the Spalding Company.

Name Umpires.

The following men were suggested as being written to and requested to act in the capacity of umpires for the season: A. Kay, M. Swanston, E. LeBarr, L. LeBarr and J. Sullivan.

The meeting was then closed and all went away with the feeling that the hard ball season of 1927 was going to break any previous records for success.

ARSENAL TO FACE CARDIFF CITY IN FINAL FOR ENGLISH CUP HONORS

Interest Continues Lively in Battle for Soccer League Crown.

SATURDAY'S GAMES

Huddersfield Town Making Titantic Efforts to Retain Title.

LONDON, April 22 (Canadian Press cable)—While the whole country is buzzing with speculation as to the outcome of the English Cup fight on Saturday when Arsenal will face Cardiff City at Wembley stadium in the final contest, interest nevertheless continues lively in the battle for league honors. The struggle between Huddersfield Town and Newcastle United is a titanic one, the former desperately striving to close the gap which yawns between them and the honor of holding the title for four years in succession, the latter fighting with equal determination to get hold of the few points that would put them beyond all danger.

Huddersfield were able to reduce Newcastles lead to four points by virtue of their one nothing victory over the Tynesiders last Tuesday but with only three more games to go their task of clambering into the championship position again would seem to be hopeless. However, two of these three games, as far as Huddersfield are concerned, are down for decision on their own ground, while two of the United's three are away from home. On Saturday the United face one of the stiffest propositions of the season when they visit Upton Park to take on West Ham United. The Hammers have been going well recently and are under an obligation to produce a home victory for their supporters. Their last two games were dropped to Burnley and the Spurs respectively, and they will have to fight hard to avoid making it three defeats in a row. Such a thing happened to Hammers at the opening of the season, but not since.

Huddersfied Town are at home to Manchester United, and on form should have no difficulty in disposing of the Old Trafford Club. Much hinges on the result of these two games, for a defeat for Newcastle coupled with a victory for Huddersfield would bring the Yorkshiremen back into the running ,but a victory for the Tynesiders coupled with a defeat or a draw for Huddersfield would give Newcastle the championship.

These games overshadow all others in the league, although not without interest is the fight that Everton is putting up to avoid relegation. West Bromwich are as good as demoted, and Leeds United are in a bad way, but their position is not exactly hopeless. However, if Everton manage to defeat Aston Villa tomorrow, that will seal the fate of Leeds.

In the second division, Middlesborough have the situation well in hand and another two points out of the possible six remaining to them will establish their right to promotion. The struggle in this department is one for the honor of accompanying Middlesborough into the first division, and the issue is joined between Portsmouth and Chelsea. Preston North End, Manchester City and Nottingham Forest have outside chances. On Saturday the Pensioners play Barnsley while the divisional leaders are engaged at Blackpool.

Liverpool at Birmingham: Bolton at Blackburn: Burnley at The Wednesday: Derby County at Sunderland: Leeds at Tottenham and Sheffield United at West Bromwich.

NATIONALS EVEN UP ON GIANTS

Launch Home-Run Attack Against Pitching of Yankee Discard.

ROBINS LOSE OUT

NEW YORK, April 22 (Canadian Press).—Launching a home run attack behind the fine pitching of Alex. Ferguson, Yankee discard, the Philadelphia Nationals evened up on the Giants at the Polo Grounds yesterday with a 4 to 2 victory. Ferguson yielded three bunched hits, including Lindstrom's homer in the first, but pitched hitlessly thereafter while Wrightstone and Williams clouted for the circuit and the game.

The Boston Braves overcame the Robins at Brooklyn 3 to 0. Bob Smith, working on the Braves' mound, allowed only two hits. Smith pitched to twenty-nine Robins and three of the five who reached first base were erased in double plays. It was the second shut-out for Brooklyn in three days.

Pittsburgh trimmed Cincinnati 3 to 2 yesterday in the smoky city. Ray Kremer, Pirate hurler, tied the game with a home run, and later his sacrifice contributed to victory. Thirty thousand fans saw the Pirates start the home season in a drizzle of rain.

The Chicago-St. Louis fracas was postponed because of inclement weather.

SOCCER GAME ON SATURDAY

Masseys Versus United at King Edward Park.

KICK-OFF AT THREE.

An exhibition game in the Soccer code will be played on Saturday afternoon between the United eleven and the Massey teams, at King Edward Park. Kick off at 3 o'clock, and Johnny Ward will referee.

In the earlier part of the week it was anticipated that an eleven chosen from the C.P.C. would be the opposition to the Massey boys, but they failed to get encouragement to put a team on the field, ultimately two soccer fans formulated the United as a club, and will enter as the fourth entry with the senior league.

Any player who desires to get into the game should phone 1434J or consult John Ward so that they may be given a game to-morrow.

Stanley Cup Returns To Familiar Shelves

MONTREAL, Que., April 22.—Yesterday Montreal saw the last of the historic old Stanley Cup, emblematic of the National Hockey League championship, for one year at least. The trophy left for Ottawa yesterday afternoon, with Manager Dave Gill, of the new champion Ottawa Senators, as the cinsignee. Thus the famous cup returns to a city where it has often been displayed and held by Ottawa teams in the past.

Along with the Stanley Cup goes the Prince of Wales and O'Brien Trophies, to be held by the team winning the National Hockey League championship. The cups were held last year by the Montreal Maroons.

LOSE OPENER AT HOME PARK

Five Runs in First Two Innings Gives Senators Lead.

GAMES POSTPONED

NEW YORK, April 22 (Canadian Press).—The Yankees triumphed over Philadelphia 13 to 6 and the Senators defeated Boston 7 to 4, in the two American League games played yesterday. St. Louis-Detroit and Cleveland-Chicago games were postponed.

The Yankee victory was a heavy slugging affair, Gehrig and Lazzeri contributing homers each with two men on base. Gehrig was responsible for six runs. Moore did some good relief pitching, following Hoyt's departure from the mound in the fifth.

Bill Carrigan's Red Sox were at home in Boston yesterday for the first time this season, sustaining a defeat for the opener. Five runs off Wingfield in the first two innings proved enough to give the Senators the game despite Tobin's homer in the sixth with the bases loaded. The fans gave Carrigan an automobile.

GENE TO FIGHT IN SEPTEMBER

Expects to Get at Least $750,000 as Share of Purse.

IN RICKARD'S PURSE

NEW YORK, April 22 (Canadian Press).—For his first defence of the world's heavyweight championship in September, Gene Tunney expects to get at least as much, if not more, than the $750,000 Jack Dempsey is understood to have received in their title bout last year.

Tunney, just back from a transcontinental vaudeville tour that extended over 16 weeks, disclosed that by agreeing to fight the winner of Tex Rickard's elimination tournament, he will receive more than he would otherwise.

"Rickard is making big money out of the elimination bouts because it's advertised that the survivor will fight me," Tunney explained.

Setting at rest all reports to the contrary, Tunney declared that all his fighting plans this year are in Rickard's hands.

FIGHT RESULTS.

LONDON, April 22 (Canadian Press).—Julius Okum, former Wall Street clerk, was disqualified in the sixth round in his fistic encounter with Phil Scott, British heavyweight champion, at Olympia last night.

Milton Cohen outpointed Kid Pattenden.

These bouts all went the fifteen-round limit.

The Scott-Okun fight, the main attraction, was to go twenty rounds.

Jopagan Ridden Poorly. Second In Havre Feature

HAVRE DE GRACE, April 22.—Jopagan, an important Derby candidate, went down to an undeserved defeat yesterday in the Nation Vaudevill Artists' Handicap. He was beaten a length by Indian Love Call after his rider, Thomas, had done about everything but fall off his back during the six-furlong sprint. Contemplate was third, a half length back of Jopagan.

Workman, aboard the winner, was celebrating the passing of his apprenticeship. The winter riding ace loses is allowance today, having been in the saddle exactly one year.

READING LOSE SECOND GAME

Leafs Take Advantage of Ragged Support of Keys' Outfield.

PLAYER INJURED

NEW YORK, April 22 (Canadian Press).—The Maple Leafs took advantage of the fumbling raggedness of Reading yesterday and copped the second game of their series with the Keys, 6 to 3. Slappey pitched good ball, allowing only seven hits in the seven innings he worked, but his support was of the feeblest. Hugh Ferrell, Reading second baseman, was slightly injured when Andy Harrington slapped a single off his face.

Syracuse sank the Skeeters at Jersey City 11 to 3. Five runs tumbling over the plate in the second inning put the Stars where they were never headed. It was a heavy socking game with twenty-three bingles registered.

The Baltimore Orioles conquered the Rochester Colts 5 to 1. Ogden pitched smooth ball, holding the Colts to six hits through the entire session.

Buffalo came through with two runs in the first half of the ninth, but it was not enough and Newark won a tight game 6 to 5. Mamanx allowed fourteen hits, but the Bisons could not convert them.

EARLY TRIAL FOR ACCUSED PLAYER

State Seeks To Hurry Hearing of Kelly On Murder Charge.

LOS ANGELES, April 22.—(Canadian Press.)—The district attorney's office announced to-day that an early trial would be sought for Paul Kelly, following the arraignment of the film player yesterday on an indictment charging him with the murder of Ray Raymond, musical comedy star.

Meanwhile, attorneys for Kelly were seeking to learn whether Dorothy Mackay, the stage actress who figures in the love triangle, had been legally married to Raymond.

DEMPSEY STARTS COME-BACK WORK

Confident of Ability To Regain Title—In Good Shape.

LOS ANGELES, April 22 (Canadian Press) — Jack Dempsey has started training work at his "comeback" camp in the San Rafael mountains for a return fight with Gene Tunney. Dempsey said that a return bout with Tunney, probably late this summer, for a side bet of from $5,000 to $500,000, would be his idea of settling the heavyweight championship question.

"I don't need a doctor to tell me I'm feeling better than I ever felt before. I'm confident that I can come back — better than ever," he said. "For the first time I have gotten out from under the strain that must wear down a champion. Now all I have to do is fight. Tunney can do the worrying. If I meet Tunney again I will regain the heavyweight championship. If the fight world thinks I should take on some warming up fights, I'm willing to do it."

ROBERT J. LYLE

TORONTO, April 22 — Robert J. Lyle, whose sudden death occurred Wednesday morning at the Arlington Hotel, where he was a resident guest, was a native of the City of Peterboro' and was 70 years old. Mr. Lyle ahd a notable career in the United States, where he went in 1886. Almost immediately he became interested in the credit interchange system then just taking form, by the association of wholesale merchants, which was an innovation upon the established system of the mercantile agencies. Through the genius of Mr. Lyle this method of interchange of ledger experiences spread itself throughout the United States, and branch offices were established in all of the principal mercantile trade centres.

A corporation was then formed by Mr. Lyle and his associates, known as the Credit Clearing House, which is now a $6,000,000 concern with head office in New York City.

Upon his retirement from active business Mr. Lyle became interested in an effort to improve the facilities of electric transportation.

BUSINESS SESSION AT KIWANIS CLUB

Vern Morphet Contributes Two Numbers—Health Camp Discussed.

The members of the Kiwanis Club were disappointed to learn that Emile Sauer, the Americean Consul in Toronto, was unable to speak at their luncheoen to-day. Last night John Allen received a telegram from Mr. Sauer stating his regret that he could not be present to-day on account of illness in his family. Mr. Allen immediately answered the wire requesting the presence of the vice-consul in his place, but at the present time he is too busy to leave the city. This was quite a disappointment to the members as this week is "United States-Canada Week" and a talk from the American Consul would have been very fitting for that occasion.

After the singing of the National Anthem, "My Country 'Tis of Thee", was sung in recognition of this United States-Canada week. Members at each table were introduced by representatives called upon by the President, I. P. McNabb. Dr. Craig then spoke in favor of the Diamond Jubilee that is to be held on July 1 and said he hoped that the Kiwanis would aid in making the parade a success to show that Canada has a great history and how much she has progressed since the time of the Redskins and buffalo.

Harry Huffman was then called upon to relate the trip and the results of the visit to Lindsay. Many members from Toronto attended and everyone had an enjoyable outing. They were entertained through the members of the Kiwanis Club of Lindsay by some very competent singers.

John Turner outlined the trip that is to be made to Bowmanville on Wednesday, April 27th. Cars are to leave the Market square at three o'clock to take the member and their wives and a real good time is promised. Mr. Turner stated that they expect to be home at ten o'clock, and also that if anyone could not take a car the other members would gladly accommodate all who cared to go.

Vern. Morphet was called on for a song, and in his usual jovial manner gave two selections, that all but convulsed his audience with laughter. Martin Chenhall was the accompanist, and the booster of the day was Jim Doran, and his prizes were won by Jack Green and Ivan Lillico. Business discussion was centred around the Health Association camp at Jackson Park this summer, and although many opinions were passed as to whether the camp for under-privileged children should be wholly carried on by the Kiwanis Club, or whether it should be run by the Health Association, the club to finance it up to the extent of twelve hundred dollars, it was voted and carried that the latter plan be adopted.

INSPIRING TALK AT GOSPEL HALL

Mr. Taylor Preaches on Deliverance—Series of Sermons.

HERE UNTIL SUNDAY.

Mr. Taylor at Gospel Hall spoke last night on "Deliverance."

He said first God delivered the believer from the penalty of sins because of the blood of Christ having cleansed from the guilt of sin. This was never repeated but was a transaction once and for ever. The moment a guilty sinner accepts by faith the finished work of Christ he was made a child of God and nothing can alter this.

Deliverance is three-fold in character, first from the penalty, second from the power and third from the presence of sin.

Deliverance implies weakness or inability to help oneself so help must come from God. The children of Israel when they came out of Egypt were hemmed in the Red Sea in front, mountains on either side and Egypt's soldiers coming up after. Moses said "Stand still and see the salvation of God" and God opened a way right through the Red Sea—and Israel passed over safely.

Thus the Red Sea is a type of the cross of Christ. It stands between the Christian and the world and should be manifest in the lives of believers who refuse to be enamoured by the goddess of fashion and the sinful pleasures of Satan the god of the world.

Mr. Taylor gave many Scriptures showing God's estimate of the things the world calls great and also giving God's offer of mercy to all who will call upon Him in truth.

Mr. Taylor is staying over Sunday and will be heard again tonight.

20 MEN KILLED AND 100 INJURED EXPLOSION AND FIRE IN DETROIT

Large Quantities of Varnish in Auto Body Plant Hinder Firemen.

BUILDING DESTROYED.

Occupants of Nearby Houses Forced To Leave—Two Firemen Die.

DETROIT, Michigan, April 23. Canadian Press. — Fire following a series of explosions in one of the main plants of the Briggs Manufacturing Co., an automobile body firm, early to-day killed at least twenty men and injured more than one hundred, according to an early estimate by the firemen.

Two firemen who were on the roof of the building are believed to have fallen to death in the blazing interior.

The building, a new four storey brick and steel structure, was destroyed.

Shortly before noon a definite check of the number of dead and injured was not available. Many of the dead were believed to be in the still blazing ruins

Ambulances took a dozen or more loads of injured to various hospitals. At the receiving hospital, where 25 injured were brought in, Dr. Thomas K. Gruber, the superintendent, said that probably two-thirds of them would die.

A strong wind, and the fact that the plant contained large quantities of paints and vanishes used in automobile body finishing, hampered efforts at rescue work. More than 2000 persons were at work in the building at the time of the explosion.

Many of the injured were treated in the plant's first aid station, but this had to be abandoned when the flames spread to that part of the building. Most of the injured were victims of the heavy smoke and flames that spread through the building soon after the explosion.

As the fire continued more than an hour and a half after the explosion, the occupants of nearby houses and stores were directed to vacate immediately, it being apparent that the walls of the plant would collapse. police lines were established 900 feet around the plant.

LINDSAY ROAD NOT TAKEN OVER

Department Will Not Look After Towing Until It Is.

TOURISTS ARRIVING.

In regard to the bad condition of the roads in the surrounding country, Frank Stinson, secretary of the Peterborough Branch of the Ontario Motor League, received the following reply in answer to his letter to the Minister of Public Highways, asking if the motorists were given assistance by the Government:

"In reply to yours of the 21st inst., regarding towing on the Provincial Highway system during the bad condition of the roads this spring, let me say, that has been our practice, but as far as the road between Lindsay and Peterborough is concerned, this has not as yet been taken over, and we are not, therefore, assuming any responsibility for costs for inconvenience that users of this road have experienced."

In speaking of the tourist traffic, Mr. Stinson remarked that he was amazed, while taking a pleasure ride recently, to see so many American cars so early in the season around Bewdley, Port Hope, and Cobourg. New York and Ohio licenses were most predominant, while some Michigan cars were also noticed. Mr. Stinson told The Examiner this morning that it was his firm belief that the average tourist comes to Canada, not to drain the lakes of fish, as many people think, but to come over and enjoy a real vacation in the quiet atmosphere of the Kawartha Lakes, away from the turmoil of the larger American cities.

Belleville Youth Surprised While Looting Well-and Shop.

WELLAND, April 23.— (Canadian Press.)— Awakened at 3 o'clock this morning by a noise in his store, F. J. Semmell came upon an intruder gathering up a quantity of dry goods. The robber went through the motion of pointing what might have been a gun at Semmell, but the storekeeper closed with him. The burglar got away but ran into the arms of a policeman on the street. He gave the name of Clarence Hill, 19, an Indian, with home at Belleville.

Persia Stops British Airplanes From Crossing

LONDON, April 23 (Canadian Press).—The Daily Express states that the Persian Government has refused permission for British aircraft to fly over Persian territory, thus severing the Cairo-Karachi air route inaugurated last January.

The paper describes this action as a breach of contract and says the reason given by the Persian Government is that Britain has refused to allow commercial aeroplanes to fly to Bagdad.

ROBERTS SUIT AGAINST CITY IS DISMISSED

BROKE COLLAR BONE.

Judge Rules Depression in Sidewalk Had Nothing To Do With Accident.

His Honor Judge McGlade of Cobourg yesterday dismissed the case of W. H. Roberts of this city against the Corporation of the City of Peterborough. Mr. Roberts claimed damages to the sum of $500 on account of a broken collar bone sustained in a fall on George Street on the evening of January 6, 1927. W. F. Huycke acted for the plaintiff and F. J. Hughes represented The Zurich Accident Insurance Company which holds the accident policy that is carried by the Corporation. Joseph Wearing was present on the part of the city.

The fall occurred in front of W. H. Meredith's store on George Street, and at this particular place, there is a slight depression in two cement slabs of the sidewalk. The plaintiff maintained that it was due to this depression in which water had collected and frozen. Judge McGlade ruled that the depression had nothing to do with it as the evidence showed that at that time of year the whole sidewalk was covered with ice.

Submits Weather Report.

Walter Peters was the first witness called by the plaintiff. He submitted to the court his weather reports of the first six days in January. "On January fifth, it had been rather mild," said Mr. Peters, "but on the sixth it had turned cold, and the temperature did not go above 24 deg. during the day, which caused much ice on the streets.

W. H. Roberts, the plaintiff, was the second witness called by Mr. Huycke. Mr. Roberts said he was a saddler by trade, and arried on a business on Simcoe Street. On the evening of January 6 he left his shop about nine o'clock and proceeded to the I.O.O.F. Hall on George Street. While walking on the sidewalk in front of the store of W. H. Meredith he slipped and fell, breaking his collar bone. He was unable to work for six weeks, during which time he lost considerable trade. Since the accident Mr. Roberts said he has visited the scene and found a depression in the sidewalk.

Sidewalk Icy.

Donald Fowler, a drug clerk in the store of B. McLeod, gave evidence that on the day of the accident, the streets were very icy and that at the scene of the accident the ice space was much larger on account of the boys sliding on this particular place. Witness also said that during wet weather, water would lie in this depression in the street.

Bert McLeod said he had noticed a patch of ice formed at the place the accident occurred. Dr. Hammond, the physician who attended Mr. Roberts, was also called and he gave evidence that on the day following the accident he had examined the plaintiff's collar bone and had set it. George Perks submitted a plan of the lay-out of the street which had been taken recently, and Dr. T. W. H. Young gave other medical evidence which showed that the collar bone of the plaintiff had been broken.

The Defence.

Mr. Hughes, before opening his case, submitted to His Honor that the evidence of the plaintiff failed to prove that there was gross negligence on the part of the city as required by statute.

R. H. Parsons, city engineer, was the first witness called and he gave evidence that a man was designated to sand the streets in the business part of the city. This was done once, sometimes twice, a day during icy weather. The depression in the sidewalk, although complained of by Mr. Meredith had never been fixed, because there were other places just as bad, and there never was money enough in the estimates.

Too Much Sanding.

W. H. Meredith, when called, said that the sanding had been well done last winter, and in many cases the storekeepers thought there was too much put on as it was tracked into the stores. Mr. Meredith told about the depression in the sidewalk and of how the water lay in it during wet weather, but at the time of the accident the street was well sanded.

Charles Barton, who is an employee of the city, said that he went over

PLAN CAMPAIGN ON UNIONS BILL

The Unconquered Dead

"... defeated, with great loss."
—From German Report.

Not we the conquered! Not to us the blame
Of them that flee, of them that basely yield;
Nor ours the shout of victory, the fame
Of them that vanquish in a stricken field.

That day of battle in the dusty heat
We lay and heard the bullets swish and sing
Like scythes amid the over-ripened wheat,
And we the harvest of their garnering.

Some yielded. No, not we! Not we, we swear
By these our wounds; this trench upon the hill
Where all the shell-strewn earth is seamed and bare,
Was ours to keep; and lo! we have it still

We might have yielded, even we, but death
Came for our helper; like a sudden flood
The crashing darkness fell; our painful breath
We drew in gasps amid the choking blood.

The roar fell faint and farther off, and soon
Sank to a foolish humming in our ears,
Like crickets in the long, hot afternoon
Among the wheat fields of the olden years.

Before our eyes a boundless wall of red
Shot through by sudden streaks of jagged pain!
Then a slow-gathering darkness overhead
And rest came on us like a quiet rain.

Not we the conquered! Not to us the shame,
Who hold our earthen ramparts, nor shall cease
To hold them over; victors we, who came
In that fierce moment to our honoured peace.

LONDON, April 23 (United Press) —The British Durham and Suffolk regiments at Shanghai were prepared to-day to proceed to Hankow if the threatened foreign crisis there materializes. The Post's Shanghai correspondent reported.

All Returned Soldiers Invited To Attend George Street Church.

TWELFTH YEAR.

Denomination and Civil Positions Are Sunk in Splendid Gesture.

Peterborough Veterans of the Great War will to-morrow pay tribute to Ypres Day, a day of memories that are sad and glorious.

The annual Church Parade of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, formerly the G.W.V.A., is held on the Sunday nearest to April 22, the anniversary of the day on which the second battle of Ypres opened. It was in this battle that the war first struck home to the hearts of Peterborough people through the casualty lists.

The Church Parade, however is not confined to members of the Canadian Legion. It is yearly participated in by larger and larger numbers of unattached veterans, who appreciate the spirit of the day and are glad to unite again in recalling the stirring days of war. And who can doubt that as they march their ranks are swelled by the spirits of those others whom they left to hold the Ypres salient forever sacred to Canada?

To-day around them surges from the silences of Time
A flood of nobler music, like a river deep and broad,
Fit song for heroes gathered in the banquet-hall of God.
—John McCrae.

The old spirit of the Canadian forces re-lives in the annual ceremony in another way, too. The rifts of denominationalism are forgotten, and Presbyterian and Anglican, Roman Catholic and United Church, Baptist and Salvation Army, march together and together remember their comrades of war years. Two years ago the parade was to St. Peter's Cathedral, last year it was held in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, and to-morrow the Veterans will gather in George St. United Church.

Last year, for the first time, symbolism was introduced into the service, when two steel-helmeted Veterans, resting on reversed rifles, kept awake in the large congregation the thought of the object of the service. It is believed that this will be continued to-morrow, although the strain of so long standing motionless in the tiring posture of the "Reverse" is severe, and taxes the stamina of the strongest.

The parade will be under command of Lt. Col. C. H. Ackerman, President of the Canadian Legion, and will be marshalled by Captain James Abraham.

The Legion invites all Veterans to join in the parade and citizens generally to attend the church services.

OPPOSITION TO TAKING CHARGES OF PRESBYTERY

Cobourg United Church Body Favors Different Division of Presbyteries.

REGULAR MEETING.

Most Charges Represented at Meeting Held at Baltimore.

NORHAM, April 23.—The Cobourg Presbytery according to schedule, met in the United Church at Baltimore, on Thursday. The fifty-seven pastoral charges of the Presbytery were represented almost one hundred per cent by ministers, and the ministgr in almost every case was backed up by a layman. Rev. F. J. Maxwell, of Oshawa, chairman of the Presbytery presided and conducted the devotional exercises. One of the first reports heard was that of a special committee appointed last Fall to confer with a similar committee from the Lindsay Presbytery on the matter of a change in the boundaries of Presbyteries. A storm of protest was raised from many angles against concurring in the suggestions offered by Lindsay as to several outlying charges being severed from the Cobourg Presbytery. Many voices were raised in an effort to reach a decision to divide the present Cobourg Presbytery East and West with an Oshawa and a Cobourg Presbytery. A committee of seven was appointed to consider the matter and report later.

Merrill Ferguson and Stanley Osborne, of Bowmanville, Donald DeMille of Oshawa, and Roy Vincent, Pomeroy, were recommended as candidates for the ministry.

Petitions were received from Dunbarton, Whitevale, and Claremont pastoral charges asking to be identified with Toronto East Presbytery instead of Cobourg.

The Home Mission Committee recommended that the following charges receive grants: St. Andrew's Brighton, $300; Alderville, $850; Oshawa Mission, $1,000; Pontypool, $200; Scugog, $450; Stockdale, $240; Welcome, $100; Cavan, $75; Greenwood, $360.

The Oshawa City Mission was given permission to mortgage its newly purchased property to the extent of $2,000.

Rev. J. S. I. Wilson of Brighton, in a report for the Maintenance and Extension Fund Committee, stated that eight charges, namely, Campbellford, Seymour, Fraserville, Whitby, Pickering, St. Andrew's, Oshawa (South), Oshawa (Simcoe Street), and Oshawa (King Street) had reached their objectives. Two charges raised nothing. Fourteen had raised less than 50 per cent of their objective. On the whole, the Presbytery had raised 85 per cent of its objective, or about $70,000 out of $85,615.

Grafton congregation was given permission to sell the former Methodist Church. Columbus was given permission to sell the former Methodist church. Dunbarton congregation was given permission to sell the old manse, and in each case the proceeds are to be applied to repairs and expenses on present or new properties.

It was recommended that Miss Keith, deaconness in Oshawa among the Ukrainian people, receive from the Home Mission funds, the sum of $15 a month to defray the cost of maintaining the building used for public service.

It was recommended that the Bethel Church, which was formerly a part of Prince Albert circuit, be

Young Bandit Sentenced To Five Years In Prison

VANCOUVER, B.C., April 23.—For the part he played in the hold-up of the Baravon Cafe here on February 26, Edwin Turner, 20, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment in the Penitentiary by Magistrate R. C. Shaw, in Police Court yesterday.

Turner was found lying practically at the point of death in a lane near the scene of the hold-up early the same day suffering from a bullet wound in the chest. He was said to have turned his gun on himself when in fear of capture.

Robert Lepine, the companion of Turner in the hold-up, was caught a few minutes after the robbery and sentenced to five years in the Penitentiary. Turner was taken to the General Hospital where he was operated on successfully.

Turner came to Vancouver from Wallaceburg, Ontario, last Fall, it is reported, reaching this city after working in the Prairie harvest fields. The revolver used in the hold-up was stolen from a store in Seattle, according to his story to the police.

CANADIANS ARE COMING HOME

OTHERS RETURN.

A bulletin just issued by the Canadian Pacific Railway announces that the increments in Canadian immigration which featured the year 1926 continue to be recorded. Newcomers to the Dominion for the first two months of 1927 totaled 9,685 as compared with 6,720 in the first two months of 1926, an increase of 44.12 per cent. The total volume of immigration in the first eleven months of the fiscal year was 123,720 as against 80,835 in the same period of the previous corresponding year, an increase of 53 per cent. The increase of the first two months of 1927 continued throughout the whole year will result in the predicted figure of 200,000 being reached, whereas the probability is that with such early activity evidenced this figure will be exceeded, says the bulletin, which continues:

"Of equal importance and significance at the present time is the complementary movement of expatriated Canadians from the United States back to their native land. In the first two months of 1927, 4,694 ex-Canadians who had made permanent domicile in the United States and remained there for longer than six months came back to make new homes in the Dominion. For the first eleven months of the fiscal year the number to so return has been 53,295, an average of nearly 5,000 per month. According to the Quebec Minister of Colonization, the return of French-Canadians who left Quebec for the New England States in the post-war years, is pronounced and swelling. According to his statement, between July, 1925, and April, 1926, 33,292 expatriated children of Quebec returned to their native Province, and between April, 1926, and January, 1927, 50,898.

"Immigrant arrivals in the early months of 1927 have been much heavier than in former years. Ten Canadian Pacific Steamship arrivals in March, before the opening of navigation on the St. Lawrence, added an average of nearly 1,000 per vessel to Canadian population. Thirteen arrivals of the fleet are due in April, half of them before the opening of the summer season.

"The striking feature of the immigration movement on Canadian Pacific Steamship vessels is the equable manner of absorption. By far the larger proportion of newcomers moved in response to orders placed by various organizations, national and local, into whose hands these individuals move directly for placement and supervision. The scope of national societies co-operating with the Department of Colonization and Development, Canadian Pacific Railway, has so steadily widened that today the transfer of large bodies of European newcomers is conducted under their aegis, while the ready response to the department's efforts at extending the system of local colonization boards results in nearly all other new arrivals passing directly into the hands of such helpful bodies.

"One of the most pleasing phases of the immigration situation this year is the marked revival of interest in Western Canadian lands on the part of United States agriculturists after more or less of an apathy during the period of agricultural depression. This has been most pronounced since the opening of the year. All interested bureaus have reported a much larger volume of inquiry than for some years. To take but one example in the heart of the region of the great exodus the representative of the Canadian Pacific Railway Department of Colonization and Development at St. Paul, Minn., reports an increase of 1,000 per cent. in the number of pertinent inquiries and states that greater interest is being shown by American farmers in Canadian lands that at any time since the banner years of 1912 and 1913. At the time the interest of Americans from the tobacco States in Ontario tobacco lands, previously reported, has accentuated and there would seem to be every possibility now of a transfer of activities of these specialists on a fairly substantial scale."

Train Loads of Refugees Missing In Flood Zone

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 23 (by United Press)—Two train loads of flood refugees were reported lost yesterday somewhere in Eastern Arkansas.

The trains were believed marooned by high water. An airplane has been sent to locate them.

Prince Of Wales Picks Lonely Summer Home

LONDON, April 23—The Prince of Wales chose one of the most secluded spots in England for his summer home. He plans to pass June, July and August at Summerfold, the country house of the Duke of Sutherland, in the heart of the Surrey Hills. It is a mile from the nearest village, Ewhurst, four miles from the nearest railway station and three miles from an arterial road.

The house, a two-storey building of white stone, stands 800 feet above the sea level and commands a view over the Surrey and Sussex wilds. It is surrounded by thirty-eight acres of ground, including a tennis court hidden in a pine guarded hollow.

PLAN BOYS' CAMP IN NORTHUMBERLAND

NORHAM, April 23.—At a meeting held in St. Paul's United Church, Warkworth, on Tuesday, attended by representatives from Wooler, Norham, Brighton, Castleton and Charles Plewman, of Toronto, it was decided to hold a boys' camp for the county of Northumberland. Three probable places for the camp were discussed, Percy Boom, Crow Bridge, north of Campbellford, and Presqu'ile Point, near Brighton. It was estimated that from 75 to 100 boys might attend and as the larger quota would likely come from the south and west, it is anticipated that the camp will be conducted at the Point. On account of the roads and the press of duties at this season, the attendance was not large. Some of those present were Rev. W. W. Jones, B.D., Rev. H. B. Neil, Rev. J. F. Everson, Rev. James E. Beckel, Mr. William Brown and Rev. E. Edwards.

The registration fee for the week, including the purchase of milk and bread, was fixed at $1.75. The boys will be requested to bring food with them. This will be pooled at the camp, where a good cook will be engaged.

Camp director—Rev. Roy Rickard, of Albert College, Belleville.

STRICTLY CENSOR EVERY TELEGRAM

Order Issued By Mexican Government To Restrict Rebel Raids.

(By A. W. Folger, United Press Staff Correspondent)

MEXICO CITY, April 23—Harassed by outbreaks of rebel bands in widely scattered parts of the country, the Mexican government yesterday was censoring all outgoing telegraphic and cable messages, except those of a governmental and diplomatic nature.

The censorship order was officially made known to the Western Union shortly after Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz, of the state of Michoacan, issued a statement denying charges that Catholic priests led the rebel band which attacked and burned a train at LaBarca Tuesday.

Responsibility for the outrage, the archbishop said, "lies on those who have brought about this situation and have given and are giving an example of similar attacks."

Sixty-two bodies of victims of the train attack had reached Mexico City to-day ,and it was reliably reported that 40 more perished when the rebels set fire to the train of wooden coaches and shot the passengers as they attempted to escape.

MILLBROOK C.G.I.T. SOCIAL SUCCESSFUL

Short Play Main Item of Splendid Programme Given.

MILLBROOK, April 23. — The basket social, under the auspices of the Wide Awakes group of Canadian Girls in Training, held in the basement of the United Church on Wednesday evening, had a fair attendance, the busy season, and other intervening events, making the number present less than when this annual and popular gathering takes place in the Fall of the year.

Rev. F. H. Howard were chairman, and in his introductory remarks explained that the girls were giving the social to raise sufficient funds to send two of their number of the Provincial C.G.I.T. Camp at White House in July. The expense involved is between thirty and forty dollars.

The selection by the junior orchestra proved a popular opening number, the members being: Miss Ella Elsom, piano; Miss May Byam, violin; J. Larmer, ukulele, and E. Burnham, cornet.

Mrs. M. McDowell played the accompaniment for the song. "O All You Girls," by her four daughters, Dorothy, Madeline, Marjorie, and Beatrice; the encore being, "I Have a Little Pussy."

A selection by the male quartette, "God is Better Than We Think," (Messrs. H. W. Johnston, W. H. Coombe, M. McDowell, and V. C. Lambert), Mrs. H. W. Johnston residing at the piano, was followed by a recitation "The Sparking," by Miss Muriel Matchett; encore, "The Tale of a Dog and a Bee."

A Cantata, "Mother Earth and Her Children," was very suitable to the Spring season, the characters being: Mother Earth, Dorothy McDowell; Grass Children, Dorothy Smith and Beatrice McDowell; Daffodils and Cowslips, Audrey Garside and Myrtle Nattrass; Violets, Marjorie McDowell and Bernice Smith; Spring Beauties, Marie Douglas and Esther Might; Bluebells, Bryer Edmunds and Mary Burnham; Spring Messenger, Marguerite Hawken.

A duet, "The Gypsy's Warning," sung by Mrs. G. W. Sayles, wearing true Romany costume, and her daughter, Miss Majorie Sayles, who took the part of the high born lady coming to have her fortune told, was heartily applauded.

The junior orchestra played a selection preceding the two-act play, "Gaffer Grey's Legacy," and also played while the costumes were being changed between the acts.

The relatives of Gaffer Gray meet at the home of this cousin, Mrs. Colonel Green (Hazel McMahon) to find out the terms of his will. Being an eccentric old gentleman, the deceased has left instructions that his will is not to be read until a twelvemonth after his death; and when the other cousins arrive, Mrs. Araminta Smith (Elinor Fallis), Mrs. Carolina Brown (Flossie McMahon), Miss Jemima Jones (Elsie Spence), and Miss Winnifred White (Alvira Davis), accompanied by his two grandchildren; Lydia Robinson (Wilma Fallis) and Mary Grey (Annie McMahon), and are ushered in by Biddy Bobbins (Jean Stinson), the maid of all work, they proceed to quarrel rather bitterly. Each cousin is obsessed with the idea that the others are trying to read the will without her knowing its contents.

Biddy, who annoys her mistress by the absurb little curtsey she makes each time she enters the room, brings a letter from the lawyer telling of certain legacies, plate, china, books, etc., of which the various ladies are to make choice, and in one of which, they later find, the will has been hidden.

It turns out that in the frame of the old likeness of Cousin Grey, which had been chosen by Araminta Smith to the great amusement of the others, the important document is finally found; by its provisions fifty pounds are bequeathed to each of the ladies, and to the two grandchildren, whom in his lifetime he had disowned, the bulk of the property is willed.

Indignant and disappointed, the cousins are at first inclined to berate their deceased relative for his disposal of his wealth, but finally all are reconciled, and decide to accept Mrs. Smith's invitation to "dine with me tomorrow to celebrate the good fortunt of Lydia and Mary." Each declares she will make some use of the legacy she chose, for the occasion. Winnifred White raises a laugh by her promise that "my gold snuff box shall be produced at the dessert," and Cousin Araminto declares that she will hand "the dear old man's likeness in her dining-room; and we can almost fancy the good old soul is looking down upon us and smiling approval upon the kindly feeling with which each has accepted "Gaffer Grey's Legacy!"

Councillor G. W. Sayles auctioned the baskets, which were not so numerous as in previous years, but decidedlyartistic in design and colors, and lunch was served to those who had not come provided with baskets for the supper hour.

The proceeds were in the neighborhood of thirty dollars. The room was suitably decorated for the occasion, the stage being arranged as an old-fashioned parlor.

HOPE OF PARTY LIES IN WEST DELEGATES TOLD

Hon. Edwards Urges Winnipeg as Location For Conservative Convention.

STEVENS ABSENT.

Stinson of Lindsay Believes Interest is Needed For Convention.

TORONTO, April 23. — The first disappointment of the Liberal-Conservative convention occurred at the opening of the afternoon session when Chairman J. R. MacNicol announced that H. H. Stevens, M.P., was on his way to Vancouver and had written his regrets at being unable to be present.

Hon. Dr. J. W. Edwards, Frontenac, was called to take the vacant place and present the reasons why a Conservative national convention should be held. He advocated the Winnipeg location because, he said, he believed that the future of the party lay west of Winnipeg rather than east of Ottawa. It was more than the success of the party that was at stake. On the success of the Conservative party depended the success of the dominion, he declared.

Mr. L. B. Spencer, Welland, thought the most important part had been allotted to Canada that had ever fallen to any nation. The influx of American capital from the present time on was going to be tremendous, he asserted, and he thought the national convention should consider carefully the upbuilding of the country as a Canadian nation.

J. Early Lawson referred to the rumour that a number of members of parliament had objected to the holding of a convention. Since the party had been apathetic he believed they should tolerate all such views as they had been responsible for it.

Robert Clark supported the convention idea since it was only fair that the party should be consulted as to whom it would have for leaders. The ladies ought to be represented fifty-fifty, seeing that they did about 75 per cent. of the work.

Hon. Dr. Edwards said it was advisable to have 50 per cent. women, but in some ridings it might be difficult to get women to act.

Big Ontario Delegation.

A. E. Honeywell, M.P.P., for Ottawa, declared that Ontario should have as many delegates as all the other provinces except Quebec. If any riding elected delegates and they did not go, they would be on the same level as trained soldiers who lay down their arms. He declared that women were well fitted to help choose a national leader. "I noticed that not one man applauded what Mrs. Fallis said about men regretting that the vote had been given to women."

"Should a delegate vote as he or she feels like voting or as the riding wants them to?" asked a woman.

"Every delegate should be free to exercise his or her own will," said the president.

T. H. Stinson, K.C., M.P., Lindsay, was a strong advocate of the national convention in the days of hesitancy, he said; in explanation of his presence. He had been a strong advocate of a convention ever since October 11, 1926. He desired the historical development of the convention organization on which all were united and equal to the convention of 45 years ago.

He thought that after their defeat in 1926, they needed to add something to their policy to attract popular attention and imagination. Their policy of protection, he said, was the best in the world. He quoted Dr. Byron Stauffer on getting a crowd. He packed his church by sensational advertising. When he got them he held them by good sense. They could develop a little good fellowship, which woud go a long way. He thought interest might be stirred by having a popular election for delegates. If they took an interest in electing the delegates and in raising the money to pay their expenses, they would follow the convention with much greater interest, he submitted.

Duchess Feels Strain Of Australian Visit

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 23—That the Duchess of York is feeling the strain of the tour to Australia, with its innumerable ceremonies, is evident from an official statement yesterday that on the advice of medical attendants she has canceled her private week-end visit to an estate at Ercildoune, near Melbourne.

It was stated, however, that there was no reason to be concerned over the health of the duchess, but it was felt that some rest was necessary.

SMITH CHOICE OF DEMOCRATS

Predicts Norman Mack, National Democratic Committeeman From N. Y.

TOURS SOUTH.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Apr. 23.—Gov. Al. Smith will be the Democratic nominee for President, Norman E. Mack, proprietor of the Buffalo Times, and National Democratic committeeman from New York for many years, predicted yesterday on his return from an extensive tour through the South.

"I was surprised to find such a pronounced and substantial undercurrent for Gov. Smith, especially in certain supposedly doubtful southern sections," Mack said. "There was no mistaking the sentiment. They are for 'Smith for President' much more enthusiastically and more strongly than is generally believed in the north and east."

Mack said he never accepted the religious issue very seriously since Gov. Smith's first election in 1918.

"That showed beyond doubt that the religious issue does not cut much figure with the American people, and it is going to cut less now for Gov. Smith's answer to Mr. Marshall's letter should settle this issue for all time," Mack declared.

INTERESTING BOOK ADDED TO LIBRARY

"The Christ of the Indian Road" Tells About Missions.

The Public Library has just received three copies of a book entitled "The Christ of the Indian Road," by E. Stanley Jones. It is a remarkable book and one which throws a clear light on the present status of missions in India and the attitude of the Hindu towards the principles underlying the Christian faith. Anyone who is interested in mission will find this an absorbing volume.

MAN BADLY HURT AT AUCTION SALE

Mr. Galloway Struck By Stick Hurled From Saw in Operation.

STITCHES NEEDED.

MOUNT PLEASANT, April 23. An auction sale of farm stock and implements was held at the home of J. F. Staples, who resides on the 11th Concession of Cavan about one miles east of Ida, on Thursday. There was a large crowd gathered in spite of the disagreeable weather.

S. S. Staples wielded the hammer and a good price was realized for everything.

What might have been a fatal accident ocurred while a circular saw was in operation during the sale. A man of the crowd threw a stick which came in contact with the saw, with the result that Mr. Galloway of Manvers was struck under the chin and on the forehead. The injured man was rushed to Dr. Hamilton's office in Bethany, where his injuries were attended to. Several stitches were necessary to close the wound under the chin, from which a splinter of the stick was taken.

AROUND THE CITY

At 8.13 this morning the Fire Brigade answered a call at 283 Stewart street. Overheated pipes had caused a small blaze, but little damage was done.

This morning a call was received at the fire station to respond to a fire in Ashburnham. Apparently the person who phoned in the call mistook it to be a big fire, for when the brigade arrived with the ladder wagon and motor trucks, a chimney fire was found to be the cause of all the excitement.

Are you going to use your summer cottage this year? If not leave your name with particulars at this office, or better still insert a small Want Ad and it will be rented.

Fly Your Flag!

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

UNCHANGED

Right does not always win,
I would not tell you so.
Virtue may lose to sin,
As all men know.
The heart may not be true,
The mind may not be fair;
But, if they are in you,
Why should you care?

Too much the outward thing,
The thing beyond control,
We let to hurt, to sting,
To sear the soul.
Well, hate is hard to mend,
And fools are hard to please,
But for your joy depend
On none of these.

Right may not win the day
Nor conquer in the fight,
And yet the right, I say,
Is still the right.
And, if the right you choose,
Although the fates are strange,
What matters if you lose—
But did not change?

BRINGING UP FATHER — By Geo. McManus

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

DURING these past days we have been thinking, with multitudes who have come under the influence of Christianity in all parts of the world, of those wonderful days during which the apparent defeat of Jesus was turned into a victory such as had never been thought possible by the most optimistic of His followers. His enemies, having nailed Him to a cross and made sure of His death by the thrust of a spear, undoubtedly thought that was the end of Him as His body was laid out of sight in a borrowed tomb. Few, if any, of His friends ever expected anything else to happen than what had happened during the many centuries which had elapsed since the first dead body had been given a grave. Up till this moment burial after burial had taken place without the remotest idea of any return from the dead. Was it to be the same story that would have to be told about the dead body of Jesus of Nazareth? Would His body also see corruption? Would the grave in His case hold the victory as it had done for the rest of mankind?

After Easter—What?

On the morning of Pentecost, Peter made the 16th Psalm the basis of a remarkable sermon, proving that Psalm to have been a prophetic utterance which had just been fulfilled in the resurrection of Christ.

Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by Him in the midst of you ,as ye yourselves also know:

Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain:

Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that he should be holden of it.

For David speaketh concerning Him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for He is on my right hand, that I should not be moved:

Therefore, did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover, also, my flesh shall rest in hope:

Because Thou wilt not leave my soul in Hell, neither wilt Thou suffer Thine Holy One to see corruption.

Thou hast made known unto me the ways of life; Thou shalt make me full of joy with Thy countenance.

Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day.

Therefore, being a prophet and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins ,according to the flesh, He would raise up Christ to sit on his throne;

He, seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that His soul was not left in Hell, neither His flesh did see corruption.

This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses.

I know that these are familiar words, but I am not so sure that we have grasped their significance. Whatever truth, Messianic or otherwise, may be derived from this statement of Peter's, it assures us of the stupendous fact that the realms of death had been explored and conquered.

Mummies Have No Message.

Tut-unk-ahman, in his golden sarcophagus, was mute concerning that dark domain whose king had conquered him. Communication with this weird country from whose bourne no traveler returns has been sought in vain. Manufactured messages may have duped those of whom Barnum spoke, but, as Lincoln said, you can fool some of the people part of the time, but you cannot fool all the people all the time. From the unseen world of the dead there has come forth one authoritative voice, and one only. To that voice we should give heed and to no other. From Joseph's tomb Christ emerged with the imperial declaration, "I am He that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive for ever more, and have the keys of death and hell." He wrenched those keys from one who, through the long centuries, had held them in undisputed possession.

The Owner of the Keys is the Owner of the House.

What led the Victor to enter that realm and possess Himself of the keys?

There were captives there to be delivered.

Out of the dim past there comes a story which serves to illustrate the thought I have.

Troy was a city with high walls. The son of Troy's king carried off a beautiful Greek maiden named Helen, always called now Helen of Troy. All the Greek kings and princes laid siege to Troy with the hope of getting in, conquering it, and rescuing Helen again. The siege lasted ten long years, and there seemed no prospect of getting into Troy. But just then Ulysses, inspired by Minerva, propounded a scheme which was full of craft and a very smart piece of stratagem. The chief Epeius, who when in his own country had been famous for his skill in sculpture, was directed to construct a gigantic wooden horse. This was done, and having been made hollow inside, a large number of the best warriors, under the leaders of Pyrrhus, were hidden inside. Then in the night the horse was pushed close up to the walls and left there, the Greek ships and soldiers sailed away as though they had given up the task of taking Troy as hopeless—but they did not go far. Next morning the horse was seen by the people of Troy, and, after some discussion, and against the warnings of some, the horse was drawn into the city. Nothing happened until night, but then when the Trojans were in a heavy sleep, after having drunk much in celebrating the departure of the Greeks, a little door was quietly opened in the side of the horse, the soldiers slipped out, a fire was lit as a signal to bring back the Greek army, the gates were thrown open by the men who had been in the wooden horse, and Troy was taken.

The great City of Death had from the beginning been impregnable to every assault. All who had ever lived to take it had failed. The world was just a huge grave-yard. But in the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus we have the most conclusive proof that the old order has been changed and a new order established.

More Than a Dress Parade.

Mr. Henry Attwell, in a letter written to The Spectator, tells of a touchingly pretty remark made by a little girl four years old, which he thought was worth recording. Her father was walking with the child through the village cemetery, when, pointing to the graves, she asked wonderingly, "What are these for?" Somewhat puzzled to give an answer, the father said, "They belong to the people who have gone to heaven." "To the angels?" "Yes." "Oh!" said the little one, "that is where they have left their clothes." The little one was right—the body is only the clothes. Since Jesus has died and risen again, thus becoming the first fruits of them that sleep, we should never think of our departed friends as lying in the grave. All that rests in the grave is the clay tenement through which the tenant expressed himself. And the apostle says that to be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord.

On the tombstone which rests upon the grave of Albert Durer, the great painter, in the cemetery of his native city, Nuremburg, in Germany, they have put the word Emigravit! It means that he has emigrated, gone to another country. That is the truth. Nothing can really die that is related to Jesus since He is the Lord of Life.

Luther in a moment of peril and fear was found sitting in an abstracted mood, tracing on a table with his finger the words, "Vivit! Vivit! He lives! He lives!" That is the truth for you all through life, in trial and difficulty and peril. He lives! He lives! You can consult Him any time; you can have His help and strength at any moment. He is the resurrection and the life.

Crown Him the Lord of Life,
Who triumphed o'er the grave,
And rose victorious in the strife,
For those He came to save.

—Allan Fairbairn.

Breaking Up Funerals

A good many years ago, when I was a young man, I used to spend the summers in Chicago, and when the ministers were gone away, they used to send me to attend funerals. One day I was called suddenly to attend a funeral. There were to be a great many business men, not Christians, there. I said, "This is my opportunity, I will give them a Christian sermon." I tried to find one of Christ's funeral sermons, and I found that He broke up every funeral He attended. The dead couldn't stay dead where He was.

CHURCHES AND CHURCHMEN

By I. SEEWELL

A Good Index.

DR. EMETT, pastor of the Manhattan Congregational Church, New York, says that in the face of the boy or girl of fifteen or sixteen years you see the unmarked and unmasked face that is ready to have prophecy fulfilled and that is ready to write history. In the case of the older man you see the identical face, but something has been happening. The artist has been working, the sculptor has been chiseling and the potter has been molding. It has changed from a face of prophecy to a face of history. The face of the younger person is a blank book which shows that something is to be written. The older person's face is his autobiography—a complete picture of the soul. It is all very well for us to have our gymnasiums, our dancing schools, etc. They are all right in their places, but the body takes its form from the soul. It is the expression of the soul that is your highest business and mine. The Indians used to paint their faces for the purpose of driving away the spirits and for producing fear in the lives of their enemies. But exactly why a young girl with a beautiful face and rosy cheeks should paint her face is incomprehensible to the average man.

Gone Home.

REV. ROBERT CAMERON, a Canadian who has held some important pastorates in the United States, has passed away in his eighty-eighth year. He founded a Women's College in Montclair, N. J. For many years he was editor of The Watchword, a paper which featured prophetic studies. His closing days were spent in Seattle.

First Things First.

A Lutheran parish paper presents the following for thoughtful consideration of church members: "Put Christ before the church; put the church before the club; put Christianity before the denomination; put God's word before men's opinions; put more of God into your work and less of self; put Jesus before the professor and teacher; walk more by faith and trust, and less by sight and reason; live to give and share, rather than to get; strive to be Christ-like rather than to be great; seek to be holy rather than to be happy; feed your soul as regularly and as generously as your body; live for others now, rather than for heaven hereafter."

Hebrews and the Young.

IN Chelsea, Mass., there has been established at the Hebrew Free School a Hebrew Parent-Teacher Association for the purpose of bringing about a better co-operation between the parents of the children who are sent to the school after their regular school hours and the teachers.

The school work at the Hebrew institution includes reading, writing, Jewish history and folk lore. The children devote from one to two hours a day to this work at the conclusion of their regular work in the public schools. The school has an enrollment of nine hundred.

A Fitting Inscription.

DEEP in the recesses of the Virginia mountains there stands a venerable, grey-walled, ivy-clad Presbyterian church. Close to the walls of the church, as if in death seeking the protection of the truth which in the holy house had been their theme and song, waiting for the resurrection morning, sleep the rugged founders of that church and the conquerors of that wilderness. In the stone over the doorway one can read this inscription:

"Erected by citizens of this place as a token of their love for the Holy Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ."

Co-operative Christianity.

THE Homiletic Review has an interesting paragraph dealing with work among the Protestant churches in Porto Rico. There has been erected a permanent building to accommodate the union religious paper, bookstore and publishing plant. Initiated by the Presbyterian, Congregational and United Brethren churches, the publication of a union paper had become such a success by 1907 that the Baptists, Disciples of Christ, Methodists and Christian church joined the consolidation.

For ten years this union has grown stronger. The paper, now published weekly, speaks with the united voice of Protestantism. The bookstore handles all the literature required by the large Christian community in Porto Rico. Larger quarters were imperatively required. A fine two-story reinforced concrete building on one of the main streets of the city has been financed, with the assistance of the mission boards of these seven churches. It is now occupied by this unique publishing enterprise and stands, as one of the missionaries puts it, as a "concrete evidence of the spirit of co-operation in Porto Rico."

The Molly Maguires.

FATHER McDERMOTT, a Roman Catholic priest, in Philadelphia, has just passed away at an advanced age. His death recalls the notorious Molly Maguires of a half-century ago.

The Molly Maguires was the name of a secret, criminal organization among the miners of Pennsylvania. It was established in the 1850's, but by 1865 had become wholly criminal in character. The 60,000 miners of that section were mainly Irish, and membership was limited to that nationality. A series of murders produced such a reign of terror that no life was safe. The Pinkerton Detective Agency, under Allan Pinkerton, who had shown great acumen in many criminal cases, undertook to break up the gang. James McParlan, a young detective, went among them, became a "Molly," lived from 1873 to 1876 as a member, and then furnished the evidence that led to conviction, execution or long terms in prison. The organization was broken up. Father McDermott, as confessor of the condemned men, before their execution, secured from them an intimate story of their deeds, which he at one time considered publishing, it is said, but during his later life, destroyed. Father McDermott, in recent years, played a fearless part in uncovering political crookedness in his own city ward.

Children's Corner — TELL US A STORY

SOMEWHERE I have read of a little child that stopped to catch a sunbeam as it danced upon the floor. She grasped it in her dimpled hand, but the beam would not stay in her grasp, though it lay upon her fingers like a band of gold. The child seemed disappointed, and yet her effort was not really in vain. It gave her pleasure for a time, and then the light she could not carry away yet lies in gladsome measure in the depths of her blue eyes. This is a little parable. Seeking, striving after the lovely things, is never in vain, though we may seem not to grasp them. We are holier and better for striving. The beautiful things we long for and try to get, we do not really get in one sense—we get them into the depths of our soul. They hide there and make our life brighter and more beautiful. "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above."

What Think Ye of Christ?

CHRIST built no church, wrote no book, left no money and erected no monuments; yet show me ten square miles in the whole earth without Christianity where the life of man and the purity of women are respected and I will give up Christianity.

BOYS' WEEK.

The programme announced for Boys' Week in Peterborough, published elsewhere in today's issue, indicates a real effort to reveal to the city the fine asset it has in its hundreds of bright, upstanding boys, and at the same time to give the boys a chance to become acquainted with the industrial, business and municipal life of the community.

Beginning with a series of son-and-father sessions and a mass meeting addressed by Taylor Statten, Canada's best known leader in boys' work, there will be a solid week's activities in which the boys of Peterborough will occupy the most prominent place.

They will have an opportunity to see the city's factories in operation, they will visit the municipal institutions, conduct a council meeting, frolic at a circus, display for the benefit of the citizens their pet hobbies, compete in athletic games, and bring the week to a conclusion by taking father to church with them on Sunday, all the churches in the city co-operating in this feature of the programme.

Boys' Week promises to be a novel, interesting and successful event.

TOMORROW'S CHURCH PARADE.

Following the custom adopted by the first organization of returned soldiers in Peterborough and adhered to each year since, the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Legion will hold its annual church parade tomorrow morning, the Sunday closest to the anniversary of the Second Battle of Ypres being always chosen for this event.

It is the hope of the Legion that not only all its own members but returned soldiers generally will participate in this parade as a mark of respect to the memory of comrades who gave up their lives twelve years ago.

One of the objects for which ex-service men have banded themselves together is the mission of seeing that the memory of the unreturning brave is kept ever green, and it is felt that the anniversary of the first great battle in which the Canadians were engaged is a particularly appropriate time for a memorial church parade.

The attendance of veterans of the Great War at tomorrow's parade should be large enough to prove that the men who fought do not forget even if there is a suspicion that public memory is not as keen as it should be.

THE LAST-MINUTE SPENDING SPREE.

Editorial articles appearing in The Examiner recently criticizing the last-minute passing of many millions of dollars supplementary estimates by the Dominion Parliament are complained of by E. A. Peck, member for West Peterborough, as unfair to the Conservative party.

In effect, Mr. Peck declares that the official Opposition could not prevent the passing of these votes.

That, of course, is true, but what The Examiner condemned was not the failure of the Opposition to stop the voting of such large sums, but the system that made a spectacle like this possible and the apparent indifference of the majority of members of all the parties to anything save their own convenience.

These votes may have all been legitimate, and their passing in the public interest.

That is not the point.

The rub lies in the fact that they were galloped through at the eleventh hour without any real effort on the part of any, except a few Progressives, to find out why these appropriations were being made, and that the members who had the temerity to ask a question were, according to press reports, advised to "sit down" and "shut up."

There is a responsibility resting upon the shoulders of the Opposition in matters of this kind.

The Opposition is expected to make the Government justify its expenditures and to elicit a reasonable explanation of each vote.

The leader of the Opposition is paid an extra salary in the expectation that this duty will be discharged.

Can it be said that in the rush to prorogue before Easter the official Opposition measured up to what is expected of it in these respects?

A WINDSOR PROBLEM.

A serious situation for hundreds of Windsor citizens has been created by the announcement of new United States regulations, effective June 1, that will prevent Canadian workers living in Windsor from working in Detroit factories, unless they conform to the immigration laws of the United States.

The edict means that these workers will either have to give up their employment in Detroit or establish residence there, and as many of them are British-born Canadians who, no matter how long they have been living in the Dominion, come under the United States quota law, the new regulations leaves a large number of Windsorites without a job.

The Dominion Government is being asked to act in the matter, but it is difficult to see what can be done by the Canadian authorities; the United States Government has made the ruling after considering the situation for some time, and if it believes the present conditions under which hundreds of workers have continued to live in Canada while earning their living over the line is detrimental to the interests of the United States, there is nothing, for Canadians to do but grin and bear it.

Native-born Canadians can save their jobs by moving across the river; but the situation so far as British-born residents of the Dominion are concerned is desperate, as it would be impossible because of the quota law for them to legally enter the United States for several years.

A SECOND CHANCE.

Toronto's Board of Police Commissioners has decided to reinstate the policeman who was discharged by the Chief Constable after he had been held up by a crook and robbed of his gun and belt.

The officer was a new member of the force, who showed his inexperience by letting the bandit "get the drop" on him, but the opinion of the general public seems to be that once he found himself in such a predicament it was common sense on his part to surrender.

In other words, a live policeman is considered of more value than a dead hero.

It was humiliating, of course, to the Toronto Police Department to have it made known that one of its number had been forced to hand over his revolver and belt to a crook, but when all the conditions are considered, the decision of the Commissioners in giving a youthful and untrained policeman a chance to show his mettle is in accord with the principle of justice and fair-play.

A more experienced officer suspecting the presence of a criminal, would probably have escaped the trap in which this novice was snared, and the incident will serve as a warning not only to this young policeman but to constables everywhere, that they must be on the alert in matching witt with the modern criminal, who "totes" a gun and does not hesitate to use it when in a tight corner.

"LO THE POOR INDIAN!"

Amidst the pell-mell rush to end the business of Parliament, not a few matters of interest and importance were crowded out of the picture that presented itself to the public view in the closing days of the session. One of these was a raid on Ottawa by representatives of the Allied Indian Tribes of British Columbia who descended upon the Capital, armed not with tomahawks but with a petition of rights, to secure, if possible, redress of certain grievances rather than the scalps of members of the Government or of officials of the Indian Department.

Instead of in a tent, where in the olden days the sachems met the plenipotentiaries of "The Great White Father" to smoke the pipe of peace, exchange wampums and air their views in long and flowery harangues, the chiefs from British Columbia, striking types of their race though unadorned, assembled in one of the well-appointed Committee Rooms of the Senate to lay their case before a joint committee of both House appointed for the purpose of hearing their claims. The picturesque characteristics of the ancient pow-wow were conspicuously absent save that members of the committee smoked while the Indians did not, and that the palaver, marked by all the Indian's love of oratory, was punctuated by an exchange of verbal darts instead of beads.

Pope's image of "the poor Indian, whose untutored mind sees God in clouds, or hears him in the wind" no longer reflects the tribal type that occupies the reserves throughout Canada, and enjoys the advantages attached to state guardianship. True, several of the chiefs from the interior of British Columbia, who appeared before the committee, were survivals of the unsophisticated race, their one desire, as expressed in their native language through an interpreter, being that they might be left alone in the enjoyment of their rights and privileges. "Indians we are," declared a veteran sachem of eighty, "and Indians we want to remain."

But the chief spokesmen for the tribes were anything but untutored. Graduates of the Indian schools established by the Government, they showed the results of their education in a grasp of the problems affecting them and in an argumentative skill that greatly impressed the members of the committee and elicited many compliments. Yet the more eloquently they pleaded for a readjustment of what they regarded as grievances, the more it became apparent that behind much of the unrest and discontentment which they voiced is the influence of certain agitators, not Indians, who for years have played upon the feelings and instincts of the red men by magnifying their grounds of complaint, misrepresenting their rights and relations to the state, and generally fomenting the spirit of discord and protest.

Nothing, for instance, could be more mischievous than the efforts of visionary advisers of the Indians to create among them the impression that by virtue of the aboriginal title they own the lands of British Columbia, that, therefore, they have bona fide claims to possessions, or in lieu thereof, to substantial compensation, or that their hunting and fishing rights have been unduly, or illegally, restricted.

More generous treatment of the tribes of British Columbia may be warranted, but the case presented by their representatives to the joint committee of Parliament suggested that as a preliminary step there should be a limitation of the activities of certain individuals who, in their relations with the Indians, assume, with unfortunate results, the role of "guide, philosopher and friend."—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Merchants in some towns are worrying about having to close their stores on July 2 as well as on Dominion Day. Confederation was not brought about by that kind of spirit.

The programme for Boys' Week, May 9-15, indicates that Peterborough's boys are to hold the centre of the stage all through the performance. It will be a great week for the youngsters.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, April 23 — Following the extra activity of the market immediately preceding the Easter holiday, butcher cattle trade slowed down a little this week. Opening prices in last Mondays market averaged about 25c lower, but held at that practically for the baalnce of the week. Offerings were not heavy, and by Thursday's market all stale cattle, with so very few fresh coming in, were cleared out at steady prices.

Export buyers are still out of the market, and so long as prices in the old country remain so low as to be out of line with the higher prices on this side, a revival of that trade cannot be looked for, except perhaps for a few store cattle from the west.

Local packers took a few heavy extra choice beef steers at from $8.25 to $8.75.

Good killing cattle sold from $7.75 to $8; medium to common, $7.25 to $7.50; heavy heifers around 8c. Baby beef offers were not the best quality, the real choice selling at from $11 to $12, but most of the offerings were from $10.50 to $11; good, $9 to $10; medium, $8 to $8.50; fat cows were 25c lower, choice selling at $6.50 to $6.75, with the odd cow at 7c; good, $5.75 to $6.25; medium, $5 to $5.50; cutters, $2.50 to $3.25; canners, $2 to $2.50. A few dry cows, suitable for grass, sold from $4.75 to $5. Choice butchers' bulls, $5.75 to $6; good, $5.25 to $5.50; heavy fat bulls, $5.50 to $5.75. Bologna bulls, $4.25 to $4.75.

Stockers and feeders—A few loads of western cattle were on the market this week. One load of fair quality steers, weighing 725 lbs., sold at 7c. One load of mixed weight steers, averaging around 560 lbs., sold at 6c, but were not of desirable quality. A few short keep steers went back to the country at $7.50 to $7.75.

Sheep and lambs — Choice lambs sold readily at 14c to 14 1-2c; good, 12c to 12 1-2c; balance as yearlings, 9c to 10c; choice butchers' sheep, 8c to 9c; good, 7c to 7 1-2c; heavy steep and fat bucks, 5c to 6c; cull sheep, 2 1-2c to 4c; choice spring lambs, $13 to $15; good, $10 to $12; medium kinds not wanted.

Calves—Owing to the Jewish holidays there was a quiet feeling. Any choice quality calves sold from 12 to 12 1-2c; good, 10 to 11c; medium calves numerous and hard to dispose of.

Hogs unsettled for week-end prices at $9.75 thick smooths, graded, and flat rate $10 f.o.b.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, April 23 (Canadian Press). — There was no improvement in the volume of business in wheat for export account in the Montreal grain market yesterday, owing to the continued underselling by the Canadian Pool, but there was more enquiry from the United Kingdom for low grade oats and sales of a few loads were made.

A feature of the ocean grain freight market here yesterday was the stronger feeling that prevailed in Continental rates and they were advanced 1-2c per hundred pounds with engagements to Antwerp and Rotterdam at 17c per 100 pounds and to Hamburg at 18c per hundred for May loading.

Trading in cash grain in the domestic market was quiet, the demand being confined to odd cars to meet immediate wants, but the tone was firm.

Prices for all grades of Spring wheat flour were well maintained. A moderate amount of business was worked with the United Kingdom for May shipment, but the local and country trade was inactive. The movement of Winter wheat flour was slow, but prices were unchanged.

The inquiry from United States buyers for millfeed here was again good and sales of odd cars of Manitoba bran were made at prices equivalent to $33 per ton here. The domestic demand was good and a fairly active business was done.

Owing to the higher prices ruling for oats in the West, a stronger feeling developed in the local market for rolled oats, and prices were advanced 10 cents per bag.

The egg market continued active and firm. The receipts were 2,829 cases.

A feature of the butter trade was the decidedly strong feeling that developed in the market and prices during the day scored advances amounting to 1 3-4 to 2c per pound. This was attributed to the very limited supplies available and the keen competition between buyers for the same. Indications are that if the receipts do not show a marked increase in the near future, values will go higher. The receipts were 898 packages.

The cheese market was again dull and featureless. The receipts were 190 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, April 23 (aCnadian Press) — Any semblance of a crop scare fizzled out in the wheat pit yesterday. Decided changes for the better in weather conditions appeared evident and prices went lower. Export business from North America totalled 1,230,000 bushels but failed to bring about mucn rally. Wheat closed weak, 5-8 to 1c net lower; corn 1-8 to 1-2c down; oats 1-4 to 3-8c off, and provisions showing 5c to 22c decline.

Corn and oats sympathized with wheat weakness. Eastern shipping demand for corn continued to be very slow, but a fairly good reduction in the visible supply total on Monday is looked for.

Provisions were responsive to lower quotations on hogs.

CHICAGO CATTLE

CHICAGO, April 23 (Canadian Press) — Cattle 3,000; best heavy steers $12.00; vealers steady to weak; light kinds $8.50 to $8.75; fresh kinds around $11.00.

BEWARE THE TUB

An insurance company reveals that the bathtub is a dangerous fixture, 98 persons being paid for falls in tubs last year. Next time you see a sooty individual, don't scoff at him—maybe the poor fellow has quit bathing because he just can't keep up his insurance. . . Forty-four claims were paid for persons injured getting in or out of bed, the company reports, but we know that unnumbered thousands deeply hurt at getting out of bed probably never were insured. . . If you don't think a bathtub is perilous, just look what one did for Earl Carroll!

ANSWER: Stop taking care of your kidney stone, and get rid of it as soon as you can by living on a diet which is free from any starches and sugars, and particularly eliminating all grain foods, even whole wheat and other whole grains.

QUESTION: Mrs. E. W. writes: "I should be obliged if you would give me your advice on treatment for varicose vein ulcers from which I am suffering."

ANSWER: Varicose ulcers may sometimes be cured by a fasting and diet treatment. If this is not sufficient to overcome the ulcer, go to a physician who has the ultra violet light equipment. He can give you one or two treatments over the ulcer which will make it sluff off. This treatment is almost a specific for varicose ulcers.

QUESTIONS: Carl S. writes: "My brother-in-law has had his hands useless for six months with painters' eczema. Could you advise us on this, as he is very miserable?"

ANSWER: Eczema can be cured by the proper diet. It may be necessary for your brother-in-law to stop his work for a few weeks until he can effect a complete cure. He can then return to his work after he has his blood in such condition that he will not be susceptible to irritating influences, such as are produced by turpentine, kerosene, and other irritants used by painters.

QUESTION: One Who Reads Your Articles writes: "Will you please tell me through the column of the paper what you mean by "Melba Toast? How is it made?"

ANSWER: Melba Toast is made by cutting the crusts from white bread and slicing the bread in slices a quarter of an inch thick. Dry over night and cook in a slow oven, taking at least twenty minutes to brown the toast all the way through. It is not sufficient to simply dry the toast, but it must be turned into a brown color before it is completely dextronized. This kills all of the starch cells and turns them into dextrose.

QUESTION: Mrs. Mary E. writes: "I have suffered for a long time from sleeplessness. Could you tell me a remedy for same?"

ANSWER: The principal cause of insomnia is digestive trouble, such as excess fermentation of food, which produces gas pressure against the heart or diaphragm. Even if you are not conscious of such pressure, it is sufficient to unconsciously irritate you and keep you from getting into a deep slumber.

QUESTION: X.Y.Z. writes: "Please, what are the symptoms of tapeworm? Have a glorious appetite, but am losing weight right along."

ANSWER: There are not any necessarily definite clinical symptoms of tapeworm, except the evidence presented by finding a piece of a tapeworm in the feces. Some people with tapeworms do not have such a "glorious appetite" as you describe, and even do not lose weight. Fast for a few days and take a tapeworm remedy, and you can find out very quickly whether or not you have this trouble.

QUESTION: An Anxious Subscriber writes: "Will you kindly advise us if a test of blood taken from the ear could locate a disease, such as tumor or cancer, and what organs are affected? Is such a test possible or plausible?"

ANSWER: Such tests are not accurate as far as being able to discover from these tests whether you have a tumor or cancer. I know the tests you refer to, and exaggerated claims are made for them, which cannot be substantiated.

QUESTION: T. C. writes: "I am a boy of fifteen, and many times in the morning upon arising, a feeling of weakness comes over me, and it seems as though the blood is rushing to my brain. During this period everything gets black before my eyes. Can you tell me the cause of this and suggest a relief? (This also occurs sometimes while I am washing and rubbing my eyes.)

ANSWER: You are doubtless suffering from some form of auto-intoxication caused by biliousnessness from using the wrong kind of foods. Give your liver a good cleansing by a fast, followed by a proper diet, and I am sure you will be able to get rid of your dizzy spells.

WOMEN IN FAVOR OF CLEAN-UP; THINK CITY WORK COMES FIRST

Presidents of Associations Heartily Support Kiwanis Plans.

STREETS NEED OIL.

Painting is Held Up By Danger of Dust Blowing.

In connection with Women's Association Week, from April 23rd to 30th, in preparation for Mother's Day, constructive ideas along the line of Clean-Up work, both as regards the home itself, its surroundings and the city generally, were voiced by representative women of the city approached by The Examiner for views along this line. Some of the opinions held are outlined in the following paragraphs:

Mrs. C. H. Edwards, president of the Local Council of Women: "Speaking generally, I am heartily in favor of the campaign. I think too that there are a number of bad spots in the city that should be attended to by the civic authorities. Vacant lots need looking after in many localities. And the streets should be oiled, as the people are finding a great deal of dust interfering with their cleaning work."

Mrs. Edwards also made an interesting suggestion which might be carried out here with much benefit. "I would like to emphasize the planting of flowers which would be ready for the First of July celebration. Last year, when I lived in Ottawa, they were having their Centennial celebration, and they chose the aster as a flower that would be ready for August cutting, asking the people to plant as many of these as possible. Of course, here, the celebration is in July, and another flower would have to be chosen. The florists' books seem to recommend the petunia or phlox as the most dependable annual for flowering in July."

Mrs. G. H. Roper, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Y.M.C.A.: "Yes, I certainly am in favor of the idea of a Clean-Up Campaign. But the streets should be cleaned first. It is very dusty up here on Monaghan Road, and there are quite a few lots that become weed-grown later on in the year in this vicinity."

Mrs. W. Andrews, president of the King Edward Home and School Association: "I think it is a very good thing. Of course, I live in Monaghan and I think it might be a fine idea to get the people here to follow up the work too, and am sure they would co-operate in every possible way. There are quite a few places around here that could stand some looking after."

Mrs. Ada Craig, president of the King George Home and School Association: "Well, I certainly approve heartily of the idea. But there isn't much use in cleaning up lawns in this district until the Council chooses to do something more for East City than they have done in the past, in the way of attending to the streets. I could clean my verandah several times a day and it would still be dusty, on account of the condition of the roads. Where I live, the wind blows leaves and dust from a vacant lot near by, that no one seems to look after, and the men who come to clean the streets don't do anything with the refuse at the side of the road. It simply lies there to clutter up the place and blow over everything nearby when the wind comes up. One man living near me had to take a shovel and clean up the old leaves and rubbish up to the corner of the street, to make it look presentable. And everyone uses this street from Douro to Hunter, on Rogers. The buses, the coal-carts, the rigs from the Cold Storage and the trucks, all come down this way."

Mrs. G. Worboy, president of the Prince of Wales Home and School Association: "I would heartily endorse the idea of a Clean-Up campaign. Where I live, we have our own particular nuisance that we think the City officials might better in some way. The big drain pipe from Monaghan Road runs down here on Sherbrooke street from Monaghan Road to Penrose Avenue, and in the spring, it forms a regular river between the sidewalk and the road. You can go down over your goloshes in it, and it is almost impossible to drive a car in. Most of the people in this neighborhood own their homes and are interested in keeping them in good condition, but this is certainly a drawback. Nobody likes it except the children, who have a wonderful time playing in the river in the spring."

Mrs. A. Mowat, president of the Well Babies' Clinic: "Before doing much painting, the people in many sections of the city, and certainly in my neighborhood, would like to see something done in the way of tarring or oiling the streets. The dust is not very good for fresh paint."

Mrs. John Lynch, president of the Catholic Women's League: "I think it is a splendid idea and am very much in favor of it. We should do all we can to beautify our own homes and our town, and help ourselves as well as the community we live in. I am sure all the ladies will co-operate in every way. This is really a work, of course, in which women have always been interested. It is no new idea to them to want to have things clean and nice-looking around the home."

Mrs. R. Harstone, president Red Cross Society: "I am very much in favor of the campaign, from a sanitary point of view, as well as in trying to make our city a beautiful place in which to live. I have noticed this year that there are more people than usual busy in cleaning up their premises and planting flowers, both in the large and small places."

Mrs. R. H. Parsons, president of the Ashburnham Women's Patriotic League: "Everyone in our society will do their utmost to help in this campaign. So many people in East City own their own homes and are anxious to have them look nice. The members of the Ashburnham Women's Patriotic League have their own private job in cleaning up Armour Hill Park. The trees that have been growing there for the past three years must be put in their permanent places within the next few weeks, and that is going to take a lot of work. Up to now, they have been occupying a retired nursery area at the base of the hill. They will be taken out, thinned and transplanted to permanent sections. The evergreens were planted permanently in the first instance, but the deciduous trees, the maples, birches, elms and walnuts must be transplanted. Then we have the burnt area to clean up and try to replace with other trees. Over two thousand of the young saplings were destroyed here recently, after a satisfactory three years' growth, taking one of the biggest of the evergreen areas. We are anxious to commence the work as soon as possible.

Mrs. W. H. Lacey, president of the Central Home and School Association: "I think it is the greatest thing yet, but haven't any new ideas to offer, as those in charge seem to have thought of everything in connection with clean-up work. I think there are very few bad spots in the city that need attention, considering the time of year."

Miss Margaret Hamilton, president of the Board of Management of the Young Women's Christian Association: "I think it is quite necessary to have such a campaign, but think also it would be a good thing if the city would do its share first in having the streets either tarred or oiled."

AT THE GRAND

THE DUMBELLS.

It seems almost impossible for The Dumbells to present a better revue than any one of the many they have already delighted thousands of their friends with across Canada from Atlantic to the Pacific, yet from all accounts "That's That" appears to be just that.

Every newspaper from Vancouver eastward has gone on record to declare "That's That" the best yet.

The following notice clipped from the Vancouver Star on Tuesday, March 1, is offered as evidence that the new show was a hit right off the bat.

"Return of the Dumbells to the Orpheum Monday night in their springtime revue, 'That's That' was greeted by a crowded house that sat through nearly three hours of screamingly funny comedy, offered without any hitch or let-up from the rise of the curtain at the opening to its fall in the third act.

"Al. Plunkett, Ross Hamilton, 'Red' Newman and Pat Rafferty, as well as 'Jock' Holland and Glenn Allan who have appeared in various roles on numerous occasions, are well to the fore in 'That's That' each getting over at least one big hit during the evening.

"'That's That' is a musical melange with nothing serious in it; it is an arrangement of comedy and burlesque numbers and keeps the audience in an uproar from start to finish. At the same time there are many haunting melodies that will linger for many a day after The Dumbells have gone.

"Al. Plunkett's 'That's A Good Girl' and his 'Dreamland' are two sweet refrains that suit his voice to perfection and deserve the wholehearted applause accorded them.

"Then there is 'Red' Newman's opening number, 'Oh, Charley, Take It Away' that puts the audience in good humor and brings insistent demands for a repeat.

"The second act is given over to the Dumbells' orchestra, under the baton of Howard Fogg, nine numbers with a dance and song turn, and a violin number by the leader being included.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"'SORROWS OF SATAN' ONE OF FINEST EVER MADE," —Mot. Pict. News.

Griffith's "Sorrows of Satan" is a picture which, technically, is one of the fines' ever made. The lighting is superb. The composition and pictorial values of the great mass of scenes are wonderful, unsurpassed.

"The cast, too, first-rate with Carol Dempster easily winning a new place as an emotional actress, with a finished technique, just as effective as, but quite different from that of Lillian Gish. Ricardo Cortez gives a great performance. Adolphe Menjou's conception of Mephistopheles was, to say the least, novel. His villainy was tempered by a sort of good fellowship and man-about-town attitude that did not permit the conventional hatred for villains to operate in the spectator's mind.

"The whole picture is a brilliant piece of direction. It is highly meritorious, and show that D. W. has not lost his mastery. We shall follow the box-office career of this picture with more than ordinary attention."

—Motion Picture News.

"'SORROWS OF SATAN' IS REMARKABLE CINEMA,"—SUN

"Lyrical love passages, an exquisite shimmering of lights and shadows, of fantastic Satanic wings, this 'Sorrows of Satan.' Its soft melting lucid photography, its marvelous technical virtues bear witness to Mr. Griffith's new mown genius.

"In short, 'Sorrows of Satan' is a remarkable cinema and the acting of Carol Dempster, Lya de Putti, Adolphe Menjou and Ricardo Cortez, is—a book of revelations.

"But it is in the acting, as usual, that Griffith triumphs. He breathes life into the lay figure of Cortez and draws forth a performance as sensitive as Charles Mack's in 'America.' Menjou gives the best characterization of course, but he had powerful assistance from his colorful role."

—N. Y. Sun.

"'SORROWS OF SATAN' AN ACHIEVEMENT IN CINEMA"

"Four inspired performances plus the source of the inspiration, D. W. Griffith, account for the 'Sorrows of Satan,' an achievement in cinematics and in entertainment. Purely as a matter of technique, this picture will be a lesson to Mr. Griffith's rivals.

"Menjou's Satan is a masterpiece of subtle suggestion reinforced and made awesome by manipulation of lights and shadows. Cortez is no less distinguished in a powerful and positive acting role which he develops to the limit. Few, I imagine, realized his capabilities under the painstaking direction he found in this picture."

LILLIAN GISH HAS POWERFUL ROLE IN "SCARLET LETTER"

Hawthorne's Hester Prynne One of Most Vivid Figures in American Literature

A BURNING TALE OF LOVE

Famous Star of "Romola" and "La Boheme" Has Fine Support in Lavishly Staged Film

"The Scarlet Letter," one of the world's most dramatic romances, and one of America's literary classics, is the newest starring vehicle for Lillian Gish, famous for "La Boheme," "Romola," "The White Sister," "Birth of a Nation" and other celebrated screen plays that made her one of the greatest figures in the screen world.

The new play, an elaborate filmization of Nathaniel Hawthorne's story, will be presented by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at the Regent Theatre commencing Monday as one of the studio's biggest features of the screen season.

The story, known wherever the English language is read, is the gripping tale of a woman who, to save the man she loved from disgrace, carried a letter of shame on her breast throughout a lifetime. It is laid in the days of the early Puritans, whose intolerance is the guiding motif of the powerful story.

Powerful Role.

Miss Gish plays the role of the ill-fated "Hester Prynne," one of the most tragic and still most powerful figures in literature. Lars Hanson, the famous Swedish screen star, makes his American debut as "Arthur Dimmesdale," her clergyman lover. An interesting member of the cast is Henry B. Walthall, who played her lover in "Birth of a Nation," when he achieved fame as "The Little Colonel," and who is playing with her for the first time since in this new production.

Karl Dane, of "Big Parade" fame, William H. Tooker, Marcelle Corday, the famous French stage star, Jules Cowles, Joyce Coad, Mary Hawes, James A. Marcus and other players of note appear.

The production was lavishly staged, a complete reproduction of an early Puritan village having been constructed, in which nearly a thousand people appear in the dramatic pillory scenes and other high points in the story.

OUTLINE OF SCIENCE CLXI—How Pasteur Conquered Rabies. by MAX HAHN

BEYOND A DOUBT LOUIS PASTEUR'S RECOLLECTIONS OF THOSE DREAD CHILDHOOD DAYS WHEN A MAD WOLF RAGED THROUGH HIS MOUNTAIN VILLAGE HELPED TO INFLUENCE HIM IN HIS SEARCH FOR THE MAD DOG TREATMENT. © McClure Newspaper Syndicate

ABOUT ALL THAT ANYONE KNEW ABOUT THE RABIES THE DISEASE CAUSED BY A MAD DOG BITE, WAS THAT IT SEEMED TO BE TRANSFERRED FROM A DOG TO HIS VICTIM BY THE SALIVA. HENCE PASTEUR FIRST ATTEMPTED TO FIND IN THE SALIVA OF A RACING BULLDOG THE POISON THAT KILLS MAD DOG VICTIMS.

BUT THE SALIVA EXPERIMENTS WEREN'T SATISFACTORY. SOMETIMES THE SALIVA TRANSMITTED THE POISON AND OTHER TIMES IT DIDN'T. THEN PASTEUR HAD THE LUCKY THOUGHT THAT A VICIOUS ANIMAL'S NERVES MIGHT CONTAIN THE SUBSTANCE THAT BROUGHT ON INSANITY AND DEATH. THIS LED TO EXPERIMENTS ON THE BRAINS OF ANIMALS.

WORKING ALONG THE SAME LINES THAT HE HAD FOLLOWED IN PROTECTING SHEEP, PASTEUR SUCCEEDED IN PROTECTING DOGS FROM THE DEADLY EFFECTS OF THE RABIES. HIS SUCCESS THRILLED PASTEUR, FOR HE REALLY WAS TENDER-HEARTED AND DISLIKED TO SEE ANIMALS SUFFER.

TELLS HISTORY

success of the Bell Telephone and the rapidity in which this great system had come to be recognized as a very valuable asset to the public. The Manitoba system is not to be compared with the Bell, and the men working for this great organization should feel proud," said the Mayor. He also stated that he thought the employees of the Bell Telephone company were well treated and well paid. The Mayor also expressed his wish that the visitors see the bridge that spans the Otonabee which is one of the city's beauty marks. In speaking of the present street car situation, His Worship stated that it was impossible to operate a street car service and make it pay in a town with a population of less than fifty thousand inhabitants, and that the present bus service will be a success if the public will use them; but if they fail to show a profit at the end of thirty days the citizens of Peterborough will be without either street cars or busses. "The manufactures of Peterborough are as good if not better than any other city the size of ours," said the Mayor, and in speaking of the Canadian General Electric he stated that at the present time they are employing eight hundred and fifty employees, which shows a great increase over a few years ago, and that means that the city is not backward in its employment conditions.

"The telephone service is good in Peterborough," he said, "and more phones are being installed all the time." He expressed his wish that the time would come in the near future when one could see the person with whom he was conversing.

A. T. Smith, Division Manager, of Toronto, assisted Mayor Holloway in responding to the toast to the visitors, for, said Mr. Smith, "I am in Peterborough so often that I certainly do not consider myself a visitor."

History of System

Speaking on the history of the telephone system, Mr. Smith told the men last night that in 1882 there were thirty-five telephones in city with three operators who received a salary of eight ydollars a month. "The operators," said Mr. Smith, "were E. Mason, H. Brown and myself. At the present time there are five thousand telephones in the city, which shows a vast increase in forty-five years. In regard to Mayor Holloway's hope that persons conversing with each other, just this week a person talking in Washington could see the party she was talking to in New York City. Rates have been raised in some places," said Mr. Smith, "but there has been a change all over and in the end it really means a reduction to the company."

A toast was proposed to the company by G. H. Brown and in speaking of the advantages of the organization he remarked that fair wages were paid to the employees and that stock was provided for them, also safety and pension funds. He felt sure that the employees were satisfied and also that the public was receiving good satisfaction and esrvice at the hands of these same men.

In responding to this toast, Mr. Black, secretary-treasurer of the company in Montreal, spoke in a manner that held the attention of everyone present. He said that he was very pleased to see so many representatives of the company present. "Stick together men if you want to help make this company a continued success, and remember that the traffic department with its efficient service is useless without the aid of the commercial department and vice versa," remarked Mr. Black. He suggested that if everyone would pull together everything would run along smoothly. He told those present that they had every right to congratulate themselves, and to keep on in the same manner to make the service efficient and bring prosperity to the country.

"It is a worthwhile business," said Mr. Black, "for the Bell Telephone Company is the largest in Canada and the second best in telephone development in the whole world." He spoke of the founder, Mr. Bell, who was a real humanitarian and, moved by human sympathy, accomplished this great invention, not for the financial end of it, but in hope of accomplishing a thing that would aid all mankind.

"The Bell system has a reputation that is hard to beat," said Mr. Black, "having their books gone over several times by auditors only to find them in the best of condition financially. It also possesses assets of one hundred million dollars," he said. Collections of three million dollars monthly are taken in, and out of this three millions are paid out in wages. After the Canadian Pacific Railway, it possesses the largest number of stock-holders in any company. On the question of rates, Mr. Black stated that the company had finally decided on a fixed rate for telephone service. "Service is what we are working for and we try to see the other fellow's side of the story so a square deal can be given to all," he said in conclusion.

Mr. Winter also responded to this toast and hoped that each member of the company would possess personal merits and have strong habits and keep them, discarding only the bad ones before it is too late. He told the employees last night that all men picked for better positions were men who looked to the future for success, and if they did that there were always openings for that man in the service of the great Bell company.

—Mr. Jackson proposed a toast to the sister departments that is, the traffic commercial and plant departments. C. R. Hill responded, and in giving the number of employees as eight thousand claimed that the men were above the average on the whole, and expressed his wish that all would co-operate in every department and make the company even greater than it already is. He thanked the executive of the Peterborough district plant for the invitation that he had received and the honor that he had had to speak at this splendid banquet.

Mr. Northgrave, in proposing the toast to the division spoke about the loyalty among the men of this division especially as being very hard to equal. J. H. Martin, in responding to the toast, remarked on the splendid attendance at the banquet, which was in his estimation, a 100 per cent. turn-out. He said that the central division is considered the best in the company by officials in Toronto, and that better co-operation among the employees could not be found anywhere to compare with that of Peterborough. He also told the employees gathered last night that many changes were to be made for this city in 1927, and some employees were to be given better positions due to the fact that they have coloperated with the company in Peterborough. "First aid work is also becoming quite predominant with our company," said Mr. Martin, but due to the fact that many men have taken greater precautions against accidents, the first aid workers are having less to do, and this is what the company is aiming for, so that fewer of their men will be injured. A cup was presented by Mr. Martin to Bert Jackson in recognition of the fact that for four years he, himself, nor any of his men, have been inured in the slightest way.

—Following the toasts a good vaudeville act was put on, consisting of Dick Lush, George Jackson, Stan. Robinson, Johnny Holland and Ted Markham. Some "Houdini" tricks were performed by Dick Lush which completely baffled his audience.

ROBERTS SUIT AGAINST CITY IS DISMISSED

the streets in the central part of the city every day during the winter and put sand on the places that needed it. After a heavy icy spell he would have help to cover the ice on the main streets. He was quite sure that he sanded that particular place on the day of the accident. Harry Evans, the street commissioner, also gave evidence to the sanding of the street on the day of the accident.

Mr. Huycke, in summing up the case, said that the accident was either caused by snow being there and not taken off or snow turning into ice on which the plaintiff slipped. He maintained that in either case the city was liable.

Mr. Hughes submitted that the depression had nothing to do with the case for it is not negligence on the part of a municipality to have a depression such as this. Mr. Hughes also said that the evidence showed that the streets were icy all over at that date and that the evidence of Mr. Roberts did not show that he fell where the depression was in the streets. "Mr. Parsons told you that there were 19 accidents this year on the streets in Peterborough and that this was the only one where there was a slight depression in the sidewalk all the others happened on level streets. The city has observed a reasonable amount of care in looking after the icy streets, so in conclusion I submit to you that the defendant is not guilty in this case."

His honor Judge McGlade, in giving judgment, said he visited the scene of the accident at the noon hour and was unable to see that the existence of the depression had anything to do with the cause of the accident. "From the evidence submitted the icy condition was general," said His Honor, "and from this there is only one point to deliberate on, and that is whether the employees of the city used a reasonable amount of precaution when they were sanding the streets. From the evidence of the defence, I could not help but come to the conclusion that they did. I think it would be much better if a record was kept of the different times sanding is done. The evidence of Barton favorably impressed me, and I think on the day in question he sanded this particular spot, so in this case the action will have to be dismissed."

retained; that a community Sunday School be opened up, and that the Women's Institute be allowed the use of the church for public meetings at a low rental.

The finance committee reported that $1700 had been realized through the Presbytery fund. Two hundred dollars had been used to pay the expenses of the Fall Presbytery meeting at Oshawa, and the cost of the present meeting at Baltimore would be $150. Two hundred and sixty-five dollars was paid on a conference contingent fund. Twelve cents per unit was recommended for the ensuing year. This is the same as last year. The Presbytery recommended that a strong effort be made by the different pastoral charges not now doing so to reach the $1,800 stipend set by the last General Council.

Rev. Alferd Brown of Cobourg who has served in the ministry fort fifty-three years was granted permission to retire. Rev. Wesley Elliott, of Campbellford was permitted to retire for one year.

The following calls were sustained: Ernest Harston of Woodville to Campbellford; W. R. Tanton of Napanee to Cobourg; John E. Glover of Cambray to Smithfield; H.H. Mutton of Smithfield to Cambray; Mr. Doe of Oshawa to Woodville; M. L. Hinton of Hastings to Bobcaygeon; A. Hie of Bobcaygeon to Hastings; Mr. Brown of Cordova to Roseneath. A special committee was appointed and given Presbyterial powers to deal with calls that might come between now and conference.

Rev. F. J. Maxwell reported that Rev. S. C. Moore of Colborne, who has been South for his health for several months, is improving and hopes to be able to take his work by conference time.

The Fall meeting of Presbytery is to be held at Newcastle, the time to be fixed by the chairman and secretary.

Dinner for the delegates was provided by the ladies of the Baltimore church and served in the basement.

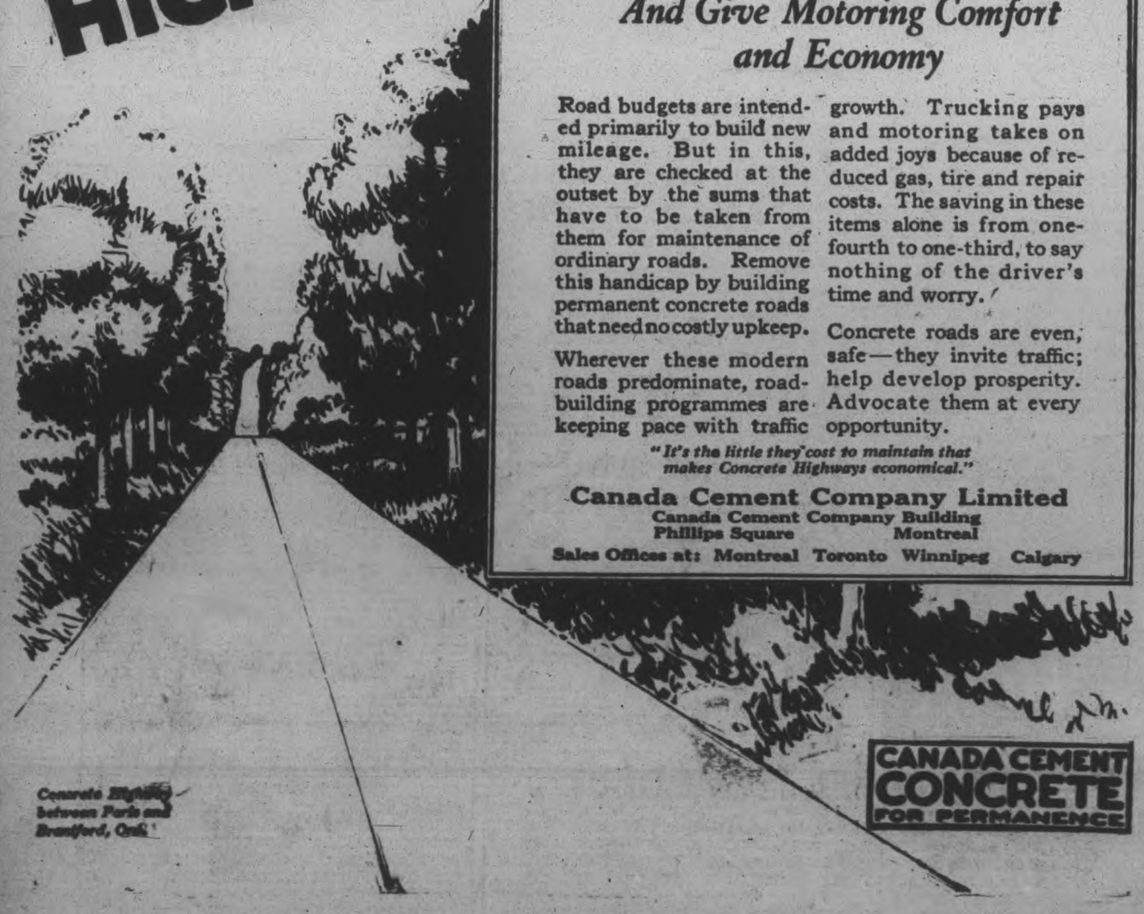
Permanent CONCRETE HIGHWAYS



End Costly Maintenance
And Give Motoring Comfort and Economy

Road budgets are intended primarily to build new mileage. But in this, they are checked at the outset by the sums that have to be taken from them for maintenance of ordinary roads. Remove this handicap by building permanent concrete roads that need no costly upkeep.

Wherever these modern roads predominate, road-building programmes are keeping pace with traffic growth. Trucking pays and motoring takes on added joys because of reduced gas, tire and repair costs. The saving in these items alone is from one-fourth to one-third, to say nothing of the driver's time and worry.

Concrete roads are even, safe—they invite traffic; help develop prosperity. Advocate them at every opportunity.

"It's the little they cost to maintain that makes Concrete Highways economical."

EASTER SERVICES

IN OMEMEE CHURCHES.

OMEMEE, April 22.—The church services on Sunday were appropriate to Easter in the churches of the village, both in the sermons and the music rendered.

In Christ Church two services were held. Holy Communion was celebrated at 8 o'clock followed by a morning service at 10.30 o'clock. The rector, Rev. A. T .Weir, gave an Easter message, the special music being an anthem by the choir entitled, "Christ, Our Passover." A children's service held was in the afternoon when the children brought in their Lenten mite boxes, the contributions of which amounted to over $50. An interesting feature of the service was a missionary address given by Miss Harris, a returned missionary from Egypt, whose father was the rector there several years ago.

The service in the Presbyterian church was held in the evening and the service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Powles. The choir rendered an appropriate selection.

At Trinity church, the pastor, Rev. E. W. Rowland, preached in the morning from Mark 16:3, "And they said among themselves, who shall roll away the stone from the door of the sepulchre," and in the evening from St. John 20:20, "Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord." The music in the morning consisted of an anthem, "Easter Bells" with obligato solo by Mrs. Harold Laidley, and a children's chorus, "This Is Easter Day". A baptismal service was held at the close when Dorothy Margaret, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Brooks received the rite of baptism. In the evening, the choir hendered an anthem entitled, "The Garden of the Lord", and a pretty solo was well rendered by Miss Mary Lowe, "As It Began to Dawn". The vesper used being appropriate to the occasion, "Hear Us, O Father."

The flowers which have been an annual gift from Lady Eaton consisted of Easter lillies, carnations and daffodils. At the close of the Sunday services they were distributed among the sick of the congregation.

IN MADOC CHURCHES.

MADOC, April 23.—The Easter services in all the churches were of a bright inspirational character, and the beautiful story of the Resurrection was deeply impressed by both sermon and music.

The special music in the United church at the morning service consisted of an Easter selection, sung by four of the little Sunday School pupils: Verna Phillips, Clarice Dafoe; Laura Ross and Thornton Love: an anthem "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth", by the choir with obligato by Mrs. R. H. Foster and a duet by Misses Fair and Henderson; a solo by Miss Leonore Vandevoort, "The Holy- City" and a contralto solo by Miss Henderson. In the evening the anthem was "The Lord Is Risen," with duet by Mrs. Foster and Miss Fair, and a solo, "There Is a Land" was rendered by C. Ross. Rev. Mr. Foster preached appropriate sermons both morning and eevning on The Crucifixion and the Resurrection. The church was prettily decorated with Easter lilies.

In St. John's Anglican church full choral communion and morning service was given, with the Easter anthem, "Christ Is Risen", in which Mrs. A. Strother took the solo part. Rev. Mr. Strother preached inspiring and earnest sermons both morning and evening on the Resurrection, taking for his text in the morning St. Matthew 28:2-5-6-7, emphasizing as the Easter commission "Go and tell". In the evening his text was taken from St. John 16, "Jesus saith unto her Mary. She turned herself and saith unto him Rabboni, which is to say Master." The church was beautifully decorated with Easter lilies, daffodils and narcissi, many of the flowers being given in memory of former members of the congregation who have passed on to their eternal home .

In St. Peter's Presbyterian church many beautiful flowers were also placed. In the morning Rev. Mr. Marshall took as his topic, "If There Were No Easter", and in the eevning "Faithful Women at the Cross" from both of which subjects he developed earnest helpful sermon. At the morning service the anthem, "Jesus is Risen" was sung by the choir with duet by Mrs. Strahm of Belleville and Mrs. S. Eagleson. At the evening service a solo was rendered by Miss Henderson, "Out of the Depths" and "The Golden Cross" by Mrs. Strahm. The anthem was "Lead Thou Me On."

Following the evening service a sacred concert was given in the Presbyterian church by the choir assisted by Mrs. Strother of St. John's Anglican church and by Master George Maybee and Mr. Scrutton of the United church. A large and appreciative audience enjoyed the musical hour, the programme of which speaks for itself:

Anthem, "The King of Love My Shepherd Is" (Walte).

Organ solo, (a) "The Palms" (Faure); (b) In a Monastery Garden (Ketelby)—Master George Maybee.

Quartette, 'Just When I Need Him' (Beazley)—Miss Vandervoort, Mrs. Eagleson, Mr. Hawthorne, Mr. Gillespie.

Accompanists—Mrs. S. Eagleson, Miss V. Mairs.

CHURCH MEETING

KEENE UNITED CHURCH.

On Tuesday, April 12th, the congregation of Keene United church held its first annual meeting, and splendid unanimity of spirit and encouraging balances were the order of the day.

The meeting was kept lively by a veteran member, Mr. Humphries, who with his able assistant, Rev. Mr. Archibald, injected wit and humor aplenty into the usual prosy routine of business.

Te only thing to mar the pleasure of the occasion, was the thought that the congregation must part with a pastor who has so ably filled his position, and who has won such an impregnable place in the hearts o his people.

After the opening hymn and prayer led by Mr. S. Armstrong, the following address from the session was read:

"The first note of our gathering today is one of thanksgiving, a note of exaltation, and confidence, and joy. Let us, at this hour, crowd His gates with praise and raise a song of thansgiving. The first year of Union between the former Methodist and Presbyterian churches, has been an eventful one. What was looked upon as an impossiblity a few years ago, has become a glorious reality today.

"The rite of Christian baptism was administered to eight in all. Our communion services were well represented.

The minister has officiated at ten funeral services. Those loved ones are missed in the church and in the home but the Lord of Life guides His children safely through the gates of death, into the Paradise of God

"The choir has given splendid service during the year. As a congregation, we are justly proud of our choir, and acknowledge our indebtness for its contribution of inspiration and helpfulness, Sunday by Sunday.

"Grateful recognition should also be made of the devotion shown by the leaders and members in the various organizations Our Sunday school is an educational and spiritual gathering for over a hundred souls, and is full of promise

"The Young People's Club is increasingly popular as a training school in the four fold life. The W. M.S. shows a deep and practical interest in the church at home and abroad, its contributions for last year merit the highest praise.

"We believe that great things are in store for the future of this church. The secretary-treasurer's report, which might have caused us some anxiety has cheered our hearts. Everything is paid and money in the bank.

"And so we start on our new year we want courage, confidence, triumphant joy. And we shall get it, by laying a fresh hold upon God, in Christ. For the church that really believes that God was in Christ, there can be no fear, no doubt, no gloom, no despair. Rejoice always."

The first financial report of the United church was presented by the secretary-treasurer, W. A. Drummond, and a report read by the secretary of each department of the church's work. On motion all were received and adopted.

The annual report of the church will be printed for distribution. Part I, Jan. 1 to June 30 ,1926, being the final report of the Presbyterian church, Keene, Part II; July 1, 1926 to March 31, 1927 (nine months) the first United church financial year.

At the conclusion of the meeting the congregation adjourned to the basement where a bountiful supper was served by the ladies of the W.M.S.

BRANCH CARES FOR WOMEN WHO SEEK NEW HOME

Female Officers of Department Travel on Immigrant Ships.

LADY IN CHARGE.

Section Also Has Women in Principal Ports of British Isles.

(This is the seventh of a series of articles on Canada and Immigrato contributed by the Federal Department of Immigration and Colonization)

When in 1919 the Canadian Department of Immigration and Colonization established a branch devoted to women's immigration, under the direction of a woman supervisor with headquarters in Ottawa, it was because the changed conditions arising principally as a result of the War, made the formation of such an additional branch obviously necessary.

It was found that in consequence of the vocations followed by women during the war years, vocations that had previously been followed only by men, there was a greater feeling and expression of independence on the part of women everywhere. The idea of women travelling alone, which before the war was held in a somewhat fearful regard, was deemed quite commonplace after 1918. Women, particularly in Great Britain, showed a ready desire to emigrate and so the Department of Immigration saw the necessity of supervising the migration of unaccompanied women and children and extending to them attention and after-care. Women officers were placed in all the principal Agencies in the British Isles to interview intending women emigrants in order that they might be given help and advice, and correct information regarding conditions in Canada. It was also necessary to be certain that the women coming out were suitable in health and character.

For some time after the establishment of the Women's Branch, Canadian Government conductresses were carried on passenger ships bringing women from the British Isles to Canada. Now, four of the principal steamship companies in the Canadian Trans-Atlantic Service carry conductresses as ship's officers. What Canada has done in the development of women's work for women, and especially the protection of women and children travelling alone, has received the commendation of the League of Nations and is cited as an example that may well be emulated.

Canada recognized that after-care meant a great deal to newcomers, and that this phase of the work should receive special attention. Women Officers were placed at the Canadian Atlantic ports to receive and assist women and children. Conductresses were employed on the trains to be responsible for and to assist all women and children. The long train journeys in Canada required that proper supervision should be given to the new arrivals unacquainted with Canadian conditions.

An important feature of Women's Work was the establishment of Women's Hostels in some of the principal Canadian centres where women and girls seeking employment as houseworkers receive twenty-four to forty-eight hours' free accomodation on arrival ,paid for by the Department of Immigration. The Hostels are managed by local Committees, and receive grants from the Dominion Government and in most cases from the Provincial Government as well. It has been found necessary in view of the great number of girls coming to Canada, to have other centres than the regular Hostels, and arrangements have been made in certain centres with local organizations to give the girls similar privileges in the matter of free accomodation on arrival.

Women and girls coming to Canada are placed in employment either through the Employment Service of Canada, or by the Women's Branch of the Immigration Department in co-operation with some of the Hostels.

In the Immigration Buildings at Quebec, St. John and Halifax, the Department supplies space and equipment for nurseries operated by the Canadian Red Cross Society. In these a work is carried on of great value to the newcomers. A trained nurse is in charge at each port nursery. Tired mothers are able to get a cup of tea and put their infants to bed while waiting for trains. They may discuss their problems with the nurse in charge and are free to get their baggage checked. The nurseries on a busy day are most interesting sight. Many little children are to be seen seated at small red tables with their mugs of milk and biscuits supplied by the Red Cross Society. And the welfare work begun here does not cease at the port. The observant nurse is able to find out in conversation with the mothers, those who require visits later. These names are passed on to the Red Cross Headquarters and from there to district nurses where the newcomers settle.

Juvenile Immigration—that is, the immigration of boys and girls unaccompanied by parents or guardians —is a phase of immigration work so important that it has long been assigned to a special branch of the Department under a supervisor of Juvenile Immigration with headquarters at Ottawa. The Juvenile Immigration Branch works in the closes co-operation with the voluntary Associations under whose auspices the children come to Canada from the British Isles. All these Associations maintaining Training Homes in the British Isles and Reception Homes in Canada. Before leaving these Homes the children are carefully inspected by Canadian officials to determine their fitness for Canada. From the Canadian Homes they are placed in selected farm homes. To these Receiving Homes they may return in case of change of employment, illness, or for other reasons. Since the commencement of the movement over 85,000 boys and girls have come to Canada, a great many of whom have become prominent and successful citizens of the Dominion. The large majority are engaged in agricultural pursuits.

Every boy and girl is subjected to medical examination before migration is permitted. Employers in Canada are selected with a view to giving the child a good home and opportunity to acquire—a useful training The Department has a staff of experienced men and women exclusively for the supervision and inspection of these young migrants and the homes in which they are placed in Canada.

The importance and value of the juvenile immigration movement are fully appreciated by the Department which has been and is working to increase this movement along practical lines to conform with new conditions.

Tomorrow's Energy Depends on Tonight's Sleep

Today you possess a definite, measurable supply of energy for life's activities. Tomorrow you may have more or less; it depends upon how well you sleep tonight.

Seven hours of refreshing, glorious relaxation and perfect slumber on a Marshall Mattress are worth eleven hours of sleep on an ordinary mattress, which all too soon has become packed and unyielding.

The Marshall Mattress with its soft, flexible spring centre creates an entirely new kind of comfort, unknown in an ordinary stuffed mattress.

Never until you have slept on a Marshall can you realize what a tremendous difference this perfect body support means to real sleep.

Marshall owners never dreamed that such luxuriantly comfortable sleep ever existed until they bought their first Marshall. What a revelation it was to them. Your first night, too, on a Marshall will unfold to you this new kind of sleeping comfort.

A mattress that will give you many years of extra service, produce better and more healthful sleeping comfort through a definite scientific construction is naturally worth a few extra dollars. When others are replacing their ordinary mattresses your Marshall will be as good as new.

The Marshall necessarily costs a little more at first, but it actually costs less over a period of years. It is the soundest investment you can possibly make in really restful sleeping comfort.

Examine this greatest of all mattresses to-day at your furniture store. Made in five grades from $25.00 up—all Marshall Spring Mattresses are guaranteed for five years.

NOW she knows the Value of Monthly Income Insurance

I SOLD a man a Continuous Monthly Income Policy in favour of his wife, to provide her $200 per month, in case of his prior death, which took place a few years later.

Not long after her husband's death, her brother came to her to borrow some money to put in his business.

She answered the simple truth — she had no money.

"Why, you have Tom's insurance," he said.

She explained that her husband had left her an income of $200 per month. She had no lump sum at her disposal. She was sorry, but, afterwards, she realized her husband had been wise.

"Because," she told me, "if I had had a lump sum, I would have lent it. And it would have been lost, because, within two years, my brother failed. I never realized the full value of Monthly Income Insurance until that time."

Let our Representative explain the advantages of the Mutual Monthly Income Policy.

ANNUAL MEETING HELD AT OMEMEE

Good Representation at Congregational Meeting of Trinity United Church.

OMEMEE, April 23.—The Annual Congregational meeting of Trinity United Church was held in the Sunday School room on Wednesday evening, with a good representation of members of the congregation in attendance. Rev. E. W. Rowland presided. Reports of the year's work were heard from the various organizations of the church, all of which were very satisfactory.

Mr. Percy Race gave the treasurer's report in a very capable manner. The minister's stipend had been met and a balance remains in the treasury. Reports will be prepared shortly under the direction of the treasurer and the Board of Stewards.

Mr. T. C. Ivory, the chairman and treasurer of the Trustee Board, gave an itemized account of the current receipts and expenses, and explained briefly the duties of the Board. Mr. Ivory has filled this office for many years and is also, one of the oldest church members, and it was with a feeling of sadness that in looking over the congregation he missed so many faces while giving his report. In filling an office in the church, we should each feel the responsibility that rests upon us in representing the Master.

The Adult Bible Class report was given by Mrs. Robert Wilson, the treasurer, and showed a large membership made up chiefly of parents, but a decrease in attendance, owing to so much sickness. A contribution of $8 had been given to missions and $23 had been donated to the Sunday school.

Mr. A. Scott, who has held the office of treasurer of the Sunday school for twenty-six years, gave a concise report of the finances to the satisfaction of all. The total receipts having amounted to $177.35.

W.M. S. Report Read.

A report of the Women's Missionary Society was read by Mrs. E. Bradburn, in the absence of the treasurer, Mrs. T. C. Ivory. This society has upwards of forty members, and the financial situation showed an increase in receipts over previous years.

Mrs. E. W. Rowland, the president of the Wide Awake Mission Band, gave a thorough report of that organization. There are 35 members. The meetings are held regularly every two weeks, when the Study book is discussed and the service made interesting and helpful by the leaders. During the year this little band raised $79.12, which was contributed to missions.

The following officers have been elected for the ensuing year: President, M. Gray; 1st vice President, F. Weir; Secretary, Mildred Williamson; Treasurer, Howard Vaughan; Mite-box Supt., Willie Weir.

A brief report of the choir was given by the leader, Miss Lila Parsons. The financial side showing a nice balance in the treasury.

Miss Lillian Race gave a splendid account of the Young People's Union. The membership totals 42. The programmes for the weekly service are prepared several weeks in advance and no trouble is experienced in securing talent for each service. One hundred dollars is donated each year to the stipend of Rev. Howard Veale in China, and [illegible] balance remains in the treasury.

A flourishing report of the year's work of the Ladies' Aid Society, followed by the treasurer, Mrs. R. H. Williamson. The membership totalled 30. The amount of money raised was $736.35. The church property had been renovated during the year, donations had been given to the Sunday school, the W.M.S. and the Trustee Board, and a neat balance remains in the treasury.

The Maintenance and Extension Fund has not as yet reached the allotted amount, $626.05 has been contributed, and the list is still open to any who desire to contribute to this fund.

Outlined Year's Work.

The pastor, Rev. E. W. Rowland briefly outlined his year's work. The Omemee circuit covers a radius of 15 miles, from east to west, and 9 miles from north to south. During the year, the pastor has had 13 baptisms, 8 burials and 5 weddings and made 352 calls on the Omemee circuit, and had never withdrawn a service on account of illness.

Mr. H. Lamb was then called upon by the chairman, and in a few words reviewed the reports of the various organizations. He commended the church treasurer, Mr. Percy Race on the able manner in which the books were kept as auditor, he felt the work and time which the treasurer must give to fill this office. In closing he moved that, on behalf of the congregation a hearty vote of thanks be extended to those who gave the reports and also for their work in the past. Mr. Isiah Feir seconded the motion which was heartily endorsed by a hearty clap of hands, followed by the rendition of "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow."

Mr. David Weir, teacher of the Adult Bible Class then spoke a few words. Mr. Weir took exception to the word "teacher," stating he merely leads in the discussions. He is proud of his class and while not satisfied with the work, yet in meeting from Sunday to Sunday, from week to week, and year to year, there surely must be a good outcome. In closing he extended an invitation to any of the congregation to join the class.

The chairman of the trustee board then asked to have the opinion of the gathering regarding the old shed which is in bad need of shingling and it was decided to have the same repaired.

Rev. E. W. Rowland closed the meeting after which a social half hour was enjoyed.

Opportunity knocks for someone here to establish a permanent and profitable business!

If your present business opportunities are limited—or if you're a real salesman with ambition to go into business for yourself—we would like the privilege of showing you the money making opportunities of the Paige franchise.

It doesn't matter particularly whether you're in the automobile business now. If you have initiative, ambition and some capital, you'll be interested in our proposition. Many of our most successful dealers began business on extremely limited capital. Today they are established, successful and prosperous. Liberal terms of the Paige finance plan makes it unnecessary for Paige dealers to tie up all their capital in inventory.

This city is one of the very few in all of Canada where this splendid opportunity is still open. Remember that Paige has enjoyed 18 years of uninterrupted success—it has never been reorganized nor refinanced—it is directed today by the same men who founded the business—its ratio of assets to liabilities is high—its position is strong—it owns one of the finest plants in the industry—it spends millions of dollars annually in advertising—its dealers are prosperous. If you're interested in having a money-making business—get in touch with us immediately.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

The Majesty and Glory of Christ

Texts: Mark 9: 2-10; 2 Peter 1:16-18.

And after six days Jesus taketh with him Peter, and James, and John, and leadeth them up into an high mountain apart by themselves: and he was transfigured before them.

And his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow; so as no fuller on earth can white them.

And there appeared unto them Elias, with Moses; and they were talking with Jesus.

And Peter answered and said to Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.

For he wist not what to say; for they were sore afraid.

And there was a cloud that overshadowed them: and a voice came out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son; hear him.

And suddenly, when they had looked round about, they saw no man any more, save Jesus only with themselves.

And as they came down from the mountain, he charged them that they should tell no man what things they had seen, till the Son of man were risen from the dead.

And they kept that saying with themselves, questioning one with another what the rising from the dead should mean.

For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty.

For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount.

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for April 24, The Majesty and Glory of Christ. Mark 9:2-10; 2 Peter 1: 16-18.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D.D.
Editor of The Congregationalist.

The story of the Transfiguration of Jesus is found in three of the four Gospels.

The incident came at a crucial point in the career of Jesus when the testing time was coming for the disciples who had left all and had followed him. Peter had made his great confession, "Thou art the Christ, the son of the living God." But great confessions and great religious experiences are apt to have very serious reactions.

The crucial time for a new convert is not in the hour of some great emotion, when he goes forward to the altar and commits his life to Christ. The very intensity of that experience is apt to produce a very dangerous reaction the next morning, or after the series of meetings, with their incident excitement, have passed and the normal tasks and temptations of life have to be met once more. This is not always realized and many evangelistic campaigns fail in their ultimate results because such reactions are permitted to take place without proper safeguards.

The Hour of Trial.

The falling away of converts does not always mean that they were not sincere in their confession of conversion, nor does it mean even that they were necessarily weak, but it does mean that in the moment of trial or temptation, when the tempter has, perhaps, suggested the folly of their having given way to such emotion, there has not been the reassuring voice of conscience and of some good angel in human form ministering a word of comfort and encouragement. Even in the very hour of Peter's great confession, Jesus had rebuked his lack of spiritual understanding, and almost at the very verge of the cross he found the disciples strangely dull in spiritual comprehension and unresponsive to the deeper things in his life and message.

Jesus understood the dangers of spiritual reaction, and this, apparently was underlying the manifestation of his majesty and glory in the Mount of Transfiguration. He took up into the mount with him Peter and James and John, the three strong and impulsive spirits upon whose allegiance so much depended. And there in the mount there came to these men some visible manifestation of his glory, and such a glorious confirmation of the divine mission of Christ that they were overwhelmed with the experience.

Surely this experience in the mount must have held them firm and steadfast in times of doubt and discouragement; and in after days, as is suggested in the second portion of our lesson from the second epistle of Peter, when men wont to say that the Christians were following "cunningly devised fables," it was to such scenes as this of the Transfiguration that the memory of the disciples turned. They emphasized the fact that they had been eye-witnesses of his majesty.

It is in exactly the same way that John finds the deepest assurance in his personal experience of the Christ. In the opening of his First Epistle he speaks of "that which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life."

A Universal Experience.

Is it too much to say that every Christian must have somewhere in his life this experience of the Transfiguration? What is the use of our studying what happened to Peter, James and John, ages ago, unless that experience comes to us? It is an experience that we shall not find upon the low level of life.

There are certain visions that can be had only upon the mountain top; though if men lived only on mountain tops, there would be little real work done in the world. The mountains have had their part in developing in men vision and rugged character, but it is the fruitful valleys and rivers that have played the great part in the actual processes of the sustaining of life and the progress of civilization. The mountain and the valley have each their part to play in the developing and service of the true Christian.

It is not in establishing tabernacles where we may dwell upon the mountain top, but in returning to the daily paths of life to put the visions that we have seen into our common tasks and relationships, that the full meaning and inspiration of the Transfiguration are revealed.

EASTER SERVICES

ZION CHURCH.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, April 22.—Easter service was held in Zion church on Sunday evening and with ideal weather conditions, the congregation filled the church. The pastor, Rev. C. D. Daniel, was handicapped by a very sore throat and was compelled to turn part of his duties over to members of the session. His affliction, however, did not present him from giving a very fine Easter address.

His subject was "The Victory of the Tomb" and his remarks were based on the great joy with which the news of the empty tomb was received among the followers of Jesus. The glorious coming of spring was one of the finest examples of resurrection. The sermon throughout was one of comfort to those who mourned the loss of loved ones, as the speaker showed both by scripture and actual experience the gracious resurrecting power of the Son of God. Such a sermon could not fail to leave a deep impression on all listeners. Special music was rendered by the choir.

AT MILLBROOK.

MILLBROOK, April 23.—Special Easter services were held in the three churches of the village on Sunday, with sermons and music appropriate to the occasion, and with Easter lilies among the floral decorations in each case.

Following the usual custom the flowers at St. Thomas' Church were given by a number of friends in memory of loved ones called home, carnations, daffodils, tulips and lilies banking the altar, and filling the sacred building with fragrance. The Easter lilies on the altar table in the United Church were a gift to the Reverend Joseph Wilks from a personal friend, coming direct from Bermuda to him last week. Grace Church also had some beautiful blossoms, with a pot of fragrant white lilies, within the altar railing.

St. Thomas' Church.

Rev. P. C. Howard preached in St. Thomas' Church at the morning worship from the text found in Luke xxiv., 6, "He is not here; He is risen," and the rector, Rev. Canon Allen, gave the sermon at night, choosing his subject from Galations ii., 20: "Nevertheless I live." Mr. Allen preached from the first part of this verse at the Good Friday service, continuing the theme on Sunday evening.

The Easter message of life from the dead, and of the full, rich abundant life made possible through faith in a risen Saviour, was emphasized, and the gladness of the Eastertide was made clear as a real and definite experience through the thoughts earnestly and prayerfully expressed.

The special music included a number of Easter carols sung by the choir at the evening service, Mrs. Allen presiding at the organ and playing as a voluntary, "O that I had the Wings of a Dove," midway in the selections being rendered. The offertory voluntary was "Those Distant Bells," by Johnston. The carols were: "O Joyous Easter," "Hear Those Easter Bells," "Come with Flowers" (sung by the eight choir boys), "Come See the Place," "Rise, Rise," "Ye Happy Bells," and "Jesus Lives."

Grace Church.

Rev. John Riddell, pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church, spoke from the text, John xi., 21: "Lord, if Thou hadst been here my brother had not died," developing the thought that, while life undoubtedly had its sorrows, and times of severe trial, an infinite love and wisdom plans all that touches God's children. Christ can see into the future as He did when Martha spoke, apparently in deep reproach, the words of the text, and because He sees that the testing will bring out the gold and save it from being smothered by the dross of worldliness and self-interest, He permits the hard experiences to come to pass.

The message was one of great comfort, and fittingly preceded the Communion service which immediately followed. There was a large number of communicants.

Two anthem were rendered by the choir, under the leadership of Mr. C. Thorndyke; "Awake Up, My Glory" and "The Roseate Hues of Early Dawn."

The United Church.

"Remember that Jesus Christ was raised from the dead," 2nd Timothy ii., 8, was the text from which Rev. F. H. Howard preached at the morning service in the United Church, delivering a discourse that brought out the thought, "The great question is not 'what do you believe?' but 'whom do you trust?'"

"Though Christ a thousand times
in Bethlehem be born,
If He's not born in thee, thy soul is all forlorn."

"Two things that take us all in are sin and death; but Christ broke the power of sin, and took from death its sting. Remember He is not a Saviour that was, but is a present leader, and a new birth is necessary to begin a new life."

Such love as His would not let us go, and He is as real and approachable to-day as when He walked in Galilee. Easter brings these truths with a great freshness, and fills them as never before with interest and joy.

The anthem by the choir in the morning was "He dieth no more, Hallelujah," by Semper, and the male quartette, Messrs. W. H. Coombe, H. W. Johnston, V. C. Lambert and M. McDowell, sang "How Calm and Beautiful," by Carrie B. Adams. There was a special song service at night, the choir, under the leadership of Mrs. H. W. Johnston, singing three anthems: "Calvary" (Rodney), "Christ Our Passover" (Heyser), and "Hallelujah, Now is Christ Risen" (Semper). A duet, "If I could but Tell," by Mrs. G. W. and Miss Marjorie Sayles, was also much enjoyed.

The Resurrection was the pastor's theme.

DRESS
By MARY MARSHALL

This kasha coat with wing drapery at the back has a double-breasted closing, wide revers and close-fitting outlines that give it a decided smack of the Directoire.

We hear something about an Empire revival. Directoire tendencies are spoken of—and every once in a while as you look at the new frocks and hats for spring and summer you do see something that vividly recalls the fashions of those two epochs. As applied to present-day clothes there is really no necessity to differentiate between these two periods.

It is enough for most of us to remember concerning the costumes of that period, associated with the women of the Bonaparte era—Empress Josephine, Madame Recamier, Pauline Borghese and Hortense de Beauharnais—that there were straight scant lines, and the same scantiness of attire that there is today. But 8aistlines were high— as much above the so-called normal line as those we have been wearing lately have been below. It was the fashion then as now, to show the shape of the head—though this effect was then produced by thinning the hair and laying it in curls or plaits close to the head rather than by cutting it as we do today. Sleeves were long and close fitting, or only slightly puffed, and arms were often bare. It was the period when the poke bonnet first came into fashion.

We cannot hope to have a real Directoire or Empire revival. There are certain things about the costume of that period that we would not like—the flat little slippers that women wore, for one thing. But there is much in common between the clothes worn now and those worn in that period after the French revolution; and now that the waistline seems to be rising in good earnest there are those who say that it will not stop at a normal position, but will mount until it has gone to the position we speak of as "Empire."

There are women who know perfectly well what an Empire waistline is who could not for the life of them tell you why it is so called.

It is an interesting coincidence that while some of the dressmakers are making tentative experiments with this high waistline milliners are seriously considering the poke shape as a successor to the skull caps, berets and cloches of the present day. The poke, in fact, is no longer an experiment. The characteristic of the poke is the wide brim at front and sides—dropping on the sides—with very narrow brim or absence of brim entirely at the back.

SAINT and SINNER
By ANNE AUSTIN

"What happened next, Mr. Bates, after Mrs. Wiley said, 'My God! Dead! It's all your fault, Chris! I hate you, I hate you'!" Banning asked, repeating the preacher's words with great significance and emphasis.

"Mr. Wiley tried to take the paper away from his wife, and said something like this: 'You're making a fool of yourself, Cherry! Get control of yourself! This looks bad for us. Why, good heavens—' "

"Just a minute, Mr. Bates," Banning interrupted with a smile. "Are you sure the defendant's husband said, 'Good heavens'—is that the expression?"

"I—er believe it was stronger," Bates said, flushing. "I—er—believe he said, 'Good God,' or 'Jesus Christ'—"

"Go right on, Mr. Bates, with what Mr. Wiley said," Banning directed, triumphantly.

"He added, after the—er—expression which I did not exactly remember, 'You must have been the last person to see him alive! They'll be looking for us, I suppose.' Mrs. Wiley was still holding the paper, and she tried to read the account of the murder, or as much as the paper could give, when I told her that I had thought it my duty to telephone the police that I had performed the marriage the evening before, and that they had left my house for the Anderson farm to spend the night."

"And what did the defendant say to that?" Banning smiled significantly at the jury.

"Mrs. Wiley seized her husband's hand and said, 'We're going back, Chris. We're going to give ourselves up for questioning. We have nothing to hide and we're not going to act as if we were running away.' I told her I thought that was the wise thing to do."

"You did not see the defendant again that day?" Banning asked.

"No, sir. I was not summoned for the inquest.

"That is all, Mr. Bates," Banning dismissed him.

Just before Churchill took the witness for cross examination, he and Cherry—a white-faced, but steady-eyed Cherry—put their heads close together in earnest consultation. Churchill's expression of troubled gravity was considerably lightened by whatever Cherry had whispered to him, and he approached the preacher with the greatest deference.

"Mr. Bates, in your opinion, and from your long experience as a marrying parson, would you say that Miss Cherry was more overwrought and nervous and tearful than the usual eloping bride, who fears pursuit by members of her family? I refer, of course, to her attitude, appearance and conduct on the evening of Thanksgiving Day, when you performed the marriage ceremony?"

"Most eloping brides are nervous, but I would say that Miss Cherry was rather more tearful than is usual, a fact which she explained by referring to her fears for her mother's health, and by her sorrow at causing her fiance pain and humiliation," the preacher answered conscientiously.

Banning cast a black look at him as if he could throttle him, but Churchill beamed.

"Now, Mr. Bates, you have testified that Miss Cherry said, in reference to Mr. Cluny, 'He's so old, so old? He knows. He understands now!' You are quite sure that Miss Cherry spoke in the present tense, not in the past, that she did not say, 'He was so old?'"

The jury and the audience exchanged glances of admiration for Churchill's adroit cross-examination, and leaned forward with intense interest to hear the preacher's reply.

HERE ARE HINTS FOR CLEAN-UP GIVEN BY PETERBOROUGH WOMEN

In connection with the local Clean-Up Campaign, various housewives of th city who have tried out divers forms of cleaning m thods have been kind enough in many instances, to pass them along.

On lady proffers the suggestion, tried out by her, in painting outdoor woodwork around a verandah or window-casings or pillars, to apply a thin coat of floor wax after the paint dries. This makes a smooth surface off which the rain slides easily, and to which dust and dirt is not so apt to cling.

In placing a piece of wall-paper over a broken section on the wall, it is better to tear the edges roughly than to cut them with a scissors, as the uneven effect is found to blend better with the pattern and attract less notice than a formally edged piece.

Dirty Blinds.

One housewif who was in despair over the appearance of several perfectly good white blinds that had become soiled, tried washing them with little success. The result was a streaked, unlikeable effect. Then she applied a coat of very thin white paint, with wonderful results. The paint was thinned with turpentine to such an extent that it was really liquid, with just sufficient body to color the blind.

For cleaning light wallpaper that has become slightly darkened, stale bread crumbs are recommended, rubbed well in. Oatmeal paper can be renovated beautifully, bringing out all the original color, by rubbing with a slightly dampened rag.

Another woman who found a tapestry chair back soiled by the heads that had rested upon it, and its arms darkened also, thought of removing the rather expensive covering and replacing it. But she attempted first to clean it with plenty of hot water and soap, well rubbed in, and achieved a very satisfactory effect.

To take stray bits of paint from glass, rub with a silver coin or copper according to one lady, while another recommends very heartily the use of the steel wool that is so valuable in cleaning old pots and pans.

Faded Rugs.

For bringing back the color to faded rugs, a soft brush dipped in a solution of one tablespoonful of ammonia to a pint of water is recommended, while another lady uses equal parts of vinegar and water.

In removing paint stains from woodwork without also removing the varnish beneath, one woman has had considerable success in using ammonia, either liquid or powdered.

In cleaning glass, after washing with water and drying, a chamois leather, moistened with kerosene is recommended, while chamois wrung out of warm water is used for cleaning polished furniture.

In connection with white window-shades, referred to above, still another recipe for cleaning is to use bread dipped in rice flour.

The popular cleaning compound that illustrates the idea of a busy housewife is recommended for removing varnish that has become patched and streaky in floors, and vinegar should be used immediately after, to counteract alkali in the cleanser. To prevent ridging in oak flooring, sandpaper should be used on rough spots.

Fountain-pen ink spilled on a linen runner was treated with several applications of sour milk, and then washed carefully, to emerge as good as new.

One lady who likes to take care of her hands always fills her nails with talcum powder before embarking on cleaning operations, and thus keeps grime and dirt from lodging under them.

GOD'S RESERVE FORCES.

God's reserve forces—where are they? They are in all kinds of hidden places, and in all kinds of things. It may be only the song of a bird, or a ray of sunshine; it may be only a few kind words from a sincere soul or the perfume of some beautiful flower that will constitute God's reserve forces for us. How often you and I, my friend, have felt we are about "all in", and practically done for, years ago, yet here we are alive, and perhaps stronger than we were then, so let us never say die till we're dead; and then let us believe in that "In a nobles, sweeter song, we'll sing God's power to save, when this poor, lisping, stammering tongue lies silent in the grave."

Sometimes, too, our very extreme need leads the way to the discovery of God's hidden reserve. I read once of some sailors dying of thirst believing that they were sailing on salt water, when one of them in desperation, let down a pail determined to drink the deadly salt stuff, but on putting it to his lips found it was fresh water. With a hoarse cry he called to his mates his discovery of LIFE in the midst of death.

Take the case too of many a mother, with perhaps little strength, hardly able to do her ordinary day's work; but one of the children takes sick, and she goes night and day and wonders where all the endurance comes from. It's wonderful. I have often watched too, with wonder the healing of a wound. Where are the hidden forces that cause that wound to heal, yet immediately we hurt ourselves the healing process begins. Oh, yes, God is love. His mercy lightens all the path in which we roam. Bliss He wakes, and woe He lightens. God is Wisdom, God is Love.

Mexico City is pronounced "Mehico" by the Mexicans.

Safety on the Highways must be maintained

NEW SPEED LIMIT THRUSTS GREATER RESPONSIBILITY ON DRIVERS FOR CARE AND COURTESY

A GREATER responsibility for alert caution rests on the motorist using the highways now that the speed limit has been raised.

In every case speed must be governed by the circumstances.

The change in the law does not to the slightest extent relieve the motorist from responsibility for careless or reckless driving. Indeed, in this respect the faster movement of traffic on the highways will thrust upon drivers a greater necessity for caution.

In villages, in heavy traffic, at cross roads or railway crossings, where adults or children are using the highway, near schools, and at curves and bridges, care must be exercised by the motorist in accordance with the circumstances. Obedience to the law and courtesy to others is expected at all times.

The raising of the speed limit in no way lessens the necessity for caution. The change in the law will not mitigate the offense of recklessness or carelessness on the part of any driver. Attention is particularly directed to the provision for cancellation of the car's license, which may follow subsequent conviction for reckless driving.

The safety of the highways must be maintained. The Department hopes that motorists will realize this and will strive through carefulness and courtesy to continue to keep Ontario highways safe for all who use them.

DOCTORS ADVICE TO THE SICK

Wash Away All Poisons in Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowels Before Breakfast

To feel your best day in and day out, no more headaches, indigestion, gas on stomach, bilious attacks, rheumatism, kidney pains, bad breath, you must bathe your self inside. Start today by taking one Tanol Calomel tablet before meals or two at bedtime, then next morning drink a glass or two of hot water to wash from the stomach, liver, kidney and bowels all the previous day's waste, poison and toxins before more food is taken in. Get a few Tanol tablets from F. C. Weber, Charlotte street, Peterborough. They are harmless to take, do not nauseate, no bad after effects, no salts or seidlitz next morning, like ordinary calomel. Then you can eat better, sleep better, work better, think better and look better.

ART STUDY CLUB CLOSES SEASON

Mrs. F. C. Neal Gives Paper at Concluding Meeting This Week.

DISCUSSES ROMANCE.

The concluding meeting of the Art Study Club of the Women's Art Association was held this week, at the home of Mrs. A. B. Harris, George street, with the response to the roll call given in a personal experience of each member. Mrs. F. C. Neal gave a very interesting paper on "The Romance of the Great Artists." Plans were discussed for next year's programme, also for the picnic in the summer which forms a portion of the Club's social activities.

Mrs. Neal's paper outlined in an entertaining way the romances of some of the world's great artists, from Fra Lippo Lippi, born in Venice at the beginning of the 15th century, to George Frederick Watts, who married Ellen Terry, the actress, in 1884, separating from her by mutual consent, within the year.

Leonardo da Vinci, according to history, never married, and never came under the influence of any individual woman, appearing to devote all of his attention to his art. Michaelangelo Buonarotti, called the "man of four souls," because of his singular gifts along four lines, in painting, sculpture, architecture and poetry, loved, with a pure and noble affection, the widowed Marchioness, Vittoria Colonna, with a devotion similar to that of Dante for Beatrice, and lived on for sixteen years after her death, suffering in silence. He said of himself: "In all my sufferings, I have at least this satisfaction, that no one can read in my face the story of my weariness or my longing. I go upon my way alone."

Of Raphael, it is said that he was happy in the world as he found it, and was beloved by the faithful Margharita (his wife in all but name).

Andrea del Sarto, contemporary of Raphael, was blighted by the faithless conduct of his wife, whom he loved, but whose cruel conduct extinguished all enthusiasm in him.

Giorgione, born in 1470, loved a lady who contracted the plague and died. Coreggio, who painted wonderful feminine beauties, was a model husband and father, and Titian, whose attitude toward love was extremely broad, were painters of the Later Venetian school, while Flemish artists mentioned included Rubens, who was twice happily married and Anthony van Dyck, for whom a marriage was arranged by his patron, Charles First.

Among the Germans were Albert Durer, who married at the age of twenty-three years and then settled down to a life of industry.

The Dutchman, Rembrandt, was encouraged in his work and life, which turned out in later years to be one of bankruptcy and ruin, by a faithful wife, the love of his youth, and the woman who succeeded her on her death, while in the Spanish School, Velasquez was happily married, his wife surviving his death by only seven days, and Murillo married a lady of position and fortune and settled down to a happy career.

Among the English, Hogarth ran away with the daughter of his teacher, the lady making him a good wife; Sir Joshua Reynolds never married, and Gainsborough was fortunate in choosing a wife whose private income kept the home going while he tried his hand at various forms of art. Romney left his wife at Kendal, while he went to London, there meeting a beautiful girl, who became his model, and, although there was no hint of anything dishonorable in their relations, exercised a great influence on his life and work. Raeburn married at twenty-two, a lady of means, thus being able to travel and cultivate his natural gifts. Constable, who waited many years for the lady of his choice, after her relatives had objected to the match because of his lack of means, finally won her, and was very happy. His wife's death caused Constable to lag in his art, and he never fully recovered from her loss.

Ford Maddox Brown married twice, and Millais made his wife the subject of some of his finest pictures. William Holman Hunt, bereft by the loss of his wife, married her sister.

"With Rosetti, Millais, Hunt and Maddox Brown will always be linked the name of Miss Siddall. Discovered by Walter Deverell in a milliner's hat shop, she was engaged to act as his model. Rosetti met her there, and about a year later, they were engaged, and after ten years, were married.

She sat for all the groups, although her health was not good. Later, she developed artistic talent and produced water-colors in the style of Rosetti. She died from an overdose of laudanum, taken to relieve neuralgia, and Rossetti, feeling that he had often neglected her, placed in her coffin a collection of his original poems which he had taken great pain to put together."

George Frederick Watts married in 1884 Ellen Terry, "she in the charm of youthful beauty, he nearly thirty-five years her senior and so different. In less than a year, they separated by mutual consent."

INDIGESTION

Gas on Stomach Caused Severe Pains

Mrs. C. F. Wheeler, R.R. No. 1, Glen Ewen, Sask., writes:—"For years my eldest son suffered from severe pains and agony from imperfect digestion. He dieted and used artificial digestants, but all to no avail. At last I got him a bottle of and he had not taken the whole bottle before he was greatly relieved. The severe stomach attacks ceased, there was no more gas on the stomach, and he could eat anything he wished."

Matinee Ladies

BY William B. Courtney

"MATINEE LADIES," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Bob Ward, college student, gets work as a dancing partner for rich women in a New Jersey roadhouse. At the Inn he meets the prettiest, sweetest girl he has ever laid eyes on—Sally, the cigarette girl. Reciprocating his interest, she warns him against the mysterious and beautiful Mrs. Hammond, habitue of the Inn, who finds her "thrill" in "hunting" Bob for her lovenest apartment. Bob, taking Sally home, finds Mrs. Smith hostile, learns he has a rival, and goes home to dream over the day's events.

Perhaps some forebodings of what lay ahead, some telepathic warning of dramatic turns of Fate, assailed Bob Ward's brain, scampered through his mind, as he settled to sleep.

For he fell at once into a deep but troubled, dreamful sleep in which he was running, with legs of leaden weight, toward goal posts that kept moving away from him—always away, away. He was carrying clutched to his chest a football that kept changing magically into a cuddled-up Sally, and back into a football! And eleven Mrs. Hammonds, with tiger emblems on her—their—jerseys, were relentlessly pursuing him, drawing closer all the time; while all the undergraduates in the stands were dancing with ancient matinee ladies, to the tune of Madame Leonine's orchestra!

CHAPTER XI

The next day Bob sought an interview with his kindly and broad-minded Faculty Adviser, and with his aid arranged a few minor shifts in class schedule. By taking a fuller morning at the Heights, and by transferring some of his afternoon lectures to the evening sessions downtown at the Washington Square Branch of the University, Bog found it would be possible for him to pursue the Palisado Inn afternoon job without suffering any cut into his scholastic points.

"Waiter, if you could bring me what I want, I'd give you the biggest tip."

That accomplished, he plunged into his classroom work with a light heart—but counted the minutes until two o'clock, at which time he met Freddy and Arch, according to plan.

"Yesterday," Arch tormented him as the three journeyed over to New Jersey, "you had to be dragged over here because you piously said that it 'wasn't a fit way for a decent man to make a living!' Today, wild horses couldn't hold you away from the Palisado Inn. Ain't it funny what a difference a little head of gold will make?"

"A stray violet might elevate a cabbage patch!" grinned Bob, no whit abashed.

"Speaking of violets, your loyalty to your dear old Alma Mater's flower is commendable," mocked Freddy, "but there's a brambly rose growing in the same cabbage patch, as you call it, and her name is Mrs. Hammond. Look out, old Soberslabs, that you don't rip your morals on her briars!"

"Don't worry," laughed Bob, "I pruned many a rose bush when I was a kid!"

The first one Bob looked for when, at the end of the sizzling bus ride, he stood once more within the garish portals of the Palisado Inn, was little Sally Smith. His eyes, his soul, were hungry for the sight of the quaint Dresden cigarette girl, who reminded him of old gardens.

But the first one he saw was Mrs. Hammond!

She was seated at her favorite table, waiting. An early bird, indeed, was Mrs. Hammond; and eager for the game of matinee passion to begin.

Madame Leonine was talking to her, and beaming upon the other early arrivals.

Mrs. Hammond was watching for him, and saw Bob instanter. She smiled a broad and gracious welcome, and immediately signalled to him to come to her.

The Madame, noting also the advent of her boys—and above all, her prize performer—hurried toward them, in her wonted way, and badgered them to make haste to prepare for the afternoon's dancing.

She had seen Mrs. Hammond's signal to Bob, and sped him on his way to the woman with an encouraging leer, like a worldly wise mongrel "sicking" a green puppy on a veteran cat.

"Oh, hello, Bob. I'm so glad to see you. I've been waiting for you most anxiously. You've spoiled me for ever dancing with anyone else," Mrs. Hammond said, laughing low in her throat in the soft and musical way that was so disarming, that seemed to Bob the essence of aristocratic restraint.

She was certainly a beautiful creature, Mrs. Hammond!—gracious, and never at a loss for a graceful word.

But Bob recalled himself with grim determination from the easy swamp of admiration of Mrs. Hammond, into which he had started to drift; and remembered that he had not yet seen the dear face and form which had changed his entire outlook on life, and for whom alone he had made this trip today in the highest and fondest expectations.

Meanwhile, he told Mrs. Hammond deprecatingly: "You're awfully kind Mrs. Hammond—Delia, I mean—but I'm sure your flattery is unjustified. Why, both Freddy and Arch can dance as well as I can; and there are any number of others who can, too!"

"But they are not you, Bob Ward!" she said positively.

"I'm afraid I don't quite understand what you mean!" said Bob honestly, as he continued his searching looks for Sally.

Mrs. Hammond boiled inside with rage to see that all his thoughts and attentions were for another woman. Outwardly, there was no visible sign of her raging jealousy; other than a scarcely perceptible biting of her nether lip. So far as her appearance in Bob Ward's eyes was concerned, she was still the well-bred lady of wealth and position. With an impulsive nod of her head, she sportively suggested:

"Ride home with me tonight, and I'll explain what I mean, in detail. That's a good fellow—"

But Bob, who had decided that Sally must still be in the dressing room, smiled impersonally down upon Mrs. Hammond, and explained:

"I'm awfully sorry, honest, Delia, but I can't. I sort of made a standing promise with Miss Smith to see her home every night. And now, you must excuse me, please, while I go in to freshen up a bit."

Outwardly, Mrs. Hammond seemed to accept her defeat in good part; so well, that one looking at her casually, as Bob had done, would never suspect the cankering fires that were consuming her within. She just smiled a little and warned:

"Hurry, then, Bob. The first dance is about to begin!"

Bob rushed away; and Mrs. Hammond, hungrily watching his broad and youthful back, gave vent to a muffled curse. A waiter hovering nearby, overhearing an unintelligible sound from her, obsequiously consulted her wish. What did Madame desire? But Madame was in a pensively bitter mood:

"Waiter," she reflected, "if you could bring me what I want I'd give you the biggest tip any waiter in history ever got from anyone!"

"Of course I shall bring whatever Madame wants," he promised, his eyes shining covetously.

Mrs. Hammond shook her head sadly: "You wouldn't even know what I was talking about," she smiled, more to herself than to him.

The waiter turned away, disappointed as his dream of sudden wealth collapsed as quickly as it had arisen.

In the dressing room, meanwhile, Bob had found little Sally Smith. She was in costume already, and engaged in filling her cigarette tray from the tawdry storage case.

"I'm so glad you came in here to say hello to me, before you started to dance, Bob," she said, in her shy way, coloring deeply for sheer happiness as his hands took hold of hers in greeting, as his ardent eyes caressed her. "The boys told me you had stopped to speak to that—to Mrs. Hammond!"

Madame Leonine came up to them. She was not smiling.

"Bob," she said sharply, "you were awfully short with Mrs. Hammond. For your own good, you'd better be more attentive to my guests. Sally, you're wasting too much time in here. You should have had your tray filled, and been outside, ten minutes ago. Come, come, now, I can't have any of this nonsense!"

MAY REMOVE MILK EMBARGO

As Far as Affects Ontario Promised By Monday Next.

DECREASE RADIUS.

WASHINGTON, April 23 (Canadian Press).—Removal of the United States milk embargo so far as it affects Ontario is promised by Monday next.

Following a conference between Mr. Massey, the Canadian Minister and Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, it was intimated that the embargo area defined by a radius of 200 miles from Montreal because of typhoid in that city, will be decreased. No official announcement was issued, but apparently all that part of the province of Quebec affected will remain, for the time being, under the ban.

The Department of Agriculture informed the Canadian Press yesterday that further limitation of the embargo would be made as quickly as public health officials authorize it.

The promised action permits a large section of Eastern Ontario to begin shipment to the United States again.

MODERATES SELECT FOREIGN MINISTER

Chen To Function as Minister Untitl Nanking Outrages Settled.

SHANGHAI, April 23.—(A.P.)—Dr. C. Wu, son of the late Dr. Wu Ting Fang, former Chinese minister to the United States, has been appointed foreign minster in the Cantonese government set up by the moderates under Chiang Kai Shek at Nanking.

Dr. Wu is understood to have accepted, but it is stated that Eugene Chen will continue to function as the Cantonese foreign minister until the question of the Nanking anti-foreign outrages is settled.

Fu Yin Foan, a prominent associate in Canton of the late Sun Yet Sen, founder of the Cantonese regime, has been appointed finance minister in the Nanking government.

Dr Wu told the Associated Press yesterday it was not impossible that the Nationalist government would shortly propose a conference with the powers to discuss China's position in the family of nations and to thresh out the extra teritorial concessions and unequal treaties which it holds largely responsible for the present impasse.

Lack of unity in China, he said, would be no barrier to such a conference, the Nationalist government being agreeable to the appointment of delegates from the various sections, even from the north and from Hankow, seat of the radical Cantonese regime.

China was not anti-foreign, he declared, but merely pro-Chinese. With reference to the Nanking incident, he was certain the Nationalist government was willing to make a reasonable adjustment. He insisted, however, that an investigation of the outrages by an international commission as proposed by Eugene Chen, was imperative.

China, he continued, had no quarrel with Communism, but Communists had wholly perverted the Nationalist movement.

'China is not ready for Communism," Dr. Wu said. "Some day it may come. Perhaps the world will be ready for it in a hundred years."

DAMAGE HEAVY IN FLOOD LANDS

Estimated Loss For Lower Mississippi Will Be in Millions.

THIRTY-EIGHT DEAD.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 23.—(Associated Press.)—Thirty-eight known dead, upward of 75,000 homeless, more than 7,500 square miles of land inundated and the crest of the flood still to come.

This was the story the lower Mississippi valley told last night, and along with these reports came others of additional breaks in levees, endangering hundreds of persons and threatening to add millions of dollars to the already enormous property loss.

The number dead included 19 persons who perished when the government launch Pelican was swamped by a break in the Mississippi river levee at Knowlton's Point, Ark., while on a rescue mission last night.

In his appeal for help for the sufferers, President Coolidge quoted Red Cross officials as saying that 75,000 was a conservative estimate and that this number would be doubled or trebled if the floods rise to the predicted heights within the next few days.

Caught in Delta.

M. L. Kaufman, former member of the Mississippi levee board, in a statement at Rosedale last night said hundreds of persons were caught in the delta and were in danger of drowning unless aid reached them during the night. He appealed for boats to assist in the rescue work.

Many families are in trees and on housetops, he said. "The flood is spreading fast. I cannot number the persons caught in it. None of them made preparations for this disaster. No one had moved their families to the hills.

'We know these women and children are in the flood, crying for help but the people of Rosedale can give them little assistance because we lack facilities.

'This is the most disastrous flood this country has ever had."

Along the lower reaches of the Arkansas and down the Yazoo delta a vast panorama of suffering and desolation was spread before the Red Cross and other relief agencies. Cities, towns and plantations were inundated; refugees were huddled together in more than a score of camps and the fate of others remained undetermined.

THREATEN HEADS OF EXPORT FIRM

Commissioner Brown Declared Won't Stand For Any Such Nonsense.

IGNORED SUBPOENAS.

WINDSOR, April 23 (Canadian Press). — One big company which was engaged in the business of supplying United States customers with Canadian liquor appears to have gone out of business for the time being, at least. This is the Mexico Export Company. From witnesses appearing before the Royal Commission on Customs yesterday, evidence was obtained that this company, which formerly handled the export business for nearly all Canadian distilleries, closed up shop about a week ago. Yesterday the names of four men who, according to the statement of Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., are interest in the Mexico Export Company were called aloud in the courtroom; wanted as witnesses, they failed to respond.

"Not here, Sir," was the reply of the red-coated Mounted Policeman who attempted to locate each man as his name was called by the registrar. On Monday, unless they put in an appearance, the Commission will try other means to prevail upon them to come. "We are not going to stand any nonsense of this kind," was the commentary of Chief Commissioner Brown on the situation. The names of the missing men, according to Mr. Rowell's list, are D. Caplan, L. Harris, E. J. Shanahan and Art Rheaume.

Only Temporary

Mr. Rowell expressed the opinion that the eclipse of the Mexico Export Company is only temporary, during his examination of one of the witnesses. "As soon as the Commission leaves, the Mexico Export Company will come to life again," he remarked, when Earl Mason, a customs broker, who has been doing business with this company, was on the stand. Mr. Mason said that the Mexico Company came into being about ten months ago. He believed it was a consolidation of the big distilleries. He did not know what had happened to the company since it ceased to function a short time ago.

The promiscuous use of the Customs "B13" export entry by exporters of liquor to the United States prompted Mr. Rowell to comment while he was asking questions of Mr. Mason.

"B-13's seem to be a sort of legal tender. They move around as freely as dollar bills," he said. Evidence adduced is that brokers have on file a number of these export entries covering various numbers of cases. When a requisition comes in for five, ten, twenty or a hundred cases of liquor, they produce the necessary B-13 covering the number of cases to be shipped."

Liquor Removed

The first witness to be examined yesterday afternoon was Fred Scherer, who said that he was engaged in the customs brokerage business at Ford City. The Mexico Export Company had cleared out all its stock at Ford City, he thought. About three truck-loads of liquor had been taken away.

Mr. Rowell informed him that a previous witness had estimated the value of liquor removed at $100,000. Mr. Scherer said he could not estimate what the value could be. The had given out the B-13 export entries to the trucks which came for the liquor. "Who gave you instructions to hand out these B-13's?" asked Mr. Rowell.

The witness replied that he hadn't been given any definite instructions. He did not admit that anyone could come along and get an export entry.

Questioned in regard to the men in the Mexico Export Company, Mr. Scherer could give little information. He said that when export entries came to him without the name of a boat filled in, he wrote in the name. These entries are sometimes sent from the distilleries with all the details filled in, but with no vessel's name mentioned. As they have already been sworn, the Commission has raised the point as to whether or not the name of the vessel should be added.

"Who gave you instructions to fill in the name?" asked Mr. Rowell.

"The Customs officer at Ford City."

"What is his name?"

"Lodge, he told me the Customs would not clear any more vessels unless the names were filled in"

SEYMOUR W. I. HOLDS MEETING

ON MAY NINETEENTH.

CAMPBELLFORD, Rpril 23.—The regular meeting of the Seymour West Women's Institute was held on Thurs day afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles McArthur, with an attendance of twenty-three. A committee was appointed to arrange for the programmes for the following year. Those on the committee are: Mesdames W. McKee, Charles Macoun, Thomas Dunham, G. Van Volkenburg and R. McCulloch. The following programme was well given and enjoyed by all:

Miss Mary McArthur gave an excellent paper on the work of the Women's Institute.

Reading, "In a Garden," by Mrs. R. McCulloch.

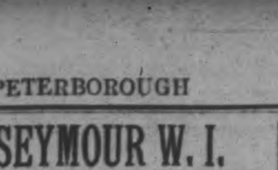
THE MOON'S THE THING.



"The flowers that bloom in the spring, tra-la, have nothing to do with the case," sang the sprightly gentleman in "The Mikado" who went on to polish off the rhyme with a reference to "a caricature of a face."

So the flowers in this picture, if there are any, haven't anything at all to do with the scene. Nor has the tree, which has a strangely effulgent appearance for the spring-time of the year—"printemps," as our Gallic neighbors nicely phrase it.

But the moon! ! Certainly the moon has a lot to do with it. There is no doubt that the "young May moon" has conspired to bring the two young people so close together. If it weren't so large and globular, they would be occupying portions of the bench a good deal farther apart. "When the moon comes up, I feel so spoony. I feel ez spoony as a looney," elegantly remarks the young Dutch swain on the blue tea-plate, regarding with ardent gaze the Dutch lady who poses with downcast eyes and a simper, while a comfortable-looking cat occupies the rug in front of the hearth acting as chaperone.

These young people have no chaperone, but they are rural folk, we think, because the young man's hair is tousled and the lady appears to be quite adequately clothed, as far as one can determine. Anyway, we don't think it is a May moon, after all. It looks more like an October moon, one of those full affairs that presage mild days to follow. The cut has got mixed up. We would write another pieec, only we haven't time. The devil (printer's edition) is waiting for something to fill up this space.

Make up your mind today that you are going to give your skin a real chance to get well.

You've probably been, like a lot of other people, convinced that the only thing to use was an ointment or salve (some of them are very good) but in the big majority of cases these sticky salves simply clog the pores and the condition primarily remains the same.

Go to Bond's Drug Store or any other good druggist today and get an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil.

The very first application will give you relief and a few short treatments will thoroughly convince you that by sticking faithfully to it for a short while your skin troubles will be a thing of the past.

Don't expect a single bottle to do it all at once but one bottle we know will show you beyond all question that you have at last discovered one way to restore your skin to perfect health.

Remember that Moone's Emerald Oil is a clean, powerful penetrating Antiseptic Oil that does not stain or leave a greasy residue and that it must give complete satisfaction or your money cheerfully refunded.

Demand for Canadian-Built Chryslers Results in Huge Expansion

DURING the last six months of last year, the car-buying public has lifted Chrysler to fourth place in dollar volume among the world's largest motor car producers.

Chrysler is now preceded only by that other great individual manufacturer who gave the world standardized quantity—as Walter P. Chrysler introduced Standardized Quality—and two units of the largest corporate group in the industry.

The significance of this amazing advance of Chrysler in public esteem is very plain: people have once more proven that they will always seek out the individual operator who disregards outworn principles and practices and brings them something unmistakably new, unmistakably progressive, and unmistakably superior in service.

In Canada, as throughout the world, people have found that Chrysler assures qualities and values which are not to be found elsewhere and which therefore place each Chrysler unmistakably apart from all other cars in its price-class.

Last year, Chrysler business in Canada increased 93%—and, to meet the ever-increasing demand, the Chrysler Corporation of Canada, Limited, took over in January another plant, securing 300% increased facilities for 1927 production and realizing the long cherished ambition of having Chryslers built largely of Canadian materials in Canadian plants by Canadian workers.

We will welcome an opportunity to place a Chrysler car at your disposal. Take out the car. See for yourself how it settles all arguments by demonstration and by differences so obvious that you cannot fail to class it as unique and literally above competition.

SILVER WEDDING DATE OBSERVED

Friends Bring Gifts On Anniversary To Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher.

MANY PRESENT.

A very pleasant event took place last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. O'Rielly, 304 Brock St., when about fifty friends gathered to celebrate the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher.

The following address was read by Mr. Harry Gainey:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher,—On this the 25th anniversary of your marriage, we, your friends and neighbors, have come together to offer you our hearty congratulations on the happy event.

Twenty-five years seems a very long stretch of time as we look forward to it, but, as we look back, it is but as a mist that rolls away, and especially does the time seem short when it has been filled with happiness such as has been your portion.

During those twenty-five years you have endeared yourselves to us all by your kindness and good fellowship. You have always been good neighbors and true friends, and as a little token of regard for you we ask you to accept this gift of silver.

May the silver of your 25th anniversary ripen into your golden 50th in the same peace and happiness which you have always enjoyed.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors,

H. Gainey.

Mr. W. Cook then presented Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher with a handsome cabinet of silver. The family also presented their parents with a pair of silver candlesticks and some silver tableware.

Although taken very much by surprise, Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher were equal to the occasion, and thanked their friends and neighbors very heartily for their kindness. Mr. Gallagher said:

"I am speaking for my wife and myself when I say we feel so overcome by such evidences of friendship and generosity that I am unable to put words together to express our thanks and appreciation of your kindness.

"Such a manifestation, however, should not surprise us, for your have, on so many occasions, proved yourselves valuable friends and neighbors.

"We take this occasion of thanking you for the many proofs of the true friendship which you have shown to us during our years amongst you, and now this valuable gift shall often remind us of you and of the anniversary which you have helped to make so happy for us.

"Particularly do we wish to thank Mr. and Mrs. O'Rielly for their kindness in opening their house to us and to the friends here assembled. All I can say is that I hope we may some time be able to show how much we appreciate what they have done for us."

The remainder of the evening was spent in progressive euchre, songs, recitations, and dancing. A dainty supper served to close a most pleasant evening and one which will be long remembered by those who were present.

Plenty of Water An Aid To Health

THE average person does not drink sufficient water. Recently a national organization, recognizing this fact, started the custom of serving a glass of water every hour to each employee. There are vital reasons why copious water drinking is essential to one's well-being. The most important of these is that water improves the elimination of waste products from the system. It does this in several ways. In the first place, it aids the functioning of the intestinal canal by keeping the contents soft. Secondly, it acts as a diuretic, that is, it increases the elimination through the kidneys. Thirdly, it improves elimination through the skin—the more one drinks, the more one perspires. These are the three methods Nature employs to rid the body of its waste products, and water has a direct influence on each and every one of them. As well as being an aid in elimination of waste products, water also serves to prevent diseases like gout. In such conditions the salts of the system become deposited in certain parts of the body. If a person drinks sufficient water, it keeps these salts in solution and thereby wards off such a disease. Now it is easy to understand why doctors urge us to drink more water. Where one is already suffering from disorders such as high blood pressure, diabetes, Brights disease and the like, it is well, above all things, to consult a qualified physician.

THE MARKETS

Price Movements Irregular Domes Mine Score Advance

TORONTO, April 23 (Canadian Press)—The market was strong and fairly active on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day. Price movements on the whole were inclined to be irregular with several wide gains being recorded. Dome Mines scored the greatest advance of list when it sold up forty cents a share to 8.40. Hollinger sold up 10 cents to 20.85 while Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves were each up 3 cents to 6.99 and 11.15 respectively. Barry Hollinger was active and strong spot selling up 4 1-2 cents to 45. McIntyre was the weak feature declining 15 cents to 26.00. Nipissing was off 10 to 7.80 and Towagmac five to 3.30. Noranda gained 15 cents to 22.25. Central Manitoba Gold 3 to 1.32 and Nickel 2.75 to 60.25.

Railroad Shares Reach Highest Point In Years

NEW YORK, APRIL 23 (Canadian Press).—Strength and activity in railroad shares, particularly coalers, featured today's irregular stock market. Delaware and Hudson soared nearly 7 points to 207 1-2, the highest since 1907, and was followed into new high ground by Reading, Baltimore and Ohio, and Lehigh Valley. Atchison, Katy Common, Frisco Common and Missouri Pacific Preferred also attained new peak prices, with heavy demand also developing for St. Paul and Peoria and Eastern issue. A sudden burst of activity in United States Steel common sent it up to 172 3-4 duplicating the record high for all time, and International Nickel, Granby Copper, Corn Products and Air Reduction all exceeded their previous to prices for the year.

World Supply Of Wheat Shows Big Decrease

CHICAGO, Ill., April 23 (Canadian Press).—Wheat rallied to-day after a little set-back at the outset, ascribed to favorable weather. On the other hand much notice was taken of an estimate that the world visible supply of wheat and flour had decreased 30 million bushels since last month. Opening at a shade to 3-8 decline, wheat later showed something of an advance.

Corn, oats and provisions were easy. Corn started unchanged to 3-8, 1-2 cent off, and substantially receding all around.

Internat. Nickel Surpasses All Previous Records

TORONTO, April 23. Canadian Press. — With transactions totalling some 16,000 shares International nickel advanced into new high ground for all time at 59 3-4, to provide the feature on the Toronto stock exchange to-day. Nickel opened at the high for the day at 59 3-4 and after sagging to 57 3-4 it rallied to close at the high for a net gain of 2 1-4 points.

Massey Harris was the next most active stock and in keeping with the general trend of firmness, sold up 1-2 to 37. Dominion Stores continued to display strength by selling up 1 1-2 to 84. Brazilian was weaker at 136 1-4, a decline of 1-2. Christie Brown sold off 1 3-4 to 47 1-2. Page Hersey advanced 1 3-4 to 69 1-4, while the preferred was up 1 to 138. Distillery issues were soft. Seagram was an exception up 3-4 to 25.

Although the number of clergymen in the Church of England has steadily decreased for the past ten years or more, the income of the Church continues to increase.

CARDIFF WINS FOOTBALL CUP

Defeats Arsenal One Goal To Nil in Final at Wembley.

STADIUM CROWDED.

WEMBLEY STADIUM, LONDON, April 23 (Canadian Press).—Cardiff City won the English Football Association Cup to-day from the Arsenal by one goal to nil. The goal was scored by Ferguson after twenty-eight minutes of play in the second half.

Both men and women made the pilgrimage from Wales for the final, and in some cases the women carried their babies. Many Welshmen wore their national headgear, and each shiny topper bore an inscription, "Wales for Ever." Most of the Cardiff City enthusiasts sported leeks in their buttonholes.

All roads in London to Wembley were jammed with traffic of every kind this morning, and one hour before the game started the stadium was filled to its capacity of more than 150,000 people.

When King George arrived thirty minutes before the start he received a great ovation and the band struck up "Tipperary." He shook hands with the members of both teams, and the Welsh visitors entertained him with community singing until the teams lined up.

Card For Speed Boat Races Has Been Completed

GOLD CUP EVENTS WILL BE STAGED ON AUGUST 6TH

Last Year Which Runabout Type of Hull Be Demanded.

TO LIFT RESTRICTIONS.

First Time Event Has Been Feature of Single Day's Regatta.

GREENWICH, Conn., April 23.—Indian Harbor Yacht club, of Greenwich, Conn., has announced its program for the regatta on August 6, which will be featured by the twenty-fifth race for the American Power Boat Association's championship of North America trophy, more popularly known as the Gold Cup. The headliner event will be run in three heats of 30 miles, at 2.55 p.m., 4.10 and 5.30. The race this year will be the last in which the runabout type of hull will be demanded by the rules, as next year the A.P.B.A. restrictions on hull construction will be lifted and hydroplanes or any other type of boat, except catamaran hulls or those having movable plates, planes or wings will be eligible. Since 1922 the runabout, with smooth underbody lines has been required, and in that time the speed with a 625 cubic inch engine has been raised from 40 miles an hour to 55 miles, and it is expected that the development of the 625 class engines will this pear permit a speed of almost 60 miles an hour.

Will Defend Cup

George H. Townsend, who last year won the trophy for the Indian Harbor Yacht club, will defend the cup against the challenges from many cities in the east and middle west. Caleb S. Bragg, who has piloted three gold cup winners, Richard F. Hoyt and Carl G. Fisher, of the Montauk Yacht Club, located on the eastern end of Long Island, will send four to six fast runabouts across Long Island Sound to challenge Connecticut's first champion of North America.

This will be the first time in the history of the gold cup that the event has been the feature of a single day's regatta. The program as announced by the Indian Harbor Yacht club is very complete and has events for many types of power boat. It starts with a series of outboard races, at 2 p.m., with a class for boys under 14 years of age and another event for adults. Half an hour later there will be a race for 26-foot stock runabouts, with engines under 650 cubic inches. The local race committee will have full power to determine what constitutes a stock boat. It reserves the right to demand of a manufacturer proof that more than 25 of the model to be raced have been produced and put in the hands of users. There will be cups for the winner of the event and also for every class winner. The rules contemplate the removal of cushions and windshields, but will not permit any changes in the runabout which will increase its power or speed.

Smaller Boats

This event will be followed by the first heat for the Gold cup at 2.55. Sandwiched in between the three heats of the championship race will be the two heats for the National trophy of the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers. This is limited to boats powered with engines of 151 cubic inches and under. These will be small hydroplanes, many powered with converted Ford engines. Last year this class was very popular and in the final regatta at San Diego, Spitfire V., owned by J. H. Rand, Jr., of Buffalo, with a Fronty-Ford engine, averaged 47.37 miles an hour.

"DON'T DIE ON THIRD."

That is the slogan of the Detroit players this year.

It means the Tigers will probably attempt more baserunning than any other club in the American League.

George Moriarty, years ago, as the star third sacker of the Detroit team, created the expression that now dominates the policy of the club.

T The same George Moriarty is now managing the team, on which he first gained fame as a player. That accounts for the "don't die on third" slogan.

What is more, the same Moriarty practiced what he preached. While not rated as a speed merchant, he was one of the best baserunners in the game. His specialty, however, was stealing home.

Over a period of two years, Moriarty on 17 different occasions essayed to score from third through his own personal efforts, the theft of home. He succeeded in 15 of the attempts, a record that is without parallel in baseball.

"I believe I would have gotten away with it both times I failed, had not the crowd by its yells, tipped it off that I was about to steal.

"Stealing home is no more difficult than pilfering any other base, if you pick the spot and get the break," is Moriarty's modest explanation.

AMATEUR CHAMP TO TAKE UP PEN

Bobby Jones Will Write Articles on Golf, is Claim.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 23 (Canadian Press).—Bobby Jones, British and United States open golf champion, has decided to write a series of articles on golf for a newspaper syndicate, the Atlanta Constitution said yesterday. The name of the syndicate and the amount he is to receive, however, were not given.

The paper said that his decision was prompted by the ruling of the executive committee of the United States Golf Association in New York that his writing would not affect his amateur standing in the game, provided he wrote his own articles.

News of his action caused some surprise, especially in circles where he has long been regarded as the best example of an amateur, competing purely for love of sport without the slightest indirect financial return. Hitherto, it is understood he has refused thousands of dollars for articles on golf.

WOOLER FARMERS ARE BUSY ON LAND

Fall Wheat Looks Good at Present—Gardeners Active.

WOOLER, April 23. — After the long winter and cold spring the farmers are at work, cultivating and seeding, where the land is light. William Ruttan is running a tractor on his farm.

The fall wheat is looking heavy and green. These warm days see the gardener out, spading the vegetable and flower gardens.

TENNIS NEWS

LONDON, April 23. — The lawn tennis championships at Wimbledon, scheduled to commence June 20, still maintain a prominent place among the principal sporting events in Britain.

A successful lawn tennis year is foreshadowed by the enormous number of applications for reserved seats received by the All-England Club, who have returned over $165,000 to unsuccessful applicants. All previous figures for application for tickets were broken.

The principal centre of interest will be in the men's events, there being no woman player possessing the outstanding merit of Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, who before her venture into professionalism, was the greatest attraction at the Wimbledon tournament.

Two old champions, W. T. Tilden and G. Patterson of Australia, will probably prove two of the most dangerous competitors to the brilliant French entrants, Borotra, Lacoste, Cochet and Brugnon, and the South African players, I. Raymond and J. Condon, who played so brilliantly last season.

Among the entries for the women's events is Miss Elizabeth Ryan, and the Spanish champion, Senorita d'Alvarez, who is one of the principal contenders for Suzanne Lenglen's mantle of popularity.

Miss Ryan and the senorita should provide some brilliant matches in their efforts to battle their way to the final and relieve Mrs. L. A. Godfree of her title.

An interesting feature of this season's tournament is the entry of a German team, for the first time since the war so that with all these champions there should be some of the finest grudge matches ever witnessed at a championship tourney.

NEW YORK, April 23 (Canadian Press). — It rained at Jersey City, Newark, Baltimore and Reading yesterday and in consequence the International League suspended for the day, but will be at it again to-day, weather permitting.

WARKWORTH, April 23.—Nothing definite was decided at a meeting held in the Community Hall Thursday evening of the Northumberland Baseball League, as only four places were represented, namely: Colborne, Hastings, Roseneath and Warkworth, and it is supposed that Brighton, Campbellford, Havelock and Frankford will also enter the League. Charles Davidson of Campbellford, who was first vice-president, was elected president, with power to choose secretary from his own town.

Another meeting is being held May 5th, and final arrangements will be made when a good representation of places mentioned will be present.

A meeting of the local baseball club is being held next Wednesday evening for the purpose of organizing a team.

TAKES OUT PLANS FOR GREAT ARENA

First Move Towards Making U. S. Capital Sport Centre.

(By William J. McEvoy, United Press Staff Correspondent).

WASHINGTON, April 23. — As the first move toward making Washington the sports centre of the nation as well as its capital, John Blick, "Washington's ice man," has announced plans for construction of a mammoth auditorium here where every branch of the sporting industry may operate.

Blick says his building will compare favorably with Tex Rickard's new Madison Square Garden in New York, containing 19,600 square feet of floor space and accommodating 10,000 persons. He plans to reconstruct and enlarge an existing auditorium. The building will be ready for occupancy October 15.

In addition to providing a centre for every branch of sport, the building will give the capital awaited form of recreation—indoor ice skating. Blick is now understood to be negotiating with Rickard to get Washington a franchise in the same hockey league in which the New York Garden team plays.

The building will be available for track meets, a facility which has been sadly lacking here for three years; basketball games, tennis, wrestling and billiard matches, boxing exhibitions and social functions. With the completion of the building it is also probable the capital will make a bid for one of the national conventions. The auditorium will be provided with seats on the main floor and balcony and will be heated and cooled by special equipment.

Blick is striving hard to put Washington on the sporting map. He dabbles in sporting events as a sideline to his ice business, but some of his friends say he gives the greater part of his time to promotion of sports and recreation. Within a short period of years his ice business has grown from three wagons to a good-sized fleet. His friends say his bank account is nearing the million mark. He operates two bowling and billiard establishments, one of which is said to be the largest in town.

Bowling and billiard facilities will be provided in the new building.

Inside Sporting Dope

By A Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

So far as local sport goes this week has been a blank, Mac. Mister Louie Yeotes sprung the only sensation when he dug up a Indian lad what was reported to have stepped from Lakefield to this fair city in 39 mins. A imagination like that oughta to be worth something if used right, seeing that the time claimed woulda busted the world's record worse than Major Segrave smashed all the motor marks a coupla weeks ago. If this bird can run from Lakefield inside the hr. with his street clothes on he's worth considering.

The Boston marathon was a bit disappointing, Mister Sporting Editor, to us Canadians which expected Mister Johnny Miles to repeat, but you gotta hand it to this Mister Demar, the galloping printer. Any 38-year-older which can lead home a field like that deserves all the bouquets that can be give out. Birds like Mister Demar and Mister Ty Cobb make that youth must be served gag sound as silly as some of Miss Aggie MacPhail's views.

Since my last, Mac, they ain't much new in the baseball situation, except that the reports from Belleville kinda go to show that Mister Peeney Mills and his pals has been winter-killed. They have just naturally curled up and died down there, and local fans will hafta pass up the pleasure of hearing Mister Alan Meagher tell the umpire how the game should be played. Instead of Belleville there may be a Bowmanville team in this loop. They'll be welcome.

There was a scout here the other day, Mister Sporting Editor, but he was interested more in highballs than baseballs. I mean Mister McClenaghan, 1 of the big 3 of the Liquor Control Board, who visited with us on Thurs., and incidentally, made arrangements for locating 1 of Mister Ferguson's chain stores here. I just mention this in passing so the customers will lay off bothering me about when and where.

What a tough time this Mister Billy Hewitt has, Mac. Here he just gets back from a hard trip to Vancouver with the Grads and now they hafta break the news to him that next year he has to take the Canadian hockey team over to the Olympic Games. What do you know about that? What for do they pile all the work on the shoulders of 1 guy? Mister Hewitt is a regular feller, and it's a raw deal to free him to go over there to Europe for a month or 2 when if he had his own way he'd much rather stick right there in The Star office and work every day. If they can see clear to letting him off this time, I can name a bird what is willing to sacrifice himself and take Mister Hewitt's place as Olympic manager. When it's Canada against the world it ain't no time for shirkers.

Well, Mac, I gotta write a letter to some school children yet, so this will hafta be all until my next.

Sportfully yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

—Dear Sir: In regard to the controversy in connection with the time made by Whetung in a run from Lakefield to Peterborough I might say that I simply took the boy's word that he made it in this time, and while I doubted if it would be possible I asked him to run an exhibition race on Wednesday of this week to prove to him that his time was wrong.

I might also add that I have taken him under my wing and will give him proper training facilities, and if he shows any promise he will be heard from in the future.

—Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

LOUIS YEOTES.

OBITUARY.

CLIFFORD KEMP.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., April 23. — (Canadian Press). — Clifford Kemp, well known barrister and ex-Mayor of Woodstock, was found dead in his home this morning.

Mr. Kemp had lived in Woodstock for many years, and took great interest in municipal matters, serving on the City Council Board for some fourteen years.

COOPER H. SMYTH.

The death occurred yesterday at noon after a short illness, of Cooper H. Smyth. The deceased was 38 years of age. He moved to this city with the family twenty-one years ago. He had been an employee of the C.N.T. Co. He leaves to mourn his loss hisfather, Mr. Jonathan Smythe, of 582 Bolivar street, and three brothers, Roy of Oklahoma City, Delbert of Cavan, Harold of North Monaghan.

Funeral will be private from Comstock's undertaking parlors, George street, to the Little Lake cemetery, at 2 o'clock on Monday. The Rev. Mr. Allan, of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, will officiate.

ROBT. J. LYLE.

Mr. Robert J. Lyle, of New York, president of the Credit Clearing House, a national audit guaging institution, has been a frequent visitor to Peterborough, but unknown there save to a few old friends who knew that he had been born and grew to young manhood in Peterborough before he went to the United States. Some ten years ago Mr. Lyle retired from the active leadership of the institution he had built up to become president emeritus.

To-day his funeral was held and his body laid in the little cemetery in Kinmount, where his family had settled some thirty years ago. The casket was covered with beautiful flower offerings of American friends from New York and Chicago.

In Mr. Lyle's retirement from active business life he has resided in Toronto, where he died suddenly on Wednesday morning of heart failure.

During his residence in Toronto, the deceased has deeply interested himself in the development of ideas for the betterment of traction transportation, the most outstanding of which is the Lyle trolley shoe, which is being extensively used by many representative Canadian and American lines.

The romance of Mr. Lyle's life began about 1887 when he left Peterborough to go to Kansas City, where the first movement of the National Credit Exchange system was developed. From a small beginning the system grew and spread itself all over the country, with branch offices in every great merchandising centre.

The basic idea was co-operation among the merchandising houses, but the genius of Mr. Lyle in devising and elaborating a practical system of interchanging credit information led about 1898 to the foundation of the Credit Clearing House Corporation, now the greatest institution of its class in the world, with a capital strength of $6,000,000.

Thus Mr. Lyle's life adds another interesting chapter to the long story of Canada's contribution to the spirit of Ameerican progressiveness that gives them welcome and place.

IN MEMORIAM.

PAMMETT—In loving memory of a dear husband and loving father, who passed away April 23, 1924:

Happy were the years we spent together,
Lonely are our hearts to-day,
For the one we loved so dearly
Has foreyer passed away.
Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Years of sorrow often flow,
Memory keeps him ever near us
Though he died three years ago.
—Inserted by wife and children.

IN MEMORIAM.

In ever loving memory of our dear Mother, Mrs. George Crouter, who departed this life April 24, 1917.

What would we give her hand to clasp,
Her patient face to see;
To hear her voice, to see her smile,
As in the days that use to be.
But some sweet day we'll meet again
Beyond the toil and strife,
And clasp each other's hand once more
In Heaven, that happy life.
—Inserted by her two daughters, Pearl and Rose.

IN MEMORIAM.

In memory of my dear father Wm. Gummow, who passed away April 23, 1926:

April brings sad memories
Of a loved one gone to rest,
Who will always be remembered
By those who loved him best.
I often think of you, dear father,
No eyes may see me weep,
But many silent tears are shed
When others are asleep.
Friends may think I have forgotten
When at least they see me smile,
But they little know the heartache
That a smile hides all the while.
May the soft breeze blow softly
On that grave not far away,
Where they laid my dear father
Just one year ago to-day.
But it comforts me to know he'll be there to greet me
When I, too, will be called to go
To be with Jesus, where love reigns ever more,
And friends do not depart.
—Sadly missed by a loving daughter, Mrs. Thomas J. Buck, Norwood.

ADAMS—GENTLE.

—OMEMEE, April 23. — A wedding of much interest to Omemee citizens took place in St. Edmund's Anglican church, Toronto, on Thursday, April 14th, at 2.30 o'clock, when Edith Florence, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Gentle, was united in marriage to Henry Carlton, only son of Mr. and Mrs. George Adams of Lindsay, formerly of Omemee, Rev. C. A. Moulton officiating. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a French gown of ivory crepe romaine, trimmed with cut crystal beads, and silk knit fringe, with veil of rose point lace and overdrape of tulle arranged in cap effect, with coronet of orange blossoms and seed pearls. Her flowers were a shower of Ophelia roses, lily of the valley and baby's breath. Miss Nellie Hutchins, as bridesmaid, wore a pretty gown of Nile Green georgette, tiered effect, with large picture hat of black tulle and blonde shoes with stockings to match. Her bouquet was of Lady Russell roses.

Mr. Aubrey Adams, of Peterboro, cousin of the groom, attended the groom. The groom's gift to the bride was an aquamarine dinner ring in white gold setting; to the bridesmaid a necklace of pearls; and to the groomsman a pearl dress set, and to the ushers a set of lacquered gold cuff links, etched in Japanese design.

During the signing of the register, Mr. Alfred Heather sang, "Oh, Promise Me." Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 1197 Ossington avenue.

—Mr. and Mrs. Adams left for a short honeymoon, and on their return will reside at 225 Grand ave., London, Ont.

GRIFFIN—MILLS

TORONTO, April 23—A very pretty wedding took place on April 12th in the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Mills, Glenlake Ave., Toronto, when their only daughter, Myrtle Josephine, was united in marriage to Mr. William Kenneth Griffin, of Bobcaygeon, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Griffin, of Omemee. Rev. C. V. McLean of High Park United Church, officiated.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a gown of powder blue georgette, with hat to match, and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and lily of the valley. The wedding music was played by the bride's cousin, Miss Lenore Jamieson, of Omemee, and Mr. Nelson Grandy, also a cousin, sang during the signing of the register.

After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served.

The bride's travelling costume was a rose georgette gown, sport coat and hat to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Griffin will reside at Bobcaygeon.

McCRACKEN-ALLEN.

The wedding took place on April 15th, of Thurza May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Allen of Smith Township, and Chester McCracken, son of Mr. and Mrs. James McCracken of Warsaw. The ceremony, which was solemnized at the George street church parsonage, was performed by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Todd.

The bride, who was unattended, wore a lovely dress of Venetian blue georgette, trimmed with gold embroidery, and hat to match. She wore grey shoes and stockings and a navy coat trimmed with grey fur.

Mr. and Mrs. McCracken will reside in Warsaw.

SPILSBURY-NEILL.

A pretty Easter wedding took place at 6 p.m., Saturday, April 16, at the home of Mrs. E. H. Neill, 391 Berkeley street, Toronto, when her youngest daughter, Blanche Victoria, became the bride of Mr. Vernon Spilsbury, of Peterborough.

The Rev. A. L. Richards, B.A., of Sherbourne United Church, officiated. The bride entered the drawing room, which was tastefully decorated with spring flowers, Easter lilies, ferns and palms, on the arm of her brother, Mr. Walter C. Neill, to the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. Maybee, of Oshawa, sister of the groom. She looked charming in her gown of peach silk crepe romaine, carrying a shower bouquet of ophelia roses and lily of the valley.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Beryl Cheyne of Peterboro, gowned in reseda green crepe, and carrying a shower bouquet of roses.

After the ceremony luncheon was served in the dining room to about thirty guests.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. McCamus of Manilla; Mrs. W. J. Rome of Peterboro; Mr. and Mrs. Percy Maybee of Oshawa, and Miss Cheyne of Peterboro.

The happy couple left amid showers of confetti and best wishes, on a short honeymoon, by motor. On their return they will reside in their new home, on King George Street, Peterboro.

IF YOU CANNOT EAT
and enjoy your meals, you can be sure that the activities of your stomach are below normal. The truth is that
YOUR STOMACH NEEDS STRENGTH
and its only means of securing that strength is through the nerves that feed it. A weak stomach has weak nerves. Weak nerves are often the result of spinal derangements which may have resulted from a fall, strain or from sitting in an unnatural position. This derangement can be corrected by CHIROPRATIC SPINAL ADJUSTMENTS
and normal nerve force will be restored to the tissues of the stomach. When this is accomplished, your stomach will be capable of digesting food and you will be able to enjoy your meals as a normal person should.

VIRTUE OF BLOOD SACRIFICE TOLD AT VETERANS' SERVICE

George Street Church Crowded On Anniversary of Ypres Day.

BIG PARADE.

"Almost All Things Are By the Law Purged With Blood."

Peterborough veterans of the Great War, with militia units and three bands, yesterday paraded to George Street United Church. There were about 150 war veterans in the ranks, led by President C. H. Ackerman of the Canadian Legion; a detachment of the 57th Regiment under Lt. Col Gordon Hall, and the Machine Gun Corps under Major Hurrell Dodds. Mayor Holloway, W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., and Colonel J. W. Miller were in the ranks.

The parade was the most impressive in size that has marked the annual Church Parade, though the ranks of the veterans lost in picturesqueness because for the first time the wearing of uniforms was discarded. Much of the khaki that was worn nine years ago is now moth-eaten and shabby, and many of the serges are out-grown.

Following the usual short ceremony at the Cenotaph, the column marched by Aylmer, Charlotte and George to the Church, music being furnished in turn by the Band of the Peterborough Rangers, the Caledonian Pipe Band, and the Salvation Army Band. The ex-service men and militia filled the body of the Church, and overflowed into the side pews.

It was an impressive sermon that Rev. J. E. Todd preached. Without being militaristic, it was yet not pacifist, and it pointed the lesson of the greatest blood-sacrifice through the event which these men were commemorating. At each side of the rostrum stood a war-accoutred soldier, resting on reversed rifle. Leaning against the pulpit was the Legion flag.

The Sermon

The minister took his text from the ninth chapter of Hebrews and the twenty-second verse, "And almost all things are by the law purged with blood; and without shedding of blood is no remission."

In opening he extended a welcome to the members of the Canadian Legion and all other units present. He spoke of those who gave their lives on the battlefield and in whose memory this service was held, and he hoped that everyone present would be a better man because of those who made the sacrifice. 'We think of that occasion when the Canadians stood their first test of fire which gave them great glory throughout the world; but it was with a great price," said Mr. Todd.

"Men who have made a thorough study of the Bible have come upon passages which they found rather difficult to explain, and the text is one of these. We say to ourselves the words of the text may be true, for in former times animals were given as a sacrifice and then in modern times we have the great sacrifice that our Lord made.

Blood and life were inseparable in the minds of primitive men for they understood that where there was no blood there was no life and soul, and to-day the same thing is true."

Our laws to-day have come to their present high status through the shedding of blood and the laying down of life, the speaker continued. We are a long way off from the time man was a law unto himself and the change has only come about through a great deal of tribulation. We have only to look to Western Canada before the Royal Northwest Mounted Police force was formed. The country was known as the wild and woolly west and man was a law unto himself. Then came the police, strong, sturdy and stalwart fellows who were up against an almost impossible situation but they carried through the law subduing the lawless and kept to their slogan: "We must get our man." Many were shot down in ambush and by other means but the law emerged. If this is true in Canada how much more so it is true the world over?

"Think of the liberty of the human race and the great price that has been paid for liberty of expression, liberty of speech and liberty of living a life that is considered to be the best of humanity. Autocracy has never held up the white flag but has lost its strength through loss of life and blood. George Washington resisted the hand of oppression, although it is hard for we people of the British Empire to think, but it is true, and today we have the great United States of America. Slavery was made illegal, but not before many hard-fought battles took place and the blood of man was poured out for the cause.

"In our own day we have seen men say farewell and we have heard the roar of guns reverberating around the earth. What for? For glory, power, and extension of territory? God forbid; but in order that national liberty could be vindicated.

Our religious life has been bought with a great price ever since the

Fishing Trip Called Off When Police Seize Booze

NEW YORK, April 25 (United Press).—Because 200 fishermen would require 4,600 bottles of home brew beer, detectives called off the scheduled fishing trip of the All-American Fishing Club.

Scenting that the trip would be unusually wet, detectives swooped down upon the club before the outing would be in underway.

Michael Reomo, who was packing the refreshments, was taken to Federal Court in Brooklyn and charged with violation of the Volstead Act.

HOLD ANNUAL CHURCH PARADE

Oddfellows Attend Sunday Evening Services at St. James' Church.

EXTENDED WELCOME.

The annniversary parade of the Oddfellows was held on Sunday evening to St. James' Church, at the corner of Romaine and Aylmer streets. One hundred and fifty members of the Oddfellows, and sixty of the Rebekah Lodge attneded the service, the Oddfellows Lodge marching to the church from their rooms on George street, led by Colonel Miller.

Rev. Mr. Richardson, the pastor, chose "Religion," as his text, and told how hard it was to please everyone with one definition of this subject. Some people would define religion as an intellectual acceptance of certain creeds, while another body of persons would think of it as a certain feeling held by some towards God and the unseen world; and still others would consider religion as the life of God in the souls of men. "While each of these hold a measure of truth, yet I believe that the version of James in regard to this subject, is incomparable," said Mr. Richardson. In this definition it is stated that pure religion was to visit the homes of the fatherless and aid widows in affliction, and to keep oneself clean and spotless from the world.

This indicates that religion means (1) Service to God and to fellow men; (2) A good character; (3) To do good to others; and to be good yourself.

In speaking about service to others, Mr. Richardson referred to Jesus, who sacrificed everything for His people. When Christ was preaching amongst them He would tell them the story of the "Good Samaritan" to illustrate the meaning of pure religion and service to fellow men.

"Men of such type as Booth or Wesley, who followed in the footsteps of our Lord, will be remembered long after such men as Carnegie is forgotten for the former gave service to mankind that is to be recognized forever, and this service comes to persons in every walk of life," said the minister. He then went on to say that greater service to others can not be found as in the Oddfellows organization, and they indicate this by aiding the

BUS SERVICE MAY BE ENDED

Mayor Holloway Says His Statement Was Not Definite.

HIS OPINION.

In speaking to The Examiner today the Mayor remarked that his statement, regarding the suspension of bus service, at the Telephone banquet on Friday night was not definite; and was merely what he himself surmised would happen if a profit was not shown in thirty days after their first run. "I really said this in the hope that the public would use the busses so as to repay the company for the sacrifice they are making for us," said the Mayor, "because the busses could lie idle in the barns and still collect ninety-six dollars a day owing to the contract that they have with the Hydro."

The Gotfredson Company are not bound to keep running, and the Mayor thought that it would be only sensible if they did discontinue if no profit was shown, and that is why he urges everyone to use them whenever possible, so as to keep transportation in the city.

HYDRO SAYS POWER COSTS $28.12 WHOLESALE AND IT SELLS AT BARGAIN --$19.65 RETAIL

Common Honesty Demands That Local Commission Refuse To Throw Sand in the Eyes of the People Who Elected It.

PEOPLE DECEIVED FOR YEARS, SAYS HALL.

The report of the Local Utilities Commisison which appeared in last Friday's issue of The Examiner is apparently made to becloud the real issue and to lead the people to believe that "power at cost" to our manufacturers is extremely low. It does, however, admit that under the new rates, our manufacturers will be compelled to pay at least $4.00 per horse-power more than they have been paying heretofore.

The wholesale cost of power to this city now stands at $28.12 per horse-power. If this power is now being sold to manufacturers at only $19.65 per horse-power by retail after paying a fair share of the cost of distribution, which on the average exceeds $15.00 per horse-power, then domestic and commercial light consumers are being most unfairly treated and the increase in rates to them is unfair and unjust.

Common honesty of the common kind, is all that the taxpayers want and demand from the members of the Local Commission. They do not want them to be tools of the Hydro Commission and do its bidding. The Local Commission is elected by the ratepayers and not by the Hydro Commission. The Local Commission should, therefore, take the people into its confidence and tell the truth before being forced to do so.

Let me illustrate. In the Hydro Report for 1921 no less a sum than $40,656.39 was charged up as a liability against this city; (See page 175); and that liability to the Hydro was concealed from our City Council and the taxpayers of our city and was not disclosed as a liability in the Local Commission's financial statements for the year 1921; (Hydro Report, 1921, page 358); and moreover tens of thousands of dollars a year were charged up to and paid by the Local Commission since then and not disclosed to the City Council till January of 1926.

When, therefore, our Local Commission states that power under the new rates for March, 1927, is $19.65 per horse-power per annum retail, while the wholesale cost of power is $28.12 per annum, it is necessary to look for the hand of the juggler. Usually it moves so quickly it is not seen. There are many people who believe that the tongue was given to man to conceal his thoughts and not express them.

A careful examination of the Hydro Commission Reports clearly shows to the impartial observer that the Province of Ontario has created within itself a GIANT OCTOPUS controlling $270,000,000.00, and that Local Utilities Commissions may be found which will conceal for years enormous bills the people they serve must pay. Please do not unduly blame them. They are under a spell. They are subservient to even the touch of its remotest tentacle. Please do not join their band unless you call the tune.

"Power at Cost," says the Hydro Commission. Power by retail $19.65 per h.p. per annum. Power by wholesale $28.12 per horse-power per annum. Bargains every day, says the pious one who professes to sell below cost—away below—fifty per cent below. A simple story tells the tale:

Boss says: "John, have you larded the butter?" Answer: "Yes, Sir." "John, have you floured the ginger?" Answer: "Yes, Sir." "John, have you sanded the sugar?" Answer: "Yes, Sir." "Then you may come into prayers."

No matter what it costs the retailer, our syndicate can save this city $40,000.00 per year for 21 years, if this city can obtain the right to buy power on its own account. The Octopus says "No." The People say "Yes." What does Mr. W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P. say? "I will introduce the City Council and others." Good start. He is facing in the right direction. KEEP HIM GOING.

BREEZY TALK ON THE WEST TO ROTARIANS

Rev. H. R. Trumpour Tells Local Club What Coast Wants.

CANADA'S NEEDS.

Must Learn To Build Up the Whole Rather Than a Part.

Although President A. L. Killaly and a delegation of a dozen members of the local club were today attending the District Conference at Jamestown, N.Y., there was a goodly attendance to keep the home fires burning at Rotary's weekly luncheon at the Empress Hotel, addressed by Rev. H. R. Trumpour, Professor in the Anglican Theological College at Vancouver and formerly rector of All Saint's Church.

Rev. Mr. Trumpour, choosing as his subject, "What I Learned by Going West," gave a breezy and interesting talk in which he called attention to some of the things in which Westerners were interested and stressed the desirability of Canadians working together and appreciating each other's viewpoints.

British Columbia desired among other things, he declared, a restricted Oriental immigration, protection in the form of coast defence, and an equalization of freight rates. Easterners, he said, did not realize how the coast was affected by Oriental immigration. They saw but an occasional Oriental and they could not appreciate the situation on the coast, where White market gardeners were being driven out of business by Oriental truck farmers.

Rev. Mr. Trumpour emphasized the bigness of Canada, the variety of its products and climate, and the necessity of confidence and vision. It was necessary for Canadians to be big in every way and to seek to build up the whole rather than a part. The West could not exist without the East; the East could not get along without the West. "When we ask for something that you don't think we should have," he remarked, "just remember that if you lived in the West you would ask for these very same things."

He had found human nature very much the same all over Canada and had been impressed by the fact that the average man was always a pretty decent chap, West or East.

Past President Fred L. Roy, who presided at to-day's luncheon, expressed the thanks of the club to the speaker.

Rotarian Jerry McClelland called attention to the Community Dance on Wednesday evening under Rotary auspices to mark the opening of the new Canadian National freight sheds.

WARSHIPS' FIRE SILENCES FORT ON RIVER BANK

British Vessels Exchange Shots With Batteries Near Chinkiang.

COMMUNISTS CAUGHT.

Twenty Executed Following Renewal of Activities Among Soldiers.

SHANGHAI, April 25 (Canadian Press). — Three British warships, "Mantis," "Keppel," and "Wolsey," engaged in an exchange of shots with Chinese batteries on the south bank of the Yangtse near Chinkiang yesterday. The warships let loose a heavy bombardment after they had been fired on and soon silenced the Chinese attack.

General Sun Chuang Fang, one of the Northern commanders, it is learned, has offered to surrender to General Chiang Kaishek. Sun is represented as having stated that his troops are tired and hungry.

Chiang's soldiers have rounded up another batch of Radicals. Headquarters of the Moderate Kuomintang announced to-day that the Communists at Hankow have raised huge sums of money from various banks on the pretext of circulating notes issued by the Central Bank, but in reality to finance Communist propaganda, especially in the Shanghai area. It was also announced that Sun Ping Wen, a notorious Canton Communist, was executed at Lungwha.

Communists Executed.

LONDON, April 25. — (United Press).—Twenty Radicals, including two young girls who were with them, have been executed following, the renewal of Communistic activities in Canton, according to the Hong Kong correspondent of the Daily Express.

Attempts to overthrow the Government by creating disorder among the troops were preceded by the circulation of quantities of seditious literature. An attempt by the Radical element to cause a general strike was unsuccessful, due to the vigilance of the authorities.

Vessels Fired On.

LONDON, April 25 (United Press). —Chinese troops fired on the U. S. S. "Peary" and on two British warships in the Yangtse River to-day, an Admiralty communique announced.

The "Peary was fired on from Futung Bluff near Kiukiang, which has been a trouble centre for many weeks.

New Alignment.

LONDON, April 25 (United Press). —China seemed headed to-day toward a new grouping of forces, with the Moderate Nationalists under General Chiang Kai Shek allied with Marshal Chang Tso Lin, the Northern war lord, and the Northern general, Sun Chuang-Fang, according to reports from Asiatic correspondents of London newspapers.

Such a realignment was advocated by anti-Communist forces in China as a result of the announcement of the new Japanese Premier, General Tanaka, that Communism will not be permitted in China, the Tokio Foreign Office has been informed, the Daily Mail's correspondent in the Japanese capital cabled.

Meanwhile the Daily Telegraph's Peking correspondent reported a movement to induce Chang Tso-Lin officially to take over the Northern Government, instead of continuing to remain the power behind the throne in Peking.

An alliance of Moderate Nationalists and Northerners against the Hankow Northern Nationalist Radical group has been considered likely for some time in London diplomatic circles.

The Westminster Gazette said it understood Great Britain would send more troops to augment its already sizable army in China.

500 MEMBERS NOW ON ROLLS

Horticultural Society Reports Large Increase in Recent Weeks.

SHOWS PLANNED.

A meeting of the Horticultural Society was held on Friday night in the Chamber of Commerce. S. E. Harris' reported satisfactory results in the recent campaign and remarked that the membership had increased to five hundred. A committee was appointed to take charge of a gladiolus show in some shop window on George Street in August. The location of this store has not been decided on as yet.

Charles Lacheur told the members that he had interviewed R. Denne in regard to the flower show that is to be held at the Peterboro Exhibition this fall. The same committee that was appointed to take charge of the gladiolus exhibit will also take this display in charge.

In speaking to Mr. Lacheur, Mr. Denne told him that the Exhibition would welcome a flower show, as it was an exhibit that was always an added feature to any fair. The members of the committee in charge of these two exhibits are: W. H. Young, J. Grierson, H. Carter, A. Brown, A. E. Prest, G. Land, and W. Derry.

Board Walk Paraders Get Genuine Thriller

LONG BEACH, N.Y., April 25 (United Press).—Several hundred paraders on the board walk witnessed a genuine rum-running thriller on Sunday when a coast-guard patrol boat captured a rum runner less than one hundred yards from shore.

Quite as in the movies, the one-pounders of the patrol boat fired four shots across the bow of the "rummy."

Seeing capture inevitable, the rum boat's crew of three leaped into a dory, threw several cases of liquor into it and pulled ashore.

Unfortunately for the men, Detective Thomas Moore was waiting for them when they landed. Aided by several citizens, the officer captured the alleged rum-runners and hurried them away to the police station.

PRIEST KILLED WHEN CAUGHT DURING BATTLE

Execution of Catholic Clergyman Reported By Government.

OTHERS SOUGHT.

Church Authorities Deny Taking Any Share in Rebellious Activities.

MEXICO CITY, April 25 (Canadian Press).—Having deported eight Mexican archbishops and bishops and executed a Roman Catholic priest on the charge that they were involved in a revolutionary movement, the government was engaged today in seeking out other Catholic priests alleged to be implicated in an anti-government campaign. Despite vehement denials by the Mexican Catholic authorities of all connection with the rebellion, the Government places the responsibility for outbreaks on the Catholic Episcopate, priests, and some Catholic laymen.

An official account of the execution of the priest at Rio Del Guale, in the State of Jalisco, says he was captured with others in an engagement against government troops. He was killed, according to the Government because he was involved with another priest in the organization of the rebellious movement.

In well informed quarters, it is believed that only five Catholic prelates now remain in the country, among them Archbishop Orozco C. Jimines, of Guadalajara, who is said to be in hiding in Jalisco.

THE WEATHER

For several nights now the temperature has been down to 25 degrees with quite thick ice. This morning by way of variation there was a covering of white—not snow in its usual form, but little round pellets of frozen moisture, properly known as "globules." Highest temperature yesterday 45 degrees. West of the great lakes the weather has become warm again with showers in some places, and the same conditions will soon prevail here.—W. P.

MRS. MAE HILL IS CONVICTED; APPEALS CASE

Allowed Out On Bail Pending Hearing Of Appeal From Judgment.

FINE IMPOSED.

Magistrate Reaches Conclusion That Newell Got Liquor at Her House.

Mrs. Mae Hill was found guilty this morning by His Worship Magistrate O. A. Langley of selling liquor to Thomas Newell of Norwood on Sunday, March 27, and fined $500 and costs, with one month's imprisonment, and in default of paying the fine, three months' imprisonment. Mrs. Hill, though her lawyer, the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., immediately filed notice of appeal against the judgment of His Worship and was let go on $1,000 bail.

The summing up by the counsel took place in the Police Court this morning. Mr. Gordon contended that as the writ was not issued until April 6 and the Government Control law was given royal assent on April 5, conviction under the first act could not be made as there was a certain modification in the act and the right to prosecute became void when the royal assent was given.

Mr. Gordon reviewed the evidence of Thomas Newell, where he said he had broken the O.T.A. perhaps thirty or forty times, and said a man with such a reputation was unfit to be relied upon in a case of this kind. Mr. Gordon also objected to the rebuttal evidence which the Crown submitted and he said it should be ruled out as it was evidence of a collateral fact, and not related to the main issue before the court.

G. W. Hatton, K.C., who represented the Crown, said that there was no doubt whatever as to Newell going to the Hill home at about 4 p.m. on Sunday, March 27, and securing liquor. He got the bottle there although these people may not have seen him taking it. He submitted that the evidence of the three women given in rebuttal should be taken, as the whole evidence was simply to the effect that Newell left the house after the defence witnesses.

His Worship, in giving judgment, said: "Notwithstanding the fact that Newell denied securing liquor at the home of Mrs. Hill, on Monday, Mar. 28, nevertheless I have come to the conclusion that he did purchase the liquor and that he did not leave the house when the defence witnesses did. Whether Newell was an accomplice in this case is a question of law and I believe on his own testimony there should be a conviction, for I find in his own evidence that it was intoxicating liquor. Taking the evidence of the three women I think they corroborate Newell's story, and I believe he has made a clean breast of it and told everything he knew about this case."

HOLDS THAT ACTION MIGHT CAUSE HIS DOWNFALL WITH THE PARTY

Observers Declare Foreign Governments Cannot Put Faith in Him.

GAINS NORTHWARD.

Military Situation Relegates Finances and Politics Into Background.

SHANGHAI, April 25. — General Chiang Kai-shek, commander of the Southern forces who recently broke with the Cantonese Government at Hankow, has not yet succeeded in forming a government of his own at Nanking.

Returned students from America affiliated with the Kuomintang here, declare that Chiang Kai-shek will agree to the five powers' terms in regard to the Nanking outrages, but experienced foreign observers in Shanghai declare that the foreign Governments cannot put faith in him even if he does accept.

Assumption of responsibility to the foreign powers, added to his internal difficulties, might cause his downfall and the repudiation of non-compliance with his promises. His very life is unsafe and he is constantly surrounded by a bodyguard. Moreover, he is not yet assured of pay for his troops or for the officials who have not yet been appointed or for employes not yet hired.

Having come to Shanghai with the intention of retaking the international settlement as the British concession was taken at Hankow, General Chiang Kais-heek found a foreign army ready to shoot. He complained bitterly to foreign newspaper correspondents, but quickly realizing the uselessness of this he turned his attention against the Communists.

Advance Into Honan.

SHANGHAI, April 25 (Canadian Press).—The military situation is the all-important one at the present moment, finances and politics being relegated to the background.

After the issuance of a mandate by the Hankow Government that hereafter military affairs would be under control of a committee, General Tang Sun Tse, whose dismissal the mandate involves, rebelled, he ordered an army of five columns to advance into Honan along the Hankow-Peking railway to attack Marshal Chang Tso Lin's forces. It is reported that Tang is under the orders of General Chiang Kai Shek, commander-in-chief of the Moderate Nationalist (Cantonese) forces.

It is evident that Marshal Chang, who controls the Peking Government, is taking Tang seriously and he has ordered General Han Ling Tsung, Manchurian, commander, to Honan with a large force to repel Tang.

A news agency despatch from Tsian-Fu says that General Kuh Yao, commander of the 67th Shantung division, has surrendered to Chiang Kai Shek. Chang Kuh Yao's troops are now in Anhwei Province. General Chiang promises to protect them.

The situation between Chinkiang and Yangchow is easing.

General Chiang has been sending forces to Chinkiang for some days, in preparation for an advance across the river to Yangchow.

May Accept Offer.

Chinese sources are confident that a deal will soon be consummated whereby General Sun Chuan Fang, one of the northern commanders, and original defender of Shanghai, may possibly accept General Chiang's recent offer to make him north-eastern defence commissioner for the Cantonese.

From Nanking comes word that Pukow, held by the Northerners, has been fairly riddled by shells from the guns of the Southerners stationed at Nanking in the last few days. Pukow has been under constant fire for a long time, and probably now that military movements against the Northerners have been resumed, energetic steps will be taken to force, if possible, Pukow's surrender.

General Liu Chi, the representative of General Feng Yu Hsiang and acting chief of the military committee at Hankow, is said to have been imprisoned in an effort to force Feng's decision with reference to his adherence to the Hankow government.

Raise Funds.

Shanghai Chinese papers announce that the committee, formed to take over the Kuomintang finances, has already raised 4,000,000 taels and is negotiating for 20,000,000 more. The committee includes K. P. Chen, head of the Chinese Bankers' Association of Shanghai, and a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. He and his colleagues are now at Nanking drafting plans for a government bank, rehabilitation of the finances of Chekiang and Kiangsu provinces and unification of tax collections in the rich eastern provinces.

General Chow, commander of the 26th National Army, has issued a proclamation that no more strikes will be tolerated. He points out that Chinese workers should remember that their position differs from European and American workers and that strikes only hinder the Nationalist revolution by making necessary to import of foreign goods, while China's factories are closed down.

Chinese advices from Canton say that General Li Chi-Sun, Nationalist commander, has seized the revenue bureaux of Kwantung Province and threatened to cut off Canton from both Nanking and Hankow. Canton is virtually under martial law because of the drive against the Radicals.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

MY LITTLE LOG CABIN

My little log cabin with roses around it,
No gold ever filled it, and fame never found it;
For fame took the highroad and fortune the valley,
And left me alone with my house and my Sally.
So here on the hillside we live with our roses,
But never as sadly as someone supposes;
For peace and contentment and beauty have found it,
My little log cabin with roses around it.

Not many who near it, not many who know it;
Few travel the hill or the river below it;
But, oh, how the birds and the roses remember!—
The autumn brings snow, and the snow brings December,
December brings April, and April the Maytime,
The Maytime, the Junetime, the glad time, the gay time,
And summer brings song, for the wildbirds have found it,
My little log cabin with roses around it.

No, fame never found it, nor fortune, nor title;
But roses are lovely, and music is vital;
Though travelers pass it, not caring, not telling,
One traveller entered, and made it his dwelling.
For fame took the highroad and fortune the valley,
But love entered in with the coming of Sally—
Yes, love found my cabin, and blessed it, and crowned it,
My little log cabin with roses around it.

Keeps Dogs From Pound Then He Gets Arrested

MANAYUNK, Pa., April 25. — Because he played the role of Good Samaritan to roving, unlicensed dogs, Frank Cronin, an ice man, is under $300 bail to keep the peace. Cronin was delivering ice in the neighborhood selected by Jesse Newman, the dog catcher, for his operations. Cronin saw Newman and two police guards approaching and began pelting all the dogs in sight with bits of ice, making them scurry to safety. Then he turned his bombardment upon the officers, who promptly brought about his arrest.

FIRE DESTROYS B RIDGENORTH FARM BUILDINGS

Allan B. Mann Suffers Heavy Loss in Saturday Night Blaze.

NEIGHBORS AID.

Caused By Straw Becoming Ignited From Backfiring of Tractor.

The worst farm fire recorded in Central Ontario destroyed the model farm of Allan B. Mann, outside of Bridgenorth, on Saturday night. The fire, gaining rapid headway from the start, because there was no means of fire protection whatsoever, wiped out all the buildings, which were numerous, for the Mann farm was considered one of the best in Ontario.

The fire was caused by the backfiring of a tractor inside the barn, so that sparks flew back into the straw stack, and this being dry, immediately burst into a big blaze. Mr. Mann, who was running the tractor, made an effort to pull the burning straw away from the stack but was badly burned, so in an effort to save the rest of the buildings he rushed to the house and told his wife to 'phone his neighbors for aid.

Looses Stock.

Returning to the barn, Mr. Mann saw that the blaze would reach the horse stable, and he at once endeavored to release the animals. Even though some escaped there were four horses, eight bull calves, all of pedigree stock; and some pigs which were burned in breaking from their pen.

In loosing one of the horses Mr. Mann nearly lost his life, being almost smothered with the smoke. Fanned by a strong wind, the fire leaped a distance of some thirty yards and caught on the roof of both the owner's residence and that of his hired man, which is behind the former. By this time a large crowd of farmers of the surrounding district had arrived, but their efforts to save the house were futile, for then every building on the farm was catching fire from the terrific heat that was arising from the barn and stables. Seeing that nothing could save the house, everyone lent a hand to save the furniture, and although some pieces were broken, most of the furnishings were gotten out.

Old Homestead.

It was painful to watch the grand old homestead being wrecked by the Fire Demon. From remarks that The Examiner gathered from neighbors on Saturday night, the Mann farm has been the scene of much hospitality; for the main buildings have been erected for about one hundred years, and were erected by the forefathers of the present owner.

To-day there is nothing left of that beautiful farmstead but a mass of smouldering ashes and one or two standing brick walls of the house.

By good fortune, Mr. Mann had taken seventeen head of cattle to his other farm on Friday, but the loss of the other pedigree stock is great, not only commercially, but because the cattle on a model farm, such as this was, rank the highest in tests for breeding.

$25,000 Damages.

The loss is estimated at twenty-five thousand dollars, and although the insurance carried by the Manns was the highest policy a farmer could take, yet it by no means covers the amount of damage done by the fire in its great sweep which had spelled disaster for these people in two or three hours.

Fish 'Phoned Good News When Safely on the Hook

NELSON, B.C., April 25.—For the first time, it is believed, fish have been caught by telephone. This had been going on some time when officials of the British Columbia Telephone Co. went to investigate trouble on a rural line along Lootenay Lake.

An investigator discovered two wires attached to the telephone fuses outside a house. They found they ran down to a float leading to a small boathouse and a fishing rod.

When the man of the house wanted fish he set his bait and went on with his work around the premises. When the fish took the hook, the reel would turn. This would close the circuit with the result that the bell in the house would announce that another fish was waiting to be landed.

SEVEN DEAD IN PLANT FIRE

Five of 30 Seriously Injured Died in Hospitals Yesterday.

SOME MISSING.

DETROIT, April 25. Canadian Press. — The number of known dead as a result of the fire that Saturday destroyed the five story paint shop of the Briggs Manufacturing Company, auto body builders, stood at seven yesterday, and earlier belief that some were killed outright was given partial substantiation by the announcement that rescue squads had seen one body in the still smouldering ruins Five of the 30 seriousy injured died in hospitals yesterday. Two others succumbed after being taken to the hospitals.

With firemen pouring water on the wreckage of the paint shop buiding throughout the night, and most of the day, a thorough search of the debris still was impossible.

While company executives said a partial check of payroll records, accounted for but three or four of those not treated at hospitals, police and newspaper offices received enquiries from relatives of at least a dozen employees of the plant who had failed to return home yesterday.

FEW PRELATES NOW IN MEXICO

Deportation Of Six To-day Leaves Church Without Functioning Head.

SEVEN IN HIDING.

MEXICO CITY, April 25 (Canadian Press). — Deportation of the Archbishop of Mexico and five other leaders of the Roman Catholic Episcopate who are now on their way to Laredo, Texas, has left the church without a functioning supreme body for the first time.

While the Government as yet has issued no official statement, the announcement of the sending of the prelates out of the country was made at the Archbishop's residence here.

Such church dignitaries as remain in Mexico are in hiding. It is believed that only seven archbishops and bishops are in the republic. Their identities and whereabouts are unknown. The government's drastic action had its origin in the recent burning of a passenger train in the State of Jalisco with the consequent loss of many lives.

May Ask To Re-open Smuggling Conference

WASHINGTON, April 25 (Canadian Press)—It is rumored that the United States Government shortly will ask Canada to reopen the smuggling conference with a view to tightening up regulations designed to prevent smuggling between Canada and the United States. A conference was held in Ottawa several years ago, and an agreement was reached.

Neither the State Department nor the Canadian Legation here would discuss the matter yesterday. It is known, however, that the legal complications which have arisen out of the seizure of Canadian ships and liquor cargoes has led the United States authorities to desire further conferences with Canada. It is also suggested that Canada might welcome an extension of the smuggling agreement to prevent the wholesale smuggling of United States manufactured good into Canada.

His $10,000 Home Burns As He Plays Solitaire

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., April 25 —Henry Bering, aged owner of an apartment house house in Roseville, played solitaire Wednesday night. Luck was against him and he played on until 4 a.m. the next day. He lost game after game and the session finally ended with the loss of his $10,000 building.

Firemen failed to save the building from destruction after an hour's battle.

Bering, according to a story he told later, became so engrossed in his card game he resorted to an oil lamp for light after the electric current had been shut off to allow repairs on the lines. The oil lamp fell from his table, the oil soaked the floor and the building soon was aflame.

Airplane Raids Planned To Bomb Pirate Haunts

So great a menace to commercial aviation have these modern slave traffickers become that the French government is considering a series of airplane raids along the coast to bomb out their haunts.

Acting Upon Newspaper Rumors, Envoy Despatches Note to Secretary.

REGULATIONS GIVEN.

Seek Conference Between the Countries' Representatives Before Any Decision Made.

WASHINGTON, April 25 (Canadian Press) — Canada has protested the new border ruling of the United States immigration department.

"In view of the reciprocal character of the existing arrangements and the serious dislocation which may result," in the business affairs of Canadian residents, a note has been delivered to the Secretary of State by the Canadian minister, Hon. Vincent Massey, asking for a conference between representatives of Canada and United States "before any decision is made or announced." Canada's note was delivered on Saturday and no reply has yet been received.

Acting upon the newspaper rumors of a tightening up along the international border against Canadians working in the States, the Canadian minister took the matter up with the immigration authorities here. He was assured that the proposed change would not go into effect for some time and would not affect Canadian-born. The regulations, however, were sent yesterday to all immigration agents and consuls-general and their terms are known to the Canadian Press. Roughly they are:

Regulations

Cancellation of identification cards now in use to permit workers on the United States side to travel daily or periodically from and to their homes on the Canadian side.

Issue of new cards to show that the bearer is of Canadian birth and has paid head tax and otherwise conformed to the immigration law; or is a Canadian by domicile who has conformed to the quota requirements. New cards must be obtained before Nov. 30 next.

In stating that those who have conformed with these requirements may "continue to enjoy the border-crossing privilege," the order adds: "Provided that they are not coming to seek employment." It is understood that this clause does not apply to those already working on this side, but it would seem to prevent future job-hunting in the United States by Canadians who drift over in search of work.

The order says that "the work of validating outstanding cards should proceed slowly, systematically, steadily and persistently and in such a manner as to avoid confusion, congestion, interference with proper routine administration and to avoid giving just grounds for complaint from the travelling public."

The status of holders of new cards will be inquired into periodically, preferably exery six months.

The order sets forth that hercafter aliens who work in the United States and live in other countries will be considered "as aliens of the immigrant class instead of as tourists or temporary business visitors. The year in which they first started crossing the border to work is significant. Canadian-born who entered before July 1, 1924, are not affected. If they entered after that date they must submit to examination as immigrants and take out visas if they have not already done so. This involves an expense of $8 for head tax, and $10 for United States immigration permit. There is also a fee of $5 usually charged by Canadian authorities for their part of the passport issue.

THE CHEMONG FLOATING BRIDGE WILL BE CLOSED FROM MONDAY MORNING, APRIL 25TH, UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE. — BY ORDER, J. A. MIDDLETON, WARDEN.

SELF EDUCATION

(By J. H. Burnham.)

In my last article, I referred to the extraordinary error taught by all universities from the time of the great Aristotle up to the time of Galileo, regarding falling bodies. Galileo, who knew nothing of the attraction of gravity, proved that bodies did not vary in their rate of fall according to their density, as always taught, but that all bodies tended to fall to the earth at a like rate. From this discovery to the fact that all bodies fall a distance (yield to the attraction of gravitation), proportional to the square of the times in falling (seconds) was but a step, but a most momentous one. A body falls sixteen feet the first second and in the next second, or number two, it falls two squared multiplied by sixteen, or sixty-four feet, and 3 x 3, for second number three, multiplied by sixteen, and so on. This settled the law for all falling bodies instead of the old idea that we had to know the density (weight) of each body before we could gauge the rate of its fall, and this discovery enabled Sir Isaac Newton to show that if the rate of attraction (or fall) of one body was the square of the time in units of seconds in going towards another body, then the force of attraction was reversed when objects are going away from each other. That is to say, if a body, the nearer it gets to another, feels the pull in the third second at nine times the rate of the first, it will feel it at only one-ninth in the third second and corresponding distance if receding from the other body. (What gravity and the attractive power which gives gravity or weight really are in unknown.)

Applying this idea to the moon, he saw and showed that it accounted for the so-called circular course of that body, the tendency to fly off in a straight line of the moon being corrected by its tendency to fall to the earth and that these two tendencies to fly off and fall in would produce, taken together, the moon's course or orbit. He applied this theory to all heavenly bodies, and found it to fit perfectly. The newtonian theory of the holding together by gravitation and balanced motion of the universe flashed upon a dazzled world. The movement and poise of the heavenly bodies had been accounted for.

You will see that all had depended on Galileo's discovery and upon his private investigations. It is true Galileo was mobbed and his theories ridiculed, but violence ultimately gave way to reason and he triumphed in the end. This great instance will serve to show that all human things, colleges included, depend upon the brain of the individual student himself. He goes to school or college to learn more quickly how to use his weapons, it is true, but it depends upon himself alone whether he turns out a success or not. Note the boxer. Until he learns by his own genius or aptitude how to use his teaching, that is, until he becomes independent of teaching and teachers, he is of little use, and is merely wasting his time. Until the mathematical student knows how to use mathematical machinery (mathematics) independently of his teacher he can solve no problems, and is practically a failure. When a mother is teaching a baby to walk, the time comes when she says, "Now, go ahead yourself, my love. You won't have mother with you always. You must learn to do your own walking," and whether the baby understands or not it is pushed off into space and begins for the very first time its journey of life. So, I say, it is with learning. Go and buy your teaching as you would your books, but always remember that the first learner had no teacher but himself, and that your own success will depend on yourself and on your own thinking power. With a reasonable equipment, therefore, such as a few necessary books and a little guidance, you must do your own "walking" and show what is in you. Our Ontario system of education thought it took first prize at the world's fair, but failed because it did not take into account the paramount importance of "home-work" and self-education.

A young man, lately from college, with a smattering of knowledge which enobled him to appear, even to himself, to know much more than he really did, went to hear the Rev. Dr. Sexton speak on "Astronomy." Dr. Sexton was a most able and learned man, and, more—he was a very far-seeing man, one of those individuals endowed by Nature with the power of co-ordination or judgment. Judgment is a separate faculty and the most valuable of all. After the lecture, the young man had a chat with the doctor, who, seeing his eagerness for real knowledge, invited him to go with him for a drive on the following day. Now, Dr. Sexton was a poor man, not being able to fight in the ring or make an ass of himself like Charlie Chaplin, or pretend to make love on the sex-plan like the screen-heroes and heroines. He had a grasp of science that was amazing, but only those who have brain-power appreciate that sort of thing. Well! The upshot of the drive was that Dr. Sexton told the young man what toread, and instead of going ahead in a blunder-ing way the young man read accordingly and learned more in six months than he would ever have learned but for Dr. Sexton. The young man paid for the drives they had and Dr. Sexton was lain to pocket his pride and thank him for it because, as the doctor said: "Beggars can't be shoosers," and the learned doctor was a beggar, financially. Such are the absurdities of life but that is not what I want to emphasize. "Go and get a kin from those who know." It will cost you nothing. Knowledge is never greedy of money. Like virtue, it is beloved for its own sake. Some will say the price of a drive was a cheap one to pay for so much learning. Not to the proud host. Had he not been in poverty, he would not have allowed it. For it must be remembered that "proper pride" in oneself and one's calling is what distinguishes man from the animal.

The drive of logs in a river is sometimes caught and held when difficulties pile up space until they seem insurmountable. The skilled jack comes along and away they go. So it is in knowledge difficulties that hide knowledge are opened by the learned ones like gates and lead to the pathways of knowledge for those who wish to tread them. Suddenly an entrancing view opens through these gates to the seeking eye. It is the beauty as well as the usefulness of knowledge that leads men on. Some young people of course regard learning as a nuisance. They like dancing or any other form of play. That is because their brains are in their feet. There is no objection to that knowledge like art, and all things—even salvation is reserved for the few.

Are you to be one of the few? It is an easy habit to get into and you will never regret it. Good habits are just as easy to fall into as bad ones but not so pleasant to the usual mind. It is not true however that—

"A little learning is a dangerous thing."

A little learning is much better than a mass of ignorance. A little may not do much good but it cannot do much harm and it may lead where the other cannot lead—into a realm such as Newton opened to us.

You will notice a film on your child's teeth. That's a frequent danger sign—an invitation for tooth and gum troubles. The same stubborn film that you can feel by running your tongue across your own teeth. You must combat it. Ordinary dentifrices don't fight it successfully.

Film is the greatest enemy of tooth health. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. Germs breed in it and imperil both teeth and gums. The acid that leads to early decay forms. Old-type methods failed to combat it. Men of science undertook to discover an effective combatant.

Now in Pepsodent, two new combatants are embodied—combatants approved by highest dental authority. It curdles the film, gently removes it; then firms the gums. It keeps the teeth whiter, cleaner, more sparkling. It is the modern scientific method for better tooth protection. Insist upon it. Get a tube today. Mail the coupon.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

(Copyright, 1927, by Robt. F. Foster.)

Four-Card Suit Bids.

It has lately become the practice to bid on only four cards in the major suits, provided there is an extra trick in the hand to make up for the shortness in trumps, as five cards in a major suit is the standard. Some writers give a number of examples of the combinations that might be held, and the outside strength required, but their rules are so inconsistent, requiring only two tricks in some cases, three in others, and some in between, that they are evidently all guesswork.

The simplest rule that I have found for four-card bids in the major suits is this: Say to yourself, "If I had a fifth card in this suit, would I bid it?" If the answer is yes, then see if you have a sure trick outside that suit, which is more than the two in hand that make it a bid, that trick will take the place of the missing trump. Example:

H. A K. xx. C. A. xx. D. x x x. S. x x x.

Summing up the general rules for suit bids they may be formulated in accordance with what is now generally known as the "Double Valuation System" which is based on the analysis of a very large number of deals al going to show that if you secure the contract, you will take twice as many tricks as the number of sure tricks in your hand. The only trick that is not a sure trick is a guarded king; but as it will take a trick about half the time, we double it, and call it a trick. This gives us the following scale of value, which I have found will come to within 2 per cent of the actual value of the hands on the average, if you get the contract. If you do not get the contract, all sure tricks fall to their face value.

The Double Valuation System.

A guarded king is worth—1 trick.

Ace or K Q of the same suit—2 tricks.

A Q 10, A J 10, or K Q 10, of the same suit—3 tricks.

A K, A Q J or K Q J, of same suit, 4 tricks.

Queens, jacks and tens have no bidding value apart from higher cards in the same suit, but they may be useful as stoppers or protection in no-trumpers.

If any other player bids a suit, the values in that suit fall to their defensive, or face value, in your hand. If your partner denies your suit, your high cards equally lose their double value in the denied suit.

This system gives us the following rules for counting the hand for a free bid in suit:

The average major suit is 5 cards and requires 4 tricks in the hand, at least 2 in the suit bid. See examples A and B.

A major suit of only 4 cards requires 5 tricks in the hand, and at least 3 of them in the suit bid.

Minor suits do not require length, as they are never bid to assist on them for the trump, but there must be 4 tricks in the hand, at least 2 of them in the suit named.

Defensive Bids.

Defensive bids may be made on a trick weaker than would be considered essential for a free bid. If there are three tricks in the hand, at least two in the suit named, it is often worth while to bid the suit, simply to encourage a partner who has still to speak. This is especially true of second hand, who by a defensive bid may induce his partner to make some attempt to secure the contract, or force the bidding up, which he would not otherwise have attempted.

After two passes, the bids become half attacking and half defensive, and the hand should be worth at least 5 tricks, with three of the four suits protected, for a suit bid. After three passes there should be at least 6 tricks in the hand and three suits protected.

A suit is said to be protected when it is improbable that the adversaries can run it down against you and win every trick in it. Three to the queen-jack, or four to a queen or jack are examples.

Suits that are long enough for a good trump suit, such as six or seven cards, king or queen high, are not good free bids except under system No. 2 and 5. If there is not good minor suit bid in the hand, these long suits should not be mentioned as free bids, but may be when the bid comes round again, if the development seems favorable. That is why they are called "Secondary Bids." Take these examples:

H. K. x x x x x x. C. A. K. x x. D. x x. S. x. H. Q. J. x x x x. C. A. x x. x. D. K. x. S. x.

In the first there is a good free bid, in clubs, secondary in hearts. In the other there is no free bid, as the hand does not contain four tricks at the double value; but it does a good secondary heart bid.

YOUR SUPPORT NEEDED.

In connection with the activities of Boys' Week, the citizens of Peterborough are asked to note that this effort is no way a money-making enterprise.

So far as the Boys' Week budget is concerned the only source of revenue will be the circus to be conducted by the Y.M.C.A., and out of the proceeds of which it is hoped to meet some at least of the expense entailed by the week's programme.

The support of the public is is therefore asked on behalf of the circus, which promises to be an attraction full of novel and entertaining features and well worth seeing on its own account, and a liberal response to the ticket-selling campaign to be launched at once is urged.

Boys' Week will include a wide range of interesting events for the youngsters of Peterborough; the movement is receiving the active support and co-operation of many local organizations, and all that is necessary to ensure a complete and outstanding success is a large attendance at the Boys' Week circus, which, incidentally, is to be held on Tuesday, May 10.

When you are asked to buy a ticket for this unusual event, please remember what your suppport will mean to the success of the whole scheme.

SHOULD HAVE SIGNS.

If congestion and confusion are to be avoided the city authorities should see to it that the no-parking zones in the vicinity of the intersection of George and Charlotte streets are clearly marked and that the regulations are rigidly followed.

At this corner where the motor traffic is the heaviest and where the congestion is increased because this is the transfer point for the bus lines, and at certain periods half a dozen buses are to be found there, it is imperative for the general comfort and safety that the situation should be cleared up as far as possible.

With hundreds of outside motorists soon to be expected here daily, it will be necessary to erect signs warning drivers of the regulations in regard to stopping or parking in this vicinity.

Otherwise the Police Department is going to have a busy summer keeping the corner clear and preventing traffic tie-ups and accidents.

The parking problem generally, and particularly on Saturday, is a troublesome one, but there is no point in the city that presents so much difficulty as this busy corner.

NO PROFIT—NO BUSES.

Mayor Holloway made a significant statement at the Bell Telephone Company banquet on Friday night when he said that if the new bus company, after thirty days, found that the enterprise was not showing a profit the service would be withdrawn.

A solution of the city's transportation problem, momentarily arrived at by the commencement of operations by the Border City Transit Company, may soon have to be sought again, if a month's trial convinces the company that the proposition is not a financial success.

The present twenty-minute service is appreciated by many citizens; the buses are being operated on time; the five-tickets-for-25c innovation is popular with the patrons, and a suspension of the facilities now provided would mean inconvenience to a large number of people.

Yet the fact remains that the bus company, having received no concessions from the city except permission to operate, and not exclusive permission at that, is under no obligations to furnish transportations for the citizens of Peterborough at a loss.

If the patronage does not warrant a continuance of the service we may find ourselves back to the conditions of April 1 once more.

The city fathers had better keep the transportation question in mind; they may have to deal with it again before long.

MORE NECESSARY THAN EVER.

It is to be hoped that motorists generally have not failed to read the latest advertisement of the Ontario Department of Highways pointing out the fact that a greater responsibility for alert caution rests on the driver using the highways now that the speed limit has been raised.

The change in the law should not be regarded by motorists as an excuse for reckless driving, but rather as the establishing of new conditions that make care and courtesy even more necessary than ever.

The department insists upon the principle that the safety of the highways must be maintained, and drivers should remember particularly this paragraph of the advertisement:

"In villages, in heavy traffic, at cross-roads or railway crossings, where adults or children are using the highway, near schools, and at curves and bridges, care must be exercised by the motorist in accordance with the circumstances. Obedience to the law and courtesy to others is expected at all times."

Drivers who do not choose to play the game and who place their own lives and those of others in peril because of lack of caution and courtesy, would do well to remember the provision for cancellation of licenses, and to realize that the Ontario department is determined to see that the regulations are obeyed.

A WORLD LEADER.

Canada leads the world in the production of newsprint, asbestos, nickel, cobalt, salmon and exportable wheat surplus. It is second in the number of telephones in actual use and in the production of lumber and automobiles. It is third in gold and silver production, and in respect to the former is well on the way to second place within a reasonable time. Only South Africa promises to lead for some years to come.

These are not the statements of prospectors or aspiring politicians. They are the calmly stated facts of a Government survey, and they come as an interesting prelude to the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation. For a long time this country's material progress was a matter of some speculation. Even those who made the most confident predictions sometimes wondered if they would be fulfilled. Few people, as recently as 30 years ago, would have believed that the Dominion would lead the world in the productions quoted. And there are greater things to come. The recent copper lead and zinc discoveries in Northern Ontario are proving up in a manner that makes those who know something about mineral deposits positively hysterical with amazement. So pronounced are their opinions as to what the finds mean, that they are in danger of filling laymen with disbelief.

In the last fiscal year Canada exported $1,271,000,000 worth of goods, and in the previous fiscal year $1,269,000,000, while its total trade is rapidly approaching the two and a half million mark. Between 1901 and 1925 manufacturing production in this country grew from 214 millions to 1,311 millions and agricultural production increased 300 per cent. Startling figures these. They do not tell all of the story of advancement, visible and invisible. A little imagination will fill in many details.

Forward Canada This is not the time for pessimism or slackness.—Brantford Expositor.

WESTERN ONTARIO'S OPPORTUNITY.

The rapid expansion of tobacco farming in Western Ontario has become a leading topic of conversation among agriculturists. Everywhere discussion turns on the remarkable increase in acreage devoted to this crop; the stability of the British market; the suitability of Ontario soil; and the technical, special knowledge which the tobacco grower must have to be successful.

The tobacco-growing fever is not entirely new in this section of the Province. More than once the production of the southwestern counties has been stimulated to high levels by the favorable appearance of the world market, only to subside again in competition with the highly organized industry in Kentucky and Virginia. This time the renewed productive activity is no brief flare-up. The stability of the industry is not based today on the vagaries of production in the Southern States, but rather on the preference which Canadian leaf enjoys in the British market. The tax on Canadian tobacco entering Great Britain today is only $1.62, compared with $2.16 which must be paid by growers outside the Empire. It is to grasp this advantage to the full that growers are enlarging their production program.

The expansion is well under way. Last year 30,000 acres were planted to tobacco in Western Ontario. It is estimated that this acreage will be increased in 1927 to perhaps 45,000 acres. Middlesex County, for instance, is expected to grow 400 acres of tobacco this year, whereas last year only 200 acres were devoted to that crop. The soil requirements of high quality leaf place a limit, of course, to the extent of the industry, but that limit is not even in sight. It is estimated that in the counties of Essex, Kent, Lambton, Elgin, Norfolk and Middlesex there are 500,000 acres which are suitable for one or other of the varieties which are now finding a ready market at good prices.

The story is perhaps easier to follow when translated into terms of dollars. Last year Western Ontario counties realized from tobacco the sum of $3,000,000, or practically one-fourth the value of all wheat grown in the Province in 1926. If production continues to increase at the rate of the past few years, Western Ontario growers in ten years' time may expect to market an annual crop worth $50,000,000. Export of Canadian tobacco, almost all of which came from Western Ontario, has tripled in two years, increasing from 2,276,465 pounds in 1924 to about 7,000,000 pounds in 1926. The export price has risen, and Western Ontario leaf now commands twice the price of American tobaccos of the same type. It would seem, therefore, that a tremendous growth in production is inevitable. The demand will not fail, because Canadian tobaccos have proven their quality, and can be used in blends to suit the British smoker's delicate taste to a much greater extent than can tobaccos from other Empire countries.

Unquestionably tobacco is a hard crop to grow. Frosts, drought and humidity are dangerous to the growing leaf. Insect pests have to be avoided. Weather conditions are often adverse to the proper curing of the harvested crop. In the case of flue-cured leaf, buildings and equipment are especially costly. But where a profit of $170 an acre is possible after allowing for return on investments, as was shown by many Kent farms last year, the difficulties surrounding the industry do not look insurmountable.

For many farmers of the southwestern counties the venture into tobacco is not only an opportunity but an economic necessity. The European corn borer robbed them of their valuable corn crop, and tobacco or some other substitute had to be developed at once. It will be found that where the land is suitable the returns from tobacco will be far greater than the returns from corn. One Essex County grower last year made a clear net profit of $20,000. It is little wonder that there is a steady influx of experienced growers from the fields of Kentucky, Virginia and North Carolina to the counties of Western Ontario. The tobacco industry here promises returns which under present conditions could not possibly be realized in the South; returns which mean prosperity not only for the tobacco farmer himself but indirectly the whole population of Western Ontario as well.—London Advertiser.

The civic authorities should be able to get some valuable hints out of those interviews with Peterborough women in regard to the clean-up campaign.

The first step toward the success of the local celebration of Canada's Diamond Jubilee is a decision on the part of citizens generally to spend Dominion Day at home.

As usual Peterborough forgot to fly its flags to mark the anniversary of the Second Battle of Ypres.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, April 25 (Canadian Press).—The foreign demand for grain in the Montreal market was again disappointing Saturday and no new business of importance was accomplished.

The volume of business in cash grain in the domestic market was also small, but the undertone was firm and prices were unchanged.

The export trade in Spring wheat flour during the past week was more active owing to the improved demand from the United Kingdom for May shipment, but apart from this the market was quiet and prices were steady. The demand for Winter wheat flour continued limited, but the undertone was steady.

A fair trade was done in all lines of millfeed and values were well maintained. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was inactive, but values were unchanged.

A feature of the egg situation during the past week was the keen demand from large consuming centres of the east for both immediate consumption and for storing purposes, with the result that the offerings of car lots from Ontario and the Prairie Provinces found ready buyers. Brokers found it difficult to secure further offers in consequence of which a much firmer feeling prevailed in the market, and jobbers in some instances advanced their prices 1 cent per dozen. The receipts were 3,154 cases Saturday.

A strong feeling prevailed in the butter market last week and prices closed with a net gain of 3c to 3 1-2c per pound, which was attributed to the temporary scarcity of supplies. Final sales of Eastern Townships No. 1 pasteurized were made at 40c to 40 1-2c per pound. The receipts Saturday were 2,299 packages.

The cheese trade continued extremely dull, but prices were unchanged. The receipts were 152 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, April 25 (Canadian Press).—Corn enlivened the grains markets Saturday by scoring a substantial independent advance. Prospects that deliveries of corn on May contracts here will be less of a burden than has been looked for of late were largely responsible. Corn closed firm, 1-2c to 3-4c net higher, with wheat finishing irregular 1-4c off to 1-8 and 1-4c up; oats 1-8c to 1-4c down, and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 7c.

Oats were easy on account of better weather for seeding. Upturns in the value of hogs helped to steady the provision market.

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: A number of old people have written me most pathetic notes asking in their feeble way how the Old Age Pension matter stands. For the information of all such let me say that the Parliament at Ottawa which passes laws for the whole Dominion (where the Provinces have not exclusive right) passed a law at the last session that when provinces would join with the Dominion government the latter would grant to the people of those provinces 70 years of age or more one-half of $240.00 a year where the old people had no other means of support, but where they had other means of support the grant would be lessened accordingly. It is therefore up to the Provincial Legislatures. See your Provincial Member.

OLD AGE.

ARE FOOTBALL FANS TIGHT-WADS?

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: I was very much pleased to see how the football fans turned out on Good Friday to see the opening game of the season, Thistles versus Quakers. I for one thought the game was played in a very sportsmanlike way, the game being almost void of any rough tactics, and I think both teams deserve credit for the spirit in which they played. I would think there would be in the neighborhood of 300 spectators, and everybody seemed to be enjoying the game. But it came to my knowledge after the game that the collection only amounted to $11.65! I could not help but think that was poor. When our brother baseball fans will give the fifty cents to see a ball game, 24 spectators would only be necessary to collect more than 300 voluntarily gave.

Remember, fans, it takes money to run a team. Last season the various clubs went in the hole to the tune of $60. It takes, roughly speaking $10 to rig each player out, then the balls $8 each. So please dig down in your pockets and see if you can't do a little better, and you that didn't dig down at all—dig in and encourage the clubs along. You would willingly give ten cents if a charge could be made, so why not do it voluntarily?

Now, don't stay away from the next game, and see if we can't do a little better.

Thanking you for your valuable space. ANXIOUS.

THE CENTRAL ONTARIO POWER ASSOCIATION EXPLAINS

Editor Examiner:

My attention has been drawn to an editorial in your issue of the 14th instant under the caption, "Of Doubtful Benefit."

In this editorial you make the statement, "The action of the Central Ontario Power Association in holding a conference with the Hydro Electric Commission without a notice being sent to Mayor Holloway, who is vice-president of the association, may have been due to an oversight but it serves to call attention to the fact that membership in the association is of somewhat questionable value to Peterborough."

Permit me to state that since the organization of the Central Ontario Power Association at Cobourg on Feb. 17th last, two meetings of the executive has been held. The first of these took place at Toronto on March 15th and the second at Cobourg on March 25th. Dr. Holloway was mailed notices of both these meetings in the regular way. He attended the meeting in Toronto and the conference with the Hydro Commission the following morning but he was not present at the Cobourg meeting because, so I was informed, of illness. The meeting at Cobourg was, however, attended by Ald. R. Denne who is the special representative on the executive of the municipality of the City of Peterborough.

At the Cobourg meeting a special committee of five was appointed to represent the executive and to interview the Hydro Commission to ascertain upon what terms the municipalities which did not own the local distributing systems might acquire them. The chairman of the association, Mr. F. L. Mason of Oshawa, naturally chose the members of this committee from those municipalities that had not purchased the local electrical plants.

This special committee held a conference with the Commission on the 8th instant a full report of which has appeared in the press. This special committee will report back to the executive as soon as the Commission has had time to prepare a statement of policy and the terms of purchase.

Your editorial further states: "Apparently the two main objects of the organization were to have the Peterborough Street Railway closed down and to bring about the purchase from the Commission of the distribution systems in the various municipalities."

I wish to state most emphatically that since the time of its first organization the Central Ontario Power Association has, neither directly nor indirectly, taken any action having for its object the closing down of the Peterborough Railway. At the conference between the special committee and the Hydro Commission on April 8th, at which the writer was present, the subject of the Peterborough Radial was not even mentioned. An intimation appeared in the press, before anyone thought of organizing the Central Ontario Power Association, that the Commission would refuse to continue to operate the Peterborough Railway any longer and the recent action in closing the system down was evidently nothing more than the carrying out of a policy determined upon some time ago. To attribute this action to any influence exercised by the Central Ontario Power Association is entirely aside from the fact and grossly unjust.

To be sure, the question of the purchase of the local systems is of no present interest to the City of Peterborough, since your municipality acquired its own distributing plant away back in 1914, but the subject is a most important one to those twenty municipalities in Central Ontario that have not yet taken steps in that direction. The consideration of such a problem is surely not improper or outside of the legitimate purposes of such an association.

J. O. HERITY,
Secretary,
Central Ontario Power Association.

THE MOTHER'S DIET WHILE NURSING

A healthy mother may be able to nurse her baby for over a year. Primitive women frequently nurse more than one baby at a time, and last year's baby is nursed with the new arrival!

The modern mother does well if she can furnish enough milk for six or seven months, by which time the quality and quantity of the milk secreted begins to fall off. After this time the nutritive properties of the milk are very poor.

There does not seem to be any very good reason why cow's milk should not be substituted after three or four months if the baby is not gaining and in good health.

We have educated our cows to be excellent milk factories, and clean milk from well-fed, contented cows furnishes all the nutrition which the growing baby needs.

If the mother wants to nurse her child it is essential that she develop a peaceful mind, free from all worries and fears. Every dairyman knows how much the quality and quantity of the cow's milk is influenced by what might be called mental or emotional factors. The finest milk producer in the herd will fail to secrete good milk if frightened or made nervous. The effect of any mental irritation is, of course, more pronounced with the human mother, and no amount of careful, scientific feeding can overcome the bad effects of destructive, psychic influences.

If the mother can keep a tranquil mind her diet can then be regulated to produce good nourishment for her baby. Plenty of protein food must be used in the form of eggs and meat, together with the bulky, non-starchy vegetables.

Added liquid will create more quantity of milk, and water is perhaps the best for this purpose, and should be freely used between meals. Milk will provide a goodly amount of protein and fat and at the same time supply the needed liquid. This milk should not be taken at the same meal with either meat or eggs, but may be taken with fruit or the green vegetables. It is a good plan to use about a quart each mid-day, drinking a glass every 20 minutes and using a dish or two of cooked greens with the second and third glass of milk.

It is not wise to use much starchy or sugar foods as they cannot supply any helpful quality to the milk secreted. All bad food combinations should be avoided and such foods as onions, garlic, cabbage, and all "gassy" foods must be eliminated.

The nursing mother needs a reasonable amount of exercise in the form of walking and physical culture exercises. If following this advice does not bring about satisfactory results, no fear need be experienced if the baby is weaned on good cow's milk with liberal amount of fresh orange juice before each feeding.

Complete weaning instructions will be sent if you will write and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

AT THE GRAND

"THAT'S THAT"

Captain Plunkett's Dumbells in their eighth springtime revue "That's That" were warmly welcomed by two big audiences at the Grand on Saturday and responded with a characteristically snappy and captivating production in which the comedy motif was always uppermost. "That's That" in its fun-producing effects probably outdid some of the previous Plunkett revues, in spite too of the absence of Stan Bennett, who is no longer with the company. The chief burden of the laugh-making was carried by that inimitable trio, Red Newman, Pat Rafferty and Jock Holland, and their always successful efforts, supplemented by the Dumbell Orchestra, and the outstanding dancing of Glenn Allan whose work shows constant improvement, were mainly responsible for the success of the presentation.

Neither of the old favorites, Al. Plunkett or Ross Hamilton, was as prominent as usual. "Al" scored nicely, however, in two song numbers, "That's A Good Girl", made famous by Jack Smith, the whispering baritone, and the catchy "Take in the Sun". Ross Hamilton was out of the first act altogether by reason of a painful accident by which he temporarily blinded himself by getting some "make-up" in his eyes but he was back for the third act and sang "Thinking of You" very effectively.

Red Newman, Pat Rafferty and "Jock" Holland all added to their laurels. Newman got the revue away to a great start by his singing of "Oh Charley Take It Away" and in the various sketches, particularly in "The Coffee Stall" caused laugh after laugh. The diminutive Rafferty, one of the most original and amusing comics to appear here, was at his best. Everything he did was funny and his "Queen of the Carnival" number was a scream. As for Jock Holland, he gave the best all-round performance of his career; he was a laugh centre in every sketch and has never shown his ability as a character actor to better advantage.

Glen Allen scored an individual triumph. This young man is fast on his way to stardom, as an impersonator and particularly as a dancer. His "Black Bottom" was a stand-out and his dance number with Morley Plunkett a thing of grace and beauty.

Under the able direction of Howard Fogg the Dumbells Orchestra showed that this fine organization is not satisfied to rest upon its reputation. The band hit on every cylinder in a varied programme that included "Petruska", 'A Night in Araby", "Everything is Made For Love" and a war-time medley arranged by Mr. Fogg. It continues to improve not only in executive but in showmanship. A sousaphone solo by Bob Cawston and two violin numbers by the leader were features of this part of the programme and "Black Bottom" with Pat Harrington, the drummer of the orchestra, doing the vocal stuff and Glen Allen the dancing, was put over with complete success.

Morley Plunkett sang "Where Do You Work-a John?" in company with Freddie Treneer very successfully and also scored in a solo number, while Jimmy Devon, clever step dancer showed a new routine that pleased everybody.

The cleverest of the sketches was "Proverbs" in which the dialogue consisted almost entirely of copy-book platitude very effectively used. There was an abundance of fun in "He's Cured" and "Accidents Will Happen" while the "Coffee Stall" skit, the only old number in the revue aroused laughter enough to justify its inclusion in the programme.

All in all a typically entertaining and fast-moving Dumbell production and "That's That."—F. D. C.

AT THE REGENT.

LILLIAN GISH GIVES INSPIRED PORTRAYAL IN "SCARLET LETTER."

Long Cherished Desire to Play Part Gives Actress Breadth of Understanding.

The stern intolerance of the early Puritans, their hardships and their fanatical opposition to all that savors of pleasure form the background for Lillian Gish's most startling and dramatic role, in "The Scarlet Letter," filmed from Nathaniel Hawthorne's classic, and which is now playing at the Regent Theatre.

The Hawthorne story has been placed on the screen with an amazing fidelity under Victor Seastrom's direction, and the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature is of a magnitude that lists it among the most important plays of the year.

But the interesting thing is the work of Lillian Gish. She entered on the role with spirit akin to that of the actors in the Passion Play, as for six years she has longed to play the story as a tribute to her Puritan ancestors. So she brings to the role of "Hester Prynne" a breadth of understanding that makes the character absolutely live the tragic story of the woman, walled in by intolerance, who bore a brand of shame to shield the man she loved. The dramatic climax at the pillory gives her an opportunity to rise to sublime heights in her portrayal.

The story is staged on a lavish scale; a Puritan village full of men and women is seen in the dramatic sequences, nearly a thousand people appearing in their quaint Puritan garb, and the cast is well suited to the story. Lars Hanson, the Swedish Barrymore, makes his debut in America as "Dimmesdale," the clergyman, lover of the heroine, and Henry B. Walthall, once her lover, in "Birth of a Nation" plays her Nemesis in a convincing manner. Karl Dane as Giles, the barber surgeon, has an eccentric role fully as effective as "Slim" in "The Big Parade," and William H. Tooker, Marcelle Corday, Mary Hawes, Jules Cowles, little Joyce Coad, and James A. Marcus, complete a well-balanced cast.

GOT HER FEET WET CAUGHT BAD COLD

Mrs. Ernest Hall, Cardinal, Ont., writes:—"Last winter I got my feet wet and I caught a terrible cold. I took different kinds of medicine, but none did me any good and I seemed to be getting worse all the time.

One day I was reading about what your medicine had done for others, so thought I would get a bottle. After I had taken a few doses I found it was helping me, so I took a few bottles and was completely restored to health. I cannot praise too highly, as I believe that if it were not for it I would be an invalid today."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup

Members of Lansdowne Hold Social Evening at Hall.

A PRESENTATION.

On Friday, April 22nd, the members of the Lodge with a number of their friends spent a pleasant social evening together to commemorate St. George's Day, April 22, the members of the Lodge with a number of their friends, spent a pleasant social evening together to commemorate St. George's Day, April 23rd.

Moving pictures shown by the representative of the Canadian National Railways, Mr. O'Connor, gave exceedingly good views of the Canadian Rockies, via the C.N.R. route; Alaska, British Columbia, and the trip across Lake Ontario from Cobourg to Rochester.

During an intermission between the pictures, a presentation to Bro. C. Wood, who has been treasurer of the Lodge for twenty-five years, was made by Bro. B. J. Lemmon, the District Deputy Supreme Lodge officer. The presentation took the form of a certificate of merit, and a jewel awarded by the Supreme Lodge.

Three hearty cheers and the singing of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" testified to the high regard in which Bro. Wood is held amongst the members.

After the pictures some of the members took part in a progressive euchre drive, while other played billiards, chess and checkers. The prizes for the euchre drive were won by Bro. C. Wood and Mr. Groombridge. Community singing and refreshments brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

He Was Often Troubled With Rheumatism

Mr. Wilson Found Relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills

"My husband was troubled quite a lot with rheumatism," states Mrs. Wilson of 32 Pine St., Kingston Ont. "A friend advised him to give your Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial, which he did. After the first box he found a decided relief, so got two more boxes, with the result that he never feels rheumatism at all now."

Dodd's Kidney Pills stimulate and strengthen weak kidneys. You will be surprised how quickly they begin to cleanse and purify, to soothe and heal the kidneys, at the same time backaches and rheumatism disappear.

CLXII—The Battle For A Life.

by MAX HAHN

DESPITE PASTEUR'S SUCCESS IN PREVENTING DOGS FROM GOING MAD HE HESITATED TO EXPERIMENT ON PEOPLE. BUT IN 1885 THE DECISION WAS MADE FOR HIM. JOSEPH MEISTER, A 9-YEAR-OLD BOY, WAS TAKEN TO PASTEUR'S LABORATORY BY THE LAD'S MOTHER. SHE TOLD HOW JOSEPH HAD BEEN BITTEN TWO DAYS BEFORE.

A BRICKLAYER HAD DASHED ACROSS THE STREET AND BY SWINGING AN IRON BAR HE HAD DRIVEN THE DOG AWAY. BEFORE THE DOG FLED, HOWEVER, HE HAD BITTEN LITTLE JOSEPH 14 TIMES. POOR PASTEUR WAS AFRAID TO USE HIS VACCINE ON THE CHILD, BUT TWO DOCTORS CONVINCED HIM THAT IT WAS HIS DUTY. © McClure Newspaper Syndicate

FOR 10 DAYS PASTEUR INJECTED A FEW DROPS OF VACCINE INTO JOSEPH'S SIDE. DAY BY DAY A LITTLE STRONGER VACCINE WAS USED. THE CHILD SOON FORGOT HIS NERVOUSNESS, BUT PASTEUR WAS UNDERGOING THE CRISIS OF HIS LIFE, FOR HE WAS NOT SURE THE TREATMENT WOULD SAVE THE BOY.

THE NEXT TWO WEEKS WERE FULL OF AGONY FOR PASTEUR. HE WORRIED CONSTANTLY FOR FEAR HIS FIRST RABIES PATIENT WOULD DIE. THE EXPERIMENT WAS A SUCCESS, HOWEVER, AS THE WORLD KNOWS, AND SOON PASTEUR'S LABORATORY WAS THE MECCA OF DOG VICTIMS FROM BOTH SIDES OF THE OCEAN.

I got where I did not have any health at all, was not able to follow my usual line of work. I saw where Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery was recommended for stomach trouble so I decided to try it and it relieved me of my indigestion and weak stomach, also the abdominal distress and built me up in health. sick, befriending widows, and educating orphans. This great lodge had erected about five hundred orphanages for children, and institutions for aged men, that have cost six and three quarter million dollars, and a yearly upkeep of a million all tends to show the great service this body is rendering to mankind.

Three Principles.

Mr. Richardson told of the three principles of the Oddfellows, which are Friendship, Love and Truth. He said that "Friendship" in its real form meant that men were learning to regard the personal interests of one another. "Love," he said, "is a feeling for friends, children and mainly God. This principle had been taken from the ten commandments to assist all.

"The third principle is 'Truth,' and the basis of this is God," said the minister, and without God mental and mortal anarchy are bound to arise."

He then welcomed the Oddfellows to the church, whose great history and influence extends over all men, and challenges their admiration and respect for the organization that has existed over one hundred years, and doing good work ever since they were first formed. He told the men to let their lodge increase love for home, and a greater faith in their church, so as to never forget that everyone needs personal faith to bring assurance which gives hope of the life that is to come.

The Music.

Special music added greatly to the interest of the service, the "Recessional" being sung as an anthem by the choir, and a particularly appropriate solo, "Let Us Have Peace" by Miss Daisy Murray.

Towards the close of the service, the Caledonian Pipe Band played the "Lament," and a quartette of buglers from the Band of the Peterborough Rangers sounded Last Post.

In Peterborough Churches

AT SACRED HEART CHURCH.

"Whose sins you shall forgive shall be forgiven them, whose sins you shall retain shall be retained," was the text of the sermon at the Sacred Heart Church yesterday morning.

One of the first powers which our Lord granted to His apostles was that of forgiving sins. Sin only stands between the soul and heaven. No soul can be saved without penance. The Sacrament of Penance is just as necessary to remove actual sin as baptism is to remove original sin, said the reverend speaker.

"What you loose upon earth shall be loosed also in heaven. When a priest forgives sins in confession they are also forgiven in heaven, but if a person has not contrition for his sins and will not make restitution for the wrongs he has committed then neither on earth nor in heaven will he obtain forgiveness.

"God sent His Son into the world to forgive sins. Christ conferred this wonderful power upon his apostles, and it has been handed down through all the ages by means of His established church.

"We should try to beautify this God-given power. Very grave indeed is the thought of being in sin even for twenty hours, for, as our Lord said, 'Be you always prepared, death may come like a keeper in the night; you know not the day nor the hour'."

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL

His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, speaking at the morning Masses at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday, centred his attention on the Gospel narrative regarding Thomas the Doubter, and his reluctance to believe in the resurrection of the Lord until he had put his hands into the Sacred Wounds. Christians who follow out the precepts of their Master are those who are said to be blessed because they have believed without seeing.

To His disciples in that upper chamber Christ gave the power to forgive sins, in the words, "Whose sins ye shall forgive, they are forgiven them, and whose sins ye shall retain, they are retained." The priest in the confessional, through the Divine Power, has the means of forgiving sins of all who shall confess to him.

The Bishop spoke in condemnation of the practice of making a mockery of the marriage ceremony, which the Church wishes to surround with as much solemnity as possible, by throwing confetti after the bridal couple, and attaching old shoes, tin cans and sometimes grossly-worded signs, to the wedding equipage.

His Lordship also commended to the attention of the congregation the Clean-Up Campaign now in progress in the city, and asked them to co-operate in every possible way to make Peterborough, "one of the most beautiful small cities on the Continent," even finer still.

WWNE next Sunday, the Devotion o the Forty Hours commences at the Cathedral, also the summer schedule of Masses, with a change to the hours of 7.30, 9 a.m. 10.30 a.m.

ST. LUKE'S ANGLICAN

Rev. Dr. E. A. Langfeldt, for nine years pastor of St. Luke's Church, was heard by large congregations at both services yesterday, on the occasion of his first visit to the church in many years. Many who had been in the congregation in former years returned to hear him and greet him.

Dr. Langfeldt preached two very thoughtful and inspiring sermons. In the morning his text was taken from the Gospel according to St. Mark, chapter 9, verses 43 to 48. This passage contains the advice of the Savior that it is better to cut off offending parts of the body and be maimed than to go whole into hellfire.

This sounds like strange advice from the Lord Jesus Christ, who laid so much stress on perfection, said the speaker, and seems very harsh, but truth is always kind. One would not wish to continue living in a fool's paradise.

The speaker discussed the development of life from the denizens of the deep to the dwellers on land. When the first animals left the water to live on land they had to be modified. They had to have a different mode of breathing in order to assimilate the oxygen of the air. They had to become more compact and fitted with better controlled muscles because they had not the sea to support them as they floated around. They had to have protection from changes of climate because heat and cold follow each other more quickly in the air than in the water. Finally, they developed a sense of responsibility for their families which was unnecessary under water.

Similar to this, said Dr. Langfeldt, is the evolution of man from a natural to a spiritual life. The Oxygen of the Spirit of God pervades everything. It is the basis of love, trust, and hope. Man has to develop in order to capture this new atmosphere. Some would be out of place, gasping like fish out of water, if they had to function in business, citizenship, or church life in such an atmosphere.

A more controlled movement is necessary too. There are people who sprawl morally, like jelly fish. When they strike the sharp edges of decision they are torn to pieces. Movement on the terra firma of spiritual life is not flapping and drifting about. The young ruler who came to Jesus could have divested himself of the things which prevented his controlled movement. His possessions were too spread out, and he became entangled when he tried to exchange his morally fluid life for a decisive life, morally solid.

He wished to be an active citizen of the Kingdom of God, continued Dr. Langfeldt, but willing is necessary in spiritual existence. The spirit of the Lord Jesus was "I must be about my Father's business." Sell and give was the advice to the young man and it would be wise counsel to many, who are encumbered by the possession and customs of the world.

Better protection against changes of temperature is needed. The Savior was very sensitive to changes of spiritual warmth. When He descended from the Mount of Transfiguration and found His disciples helpless with a sick boy, He was chilled. In the upper room He felt the warmth of their loyalty, and later in Gethsemane He was affected by their sleeping, while He prayed. His spirit was not affected, however, and He went back to His prayers more resigned to death. Christians now are influenced by those around them. They are ardent with some, moderate with others, and cynical with others. They have no protection from indifference. The test is how they keep their warmth amid unfavorable surroundings.

In social relations, there is a change. The man who cares only for his own family might be said to have an aquatic conscience, said the speaker. He who works for the good of his country but despises others is like the wolf, who cares only for his own pack. The employer who is indifferent to the men in his shops has a nearsighted conscience. The churchman who opposes foreign missions has a parochial conscience. There is a development from the natural conscience of man to that of a son of God.

Many people are between the two lives, like amphibians, said the speaker, but One stands on the shore and calls frightened and doubtful moral amphibians to Him. He cannot relieve them of the necessity of struggling but can help them. He is the strongest incentive to struggle to get up and stay up, even if it means being merciless to the body in the determination to live at all costs.

Before starting his sermon the speaker referred to the many old friends he had met and also to those who had been called higher since the close of his pastorate. He said that it was with mingled joy and sorrow that he surveyed the congregation, and urged the members of the church to carry on the work so well begun by their predecessors.

OTTAWA, April 25. Canadian Press. — Details and technicalities of the school system of Upper Canada prior to Confederation, were under scrutiny to-day before the Supreme Court of Canada in the hearing of the Tiny Township Roman Catholic school trustees' petition of right.

"MATINEE LADIES," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Bob Ward, college student, gets work as a dancing partner for rich women in a New Jersey roadhouse. There he meets the prettiest, sweetest girl he has ever laid eyes on—Sally, the cigarette girl. Reciprocating his interest, she warns him against the mysterious and beautiful Mrs. Hammond, habitue of the Inn, who finds her "thrill" in "hunting" Bob for her lovenest apartment. Mrs. Smith, meeting Bob, is hostile; favoring Mannion, a rich suitor. Next day when Bob neglects Mrs. Hammond for Sally, they are rebuked.

CHAPTER XI—Continued

Both Sally and Bob flushed at Madame Leonine's rebuke. Hot rejoinders rose to Bob's lips, which Sally, anticipating by some prescience, forestalled by laying a restraining hand on him—a cool, flowerlike hand on a white stem of an arm.

Sally then hurried out to her vending; and Bob, after making ready, followed her, and went directly up to Mrs. Hammond, who was masking impatience and resentment under her inscrutable smile.

His physical attention to her during the dance left nothing to be desired; and his spirits had all the charm that, together with his handsomeness, had first captured Mrs. Hammond's attention. She was, in part, mollified; assuring herself that after all it would not be so much of a thrill for her, in her new role of hunter, if this good-looking and clean youth were to fall for her at once. That was what all the other men she had ever met had done. It was because Bob had at last introduced something different into her experience of, and with, males, that she had been so thrilled.

as one who could get any man, and that man quickly, was at stake. It was to be her brains, her wiles, pitted against Sally Smith's youth and innocence, with all the natural aids and alliances on Sally's side.

Mrs. Hammond grimly accepted the gauntlet, embraced the issue!

Wise in the ways of young men's emotions, she made no further verbal attempts to interest Bob. Instead, she confined herself strictly to making an alluring physical companion for him—in the dance, and at the table. She was coy and clever, ravishing and demure, scintillating and reticent, in turn and in varying degrees, until poor Bob's green head fairly spun with the wonder of her feminine charms.

When she talked, it was on things that lay dear to his heart. A smart and understanding comment on engineering; some anecdote of famous engineering personalities; an offhand and affable remark, in the manner of an intimate friend, about John Hays Hammond or an equally celebrated engineer; and, very cautiously, some adulatory observations about Sally Smith, in which she pretended the most gracious and benign interest.

Always, unconsciously, Bob found that the allusion to Sally would leave a rather hollow comparison in his inner mind of Sally as against Mrs. Hammond. What Bob did not appreciate was that this was a deliberate bit of wile on Mrs. Hammond's part!

Sally seemed such an undeveloped creature beside the erudite Mrs. Hammond, whenever Bob thought of, or watched them, together.

"I'm not being disloyal to Sally," he told himself uneasily, "but Delia Hammond is a decidedly worth while woman to know. I ought to be glad of her friendship. I can learn a lot from her. I must not be silly and sacrifice her nice, friendly interest in me just to humor a lot of idle, and no doubt vicious, gossip on the part of Mazie, and such fatheads!"

Thus thought Bob. And so he gave himself mentally to the fullest cultivation of Mrs. Hammond.

Sally watching, was troubled, covertly, by his mental immersion in Mrs. Hammond. Sally did not know a thing in the world about engineering. Up to now, she had probably thought that engineers were men who run railroad trains. But she did, by her womanly instinct, sense a bit of harm in the drift of Mrs. Hammond's tactics.

Mrs. Hammond, meanwhile, continued to weave her web. Her whole vibrant and beautiful body ached for some press of fire, some sign of passion, in Bob; but still he remained physically cold to her subtle bodily advances. Unresponding to her furtive trick of brushing her velvety hand across his cheek and neck, when beginning and ending the dances; to the sudden and fierce strainings of her firmly rounded body to his, while her eyes glowed like molten lava and her breath hissed.

Every physical wile she knew, Mrs. Hammond tried on Bob; and yet he did not melt into the fire she craved to ignite, did not fall before the passionate lances of her hunting. She was indeed getting her "thrill." She was becoming more and more every minute, the tiger woman.

But a tiger in body and blood, and a fox in brain!

Little by little she saw the inroads of her art. Bob was becoming more self-forgetful. There was a dull red in his cheeks, and a queer, uncertain smouldering in his puzzled eyes.

That much Delia Hammond saw, and then she deliberately broke off her hunting for the afternoon. Left him, with a flashing smile, and a brilliant mot, and a tantalizing flourish of her gorgeous body! Left him suspended, emotionally, in mid-air. Left him with a light nod and an alluring smile. Left him sorry to see her go; sorry that he was not going to ride home with her instead of with Sally.

Which was just how Mrs. Hammond meant to leave him; and which was a tribute to the inexorable success of her skill in the weaving of a cobweb of deepest passion—a cobweb with white, soft limbs for links, yielding, but never breaking!

The afternoon had sped by with lightning wings. So perfect a companion had Mrs. Hammond been that Bob, in the dazed aftermath that followed her departure as a warm glow lingers after the setting of a hot summer's day sun, felt that barely five minutes had elapsed since first he had joined her. And, he felt strangely incomplete; as if the going of Mrs. Hammond had frustrated some sort of a fulfillment; a fulfillment that he only subconsciously suspected the need of, and but vaguely understood.

Journeying homeward with Sally and his chums, Bob was quiet and preoccupied—a bit remote. The boys noticed it, and with the thoughtlessness of youth, joshed him:

"The vamp was sure flying bats around your bean this afternoon, old Left Tackle!" laughed Arch.

"Gee, neither of us could get a tumble from her. How did you manage to mesmerize her, Bob?"

"If there's anyone trying any mesmerism, it's her!" protested Sally. "Now quit teasing Bob, you fellows!" She stole a sidelong glance at Bob's uncertain face, then added austerely, "He doesn't enjoy dancing with such a brazen person as Mrs. Hammond, but he has to do what he is getting paid to do!"

It was on the tip of Bob's tongue to speak up in defense of Mrs. Hammond; but he just smiled lamely and said to Sally:

"Let the boys have their fun!"

And that was that! Until Bob and Sally, alone, were standing once more in front of the brownstone Smith dwelling on 103rd Street; when Sally said shrewdly:

"Mrs. Hammond has a better line than most of them, hasn't she, Bob?"

"She sure seems to be a brainy woman, Sally," he said, a note of enthusiasm creeping into his voice, and hurting Sally no end as she detected it. She managed to hide her trepidations, however, and listened with a bravely impersonal smile as he concluded: "She knows lots of interesting things and people."

"Maybe!" grudged Sally primly. She wanted to pout, but she felt that she did not know Bob well enough for that. "Yet she's really no better than the others. She's just a cheater, like the rest of them!"

Bob noted the adorable tilt of her cameo nose as she spoke; and thrilled to the cloud of combed-honey hair that waved under his chin as she tossed her exquisite little head. Suddenly the troubled fog in which the afternoon's experience with Mrs. Hammond had left him, cleared away. Sally Smith was his sun, and she shone again in all her virginal brightness to his admiring eyes.

DOCTORS ADVICE TO THE SICK

Wash Away All Poisons in Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowels Before Breakfast

To feel your best day in and day out, no more headaches, indigestion, gas on stomach, bilious attacks, rheumatism, kidney pains, bad breath, you must bathe your self inside. Start today by taking one Tanol Calomel tablet before meals or two at bedtime, then next morning drink a glass or two of hot water to wash from the stomach, liver, kidney and bowels all the previous day's waste, poison and toxins before more food is taken in. Get a few Tanol tablets from F. C. Weber, Charlotte street, Peterborough. They are harmless to take, do not nauseate, no bad after effects, no salts or seidlitz next morning, like ordinary calomel. Then you can eat better, sleep better, work better, think better and look better.

SNYDER DEATH SCENE REBUILT

State Attorney Tells Jury How the Murder Was Committed.

INSURANCE SOUGHT.

NEW YORK, April 25 (Canadian Press). — Albert Snyder, Queen's Village art editor, was "slated for death" on March 7 last, District Attorney Newcombe told the jury in the opening statement today.

"Mrs. Ruth Snyder and her lover, Henry Judd Gray, met in Manhattan that day," he said, "after Gray had bought a sash weight and chloroform in Kingston, N.Y.

"That day the death of Albert Snyder was decided on and the implements of murder were procured.

"Prior to that two insurance policies for $50,000 had been taken out on the life of Albert Snyder, with a double indemnity clause for death by violence.

"Albert Snyder never knew about those policies, gentlemen, but Mrs. Snyder knew of them, for she had taken them out, and Judd Gray knew of them, for he hopeed to benefit through his mistress.

"Gray then went away, but he returned on the night of the murder and hid in a darkened room while Snyder was put to bed by his wife.

"When the poor devil was asleep, Mrs. Snyder sneaked out of bed and told her skulking lover, 'Now is the time.'

"They kissed and then they went to Albert Snyder's room. They stunned him with the sash weight, they stuck chloroformed cotton up his nose, they strangled him with the picture wire.

"Then, gentleman, the job is done. Gray wore suede gloves and after the murder he takes these off and goes into the bath room where he sees blood on his shirt. They burn the shirt and her bloody gown. She lends him a blue shirt belonging to her husband.

"They they decide to make it look like a burglary and they upset everything in the house.

"They sat then in the house from three in the morning to six, plotting what, God knows.

"Before leaving, Gray binds and gags Mrs. Snyder to help out the burglary story. Then he takes a train for Syracuse."

Only when he got back to Syracuse, Newcomb said, did he discover a large spot of blood on his vest.

While the District Attorney shouted to the jury in a voice trembling with emotion, Mrs. Snyder and Gray sat close behind him, without any show of emotion stronger than very mild interest.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

When Bates' answer came, the audience, largely sympathetic with Cherry, breathed an audible sigh of relief, for Bates said, very distinctly:

"Miss Cherry used the present sense in every reference to Mr. Cluny on the night of November 25."

"Now, Mr. Bates, you have sworn that as soon as Miss Cherry was safely married to Mr. Wiley her agitation, her nervousness vanished, and that she was gay and light-hearted? You are sure of that point?"

"I am," Bates nodded, and his pale blue eyes blinked at Cherry behind his gold-rimmed spectacles. The girl smiled, fluttered her hand in a charming little gesture to show her gratitude.

"Mr. Bates, when you took the news to Mr. and Mrs. Wiley the next morning, that is, the morning of Friday, November 26, what was Mrs. Wiley's expression and manner upon learning of the death of Mr. Cluny?" Churchill asked boldly.

"She was horror-struck," Bates answered simply.

"Surprised?" Churchill drove home his point.

"Yes, sir. Dumfounded, horror-struck, I should say."

Banning objected furiously to this line of questioning, but the judge sustained Churchill, who went on triumphantly:

"Did her surprise seem genuine to you, Mr. Bates?"

"It did."

"You have been a minister of the gospel for how long, Mr. Bates?"

"For forty-one years," Mr. Bates answered with a slight flush of pride on his waxen old cheeks.

"You consider yourself a good judge of human nature?" Churchill asked sympathetically.

"I do."

"You liked Miss Cherry, believed what she said?" Churchill probed softly.

Before Banning could phrase his objection, the gentle voice of the preacher had answered clearly, "I did—and do."

"That is all, Mr. Bates," Churchill announced in a satisfied voice, as il the witness had been his, rather than the state's.

But both Cherry and Churchill looked far less happy during the examination of the farmer, Jefferson Anderson, by Banning.

Anderson, a tall, stoop-shouldered, gaunt-faced man, with walrus mustaches and broken, yellow teeth, showed himself almost bitterly inimical toward Cherry from the beginning of his examination. Under Banning's questioning, he told how Cherry and Chris had applied at a quarter to eleven for shelter for the night, how he had given them the "spare room," which he was in the habit of renting to transient guests, with meals included; how Cherry and Chris had retired immediately, refusing his wife's offer of a "pick up supper."

"What was the defendant's manner and attitude during the negotiations for a room?" Banning asked.

"Well, I can't say much about her attitude," the farmer said sourly, "but her manners was pretty bad—complained about the room being cold and the window being nailed shut—made me get a claw hammer and pry it open before she'd go to bed in it, spite of the fact that she was harping on it being so cold and all."

"Did she and her husband look like a happy bride and groom to you?" Banning smiled.

"Can't say as they did," the farmer grunted. "You mean, did they hug and kiss in front of me and the wife, they didn't."

The judge rapped sharply with his gavel as a woman giggled hysterically.

"All right, Mr. Anderson. Now tell the jury where your own bedroom is located in reference to the room occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Wiley," Banning demanded.

"Next to it," the farmer answered laconically.

"What sort of partition divides the two rooms?"

In anticipation of sensational developments, reporters summoned messenger boys, who came running, to hover over the backs of the writers' chairs, awaiting the sheaves of yellow copy paper.

Uncle Wiggily

By Howard . Garis

To-day's Bedtime Story.

UNCLE WIGGILY'S SCARE CROW

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

"Uncle Wiggily is waiting for you," said Boppy, the little wooden man, to his six little Wogglejigs when they came home from a little picnic in the woods one Saturday morning.

"Waiting for us?" exclaimed Bumple. "Why, is anything the matter? Have we done anything wrong?" For Daddy Boppy spoke rather solemn like.

"Well, didn't you promise Uncle Wiggily to help him make his garden so he could plant corn?" asked Boppy. "I think you did. And here you run away to the woods and forget all about helping Uncle Wiggily who has been so kind as to help Um and me unscramble you Wogglejigs a number of times. Why did you run away?"

"Oh!" gasped Bumple.

"Oh! Oh!" gasped Gazie.

"Oh! Oh! Oh!" sighed Dumple.

He stuck the note over the Bob Cat's fireplace.

"We forgot all about helping Uncle Wiggily plant corn!" cried all six Wogglejigs together.

Then the rabbit gentleman came hopping around the corner of the bungleump to see what all the noise was about. And when Boppy told of scolding the Wogglejig children just a little because they forgot their promise, Mr. Longears kindly said:

"I'll forgive them if they will now help me make my garden and plant the corn."

"Oh, we'll do that most gladly!" cried Gazie and all the others.

Now you might wonder how six little wooden Wogglejigs could help a rabbit gentleman make a corn garden, so I will tell you.

Each Wogglejig boy or girl had four wooden peg legs, you see, and when they ran, or walked, each leg made a round hole in the ground. Now corn, to grow, must be planted in holes in the earth, and it was Uncle Wiggily's idea that the Wogglejigs could make the corn holes for him and he would do the planting. But they ran away to the woods.

"However, it isn't too late, yet, to help me make my garden," said the rabbit gentleman as he led Bumple and the others over to the rabbit's own hollow stump bungalow. "Run around now, my dears, and make holes with your peg legs."

This was soon done, and in a little while the garden was ready to have corn planted in it. Uncle Wiggily dropped the kernels into the holes and then the Wogglejigs helped cover them with earth to keep them warm and moist which is needful to do if seeds and corn kernels are to grow.

"Now that is done, I must make a scare crow," said the rabbit.

"What's a scare crow?" asked Bumple.

"It's a ragged man stuffed with straw and set in the corn field to scare away the crows," answered the rabbit. "As soon as the crows know I have planted corn in my garden, they will come and dig it up to eat. But if I put a ragged, stuffed, straw man on guard he will scare the black birds away."

The Wogglejigs watched Uncle Wiggily make the scare crow and set it up near the fence in his corn field. Then the bunny hopped away and the Wogglejigs, having helped make the garden, ran off to play.

But some of the crows were wise old birds and when they had seen, from afar, Uncle Wiggily planting his corn, they flew down as soon as he had gone, and began to dig up the kernels.

"We're not afraid of a ragged man stuffed with straw!" cried the old birds when some of the young ones, who never before had seen a scare crow, were a bit frightened. "He can't hurt us." So the crows dug up a great deal of the corn. And when, next day, Uncle Wiggily had seen this, he said to himself:

"I'll fool those crows. I'll dress myself up in ragged clothes like a scare crow and stand in my field. When the crows fly back they will think only a straw man is there. And when they flock down I'll jump up and throw stones at them."

Next day back flew the crows. They saw what they thought was the same scare crow in the field.

"Pooh! Hoot! Scoo! We're not afraid of you—!" they cawed.

But suddenly Uncle Wiggily, in his raggedest clothes, leaped up from where he stood near the fence, pretending to be a scare crow. And he shouted, and flapped his paws and threw stones at the thieving crows so they were much alarmed and, cawing loudly, away they flew.

"We didn't know scare crows could come to life!" croaked the old crows. So they didn't come back to Uncle Wiggily's corn field and all was well.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

This wide-brimmed hat of navy blue hair is trimmed with pink camellias and is worn with a blue pendant.

There is a sort of double motion to consider in thinking of changing fashions. There is the steady onward motion—that has gone step by step from the cave-woman's rough coverings of wolf and bearskin to frocks of cob-webby tissue and flower-petal coloring of the present day. Then there is the other change that comes every year, spring, summer, autumn and winter. If we lived in a country that knew no such seasonal changes and looked to leadership to a country of similarly stable climate then we should know nothing of these seasonal changes that come as the wheels within wheels of fashion.

Certain fashion changes could hardly be expected to take place in the autumn and others could hardly come about in spring. We have talked much about the return of the wide-brimmed hat—and last summer hats that cast a shadow by their brims were seen both here and in Paris. But the progress of that fashion was nipped in the bud by the coming of autumn. It had not become well enough established to survive the first frost. Since the first of the year there has been talk of the return of the muff. But that is hardly a fashion that would have a chance at this time of the year.

Last summer some milliners hoped that the fashion for wide-brimmed hats would go further than it did. They have not given up this hope and from all that was seen at Palm Beach and other winter resorts in February and March the wide-brimmed hat is to be decidedly smart as warmer weather becomes general.

One thing seems settled and that is that when hats are wide they are decidedly wide. There seems to be but little prospect for the hat that possesses just a moderately wide brim.

PEG O' MY HEART

CAMPBELLFORD, April 25.—The Regent Theatre was packed to the doors on Friday evening to greet the West Hill Tennis Club of Belleville, who presented "Peg O' My Heart," a three act comedy, under the supervision of Miss Jessie B. Tuite. This play was brought to Campbellford under the auspices of the Campbellford Tennis Club.

The characters of the play were as follows:

Mrs. Chichester—Myrtle V. Gunn.
Butler—William N. Hurst.
Ethyl Chichester—Bessie Vandewater.
Alaric Chichester—Mathew R. Morrison.
Chris Brant—Jack Andrews.
Peg—Anna I. Ashley.
Montgomery Hawkes — Harry N. Jones.
Maid—Edythe Colclough.
Jerry—Gerald A. Woodley.

Act I—The Coming of Peg.

The scene opens on an English drawing room where Mrs. Chichester and her daughter and son are discussing the distressing news they have just received of the failure of the bank in which their money is invested. Ethyl is infatuated with a married man, Chris Brant, and is on the verge of going away with him when a strange girl leading a large dog, comes into the room unannounced. The lawyer, Mr. Hawkes, appears, with the will of Mrs. Chichester's brother, Nathaniel Kingsford, who has provided 1,000 pounds a year for anyone who will take Peg O'Connell, his niece, and bring her up as a lady. Mrs. Chichester agrees to take her niece for the sake of the handsome stipend and the family are in constant fear that someone will see the tomboy Peg. While the family is away Alaric's friend Jerry, who is really Sir Gerald, appears and becomes infatuated with Peg.

Act II—The Rebellion of Peg.

Peg is very attractive in her new gowns and when Chris Brant calls to see Ethyl he also tries to flirt with Peg but is rewarded with a slap. Ethyl has always treated Peg with disdain and this worries Peg, for she is a loveable girl. Jerry comes in and asks Mrs. Chichester for her consent to take the two girls to a dance, but she refuses so Peg decides to run away and she and Jerry go to the dance. When they return Peg finds Ethyl dressed for travelling and when she insists on finding out where she is going finds she is eloping with Chris Brant. Peg at once raises a scene and when her aunt appears she has Ethyl's coat and hat on, and tries to explain that she was out and Ethyl had come downstairs and discovered her. Jerry also comes and takes the blame for taking Peg to the dance.

Act III—Peg O' My Heart.

Mrs. Chichester urges Alaric to marry Peg for her money but is promptly refused by Peg. Alaric is very glad for he is really in love with another girl. When Mr. Hawkes arrives, Peg tells him all her troubles and decided to leave the place. Jerry now appears and tells Peg he is executor of her uncle's will and also tells the Chichesters the bank will again open its door for business so their fortune is now safe. Of course everything ends happily for all, the Chichesters again have their fortune restored, and Jerry proposes to Peg and is accepted.

During the intermission, Miss Margaret Dickson, accompanied by Miss Gertrude Maynard, pianist, favored the audience with the following selections: 'The Thrush's Love Song," "Enchantment,' 'an English melody, "Pastorale," "The Land of Nod."

At the close of the programme, the Campbellford Tennis Club entertained the Belleville visitors at supper in the Clifton dining hall, Tice street, where an excellent supper was provided and a good time enjoyed by all.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

TUESDAY, APRIL 26, 1927

This is rather a threatening day, according to astrology, which finds certain adverse influences of the stars rather strong.

There should be fair profit from commercial transactions early in the morning, but it is well to avoid important deals today.

There is a sign supposed to encourage deceit and double-dealing and for this reason trading is hazardous while this rule prevails.

Much secret business is indicated in big organizations which will plan measures for public good and keep watch of menacing conditions of every sort.

Holy wars are foretold between societies and associations of opposing faiths. Church denominations will let prejudice guide them unless they are cautious in averting wrong leadership.

This is read as an inauspicious day for making trips on the water. It is not favorable for sea voyages, inasmuch as severe storms are forecast.

Agitation affecting oil interests and oil production may be expected in the coming summer when prices of the various products may advance.

Again increasing in the cost of living is indicated. Prices of food and clothing will increase, if the stars are rightly read.

This is not a favorable rule for financial transactions and borrowers especially may find it disappointing.

Advertising now will be discussed as never before and new methods will be introduced, the seers prophesy.

There is a sign denoting agitation regarding horse-racing, which may be the subject of widespread revival of interest.

Great demand for horses and mule is prognosticated, but buyers will belong to foreign countries.

Persons whose birthdate it is are lucky where work or travel are concerned and this year should be most fortunate for them.

Children born on this day are likely to have artistic talents and should be educated with great care.

AROUND THE CITY

A chimney fire at 12.45 at 189 Mark Street was the only call the Brigade had over the week-end.

Chief Gimblett told The Examiner this morning, that if a request had been sent by Allan Mann for aid on Saturday night there might have been a possibility of saving the house.

THE EXAMINER PICTURE PAGE

After a six-hour artillery bombardment for a number of days, the Canadian corps in command of Lieut.-Gen. Sir Julian Byng, shown on the LEFT, made their immortal charge on Vimy Ridge when they took every defense of the enemy in an hour and a half, ten years ago. It was one of the most distinctive Canadian engagements of the war. The Germans had lost one of their most impregnable strongholds. That they realized the seriousness of their loss was shown by their numerous counter attacks made later and much bombardment. In the foreground of the photo above Germans are shown coming out of their dugouts and surrendering to the Canadians who are pressing on. The picture is one of the Canadian official war photos, copyright.

Runners are shown here "getting set" for the great South African diamond rush, which started on March 4 and attracted 25,000 contestants, at the Grasfontein Farm in the Litchenburg district. Many of the larger diamond firms hired professional runners to stake claims for them. Note the stakes in the hands of the runners. The other picture shows a part of the enormous crowd attending the exciting ceremonies. Several days before the rush it was announced that diamonds worth £50,000 had been found in one hole on this farm. Later reports indicate that the field has not panned out as expected. Though the start pictured above was fair, it was intimated that some other method would be adopted in future.

LAYS CORNER STONE.

Mayor William Hale Thompson, RIGHT, returned for the third time as Chicago's executive, casting his vote in the Windy City contest recenty, in which armed forces patrolled the streets to guard against lawless outbreaks. Thompson, who says he's a 100 per cent. American, in a post victory statement voiced his "hate" for England. He will have all British "propaganda" removed from school text books, he says, and in no particular would he ever don the knee breeches of King George. International Champions Lose Double-Header to Orioles

CARDIFF WINS ENGLISH CUP BY SCORE 1-0

For the First Time in History Trophy Goes To Wales.

KING ATTENDS GAME.

Was Recipient of Loyal Ovation From Many Thousands Assembled.

LONDON, April 25 (Canadian Press cable)—St. George's Day passed this year with the rose of England drooping and the national emblem of Wales triumphant when, in the annual battle for the English Cup Saturday, Cardiff City defeated Arsenal by a score of one goal to nothing and, for the first time in history, took the famous trophy to Wales. It was a great day for the land of the leek and the number of the Cymri who cheered the victory of Cardiff at the Wembley stadium ran into many thousands. They made it a festive occasion and the tier upon tier of seats around the famous bowl was a riot of color with the streamers of the rival teams flaunted gaily by their hopeful supporters. King George was present, arriving about half an hour before the kick-off, and His Majesty was the recipient of a loyal ovation. The intervening time between the king's arrival and the opening of the game was passed in community singing, in which the Welshmen excelled.

Hard and Fast.

The game, as expected, was hard and fast. This was the second visit of Cardiff City to the Wembley Stadium in three years and it was early apparent that they were in no mind to the submit to the same fate that befell them when Sheffield United nosed them out of the race by one goal to nil. At the beginning both teams were visibly nervous, but encouraged by the cheers of their supporters they both recovered their confidence and played up magnificently. Arsenal started out to attack, regarding this as the best mode of defence and almost immediately Farquharson was kept busy defending his nets. Several free kicks to the Londoners kept the Welshmen in hot water, but they survived and follow the initial assault they carried the game down to Arsenal's end. The metropolitans had been given many opportunities to score, but they lacked that finish which means goals. Still they continued to batter away at the Cardiff defence, and only the sterling work of the Welsh backs supporting Farquharson kept Cardiff's sheet stainless. Time and again Arsenal swept down on the Welshmen's goal, giving Cardiff little to do but defend, but at every turn the players from the principality were found equal to the occasion.

It was a hard, rugged game, one in which many knocks were given and taken, and by half time both elevens were showing signs of the wear and tear. At the interval the deadlock was unbroken and no score had been made.

Score Only Goal

The resumption saw Cardiff getting in some attacking and their forwards gave Lewis some work in the Arsenal nets. However, the advantage of the exchanges were all going to the Londoners and they returned vigorously only to be broken against the stonewall defence of Nelson and tower of strength, the Welsh captain playing the game of his life. The Watson. In this Neehor was also a tower of strength, the Welsh captain playing the game of his life. The breach came nearly half an hour after the second half had been under way, and the break went to Cardiff. It was the eWlshmens centre-forward, Ferguson, who scored the goal which brought victory to the principality. The Cardiff forwards swept upfield, but were met by Parker who cleared. A scramble ensued in front of Arsenals goal and the ball was swung out to Ferguson. A terrific shot was sizzled at Lewis, who made a frantic effort to save. The Arsenal goalie managed to touch the ball, but the force of the shot swung him round and the leather went sailing into his own net.

The score was the signal for a terrific demonstration on the part of the Welshmen.

Unsubdued, Arsenal again forced the pace, but in the closing minutes Cardiff played safe, apparently conscious that there would be no more scoring in the game, the Welshmen were satisfied to kick into touch, and the last few minutes of play degenerated into a series of long exchanges. There was no further scoring, and by the margin of the only goal of the game Cardiff took the cup.

The trophy and the medals were presented to the players by His Majesty, with the playing ground black with Cardiff supporters who continued their enthusiastic demonstration long after the teams had departed.

MASSEYS BEAT UNITED TEAM

Experienced Players Won By Five Goals To One Saturday.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS.

To soccer fans the exhibition game betwen the Masseys and the United produced new talent in abundance, in fact, as one official stated, "I could put two elevens on the field instead of one, if pants and boots could be handed out wholesale, at any rate, the new aggregation put up an excellent game although the score was five goals to one against them. There were many experienced players on the winning side, while the losers included new comers, juniors and juveniles. Nick Misnar, a Roumanian, made a creditable playing debut while playing forward but filled the custodian's position in the second half.

Many Improvements.

On King Edward Park the City Council have made many improvements for the convenience of the soccer players and fans. The ruts on the playing pitch have been filled in with earth, the trees trimmed on both sides of the field which used to prevent the ball making its intended flight in the air. Dressing accommodation has been provided the teams, with many conveniences that had been necessary many years ago, in fact the executive board deserve credit for a perfect playing field with new goal posts, regulation goal nets, private dressing accommodation, and many other improvements. All over the park new sitting benches have been provided for the benefit of the public.

First Half.

At the outset, both elevens started at a fast pace, with Willis missing by inches, likewise Mitchell doing the same at the other end. After ten minutes' play, Westlake punted into goal when the custodian made a poor clearance that let Beggs tap the ball into the net. A breakaway on the extreme right by the United had the Massey defence in a quandary that finally was stopped through Misnar being brought down. He took the free kick that went past. Again they returned through the centre half—Waddell—who is clever on the ball, and in anticipation of the play. Play ran from end to end until another mistake by the goal keeper of the United allowed another counter before halftime. Masseys 2, United 0.

Second Half.

On resuming, the respite showed that the boys had gained new vigor. The Masseys, with the more experienced players adding to their score through Beggs, G. Logan and Willis during the last forty five minutes. Jim Mitchell scored a beautiful goal on individual play for the United. Masseys 5; United 1.

United: Watkins, goal; Curtis and Asa Downer, backs; Watkins, Waddell and Carmichael half backs; Mitchell, Buchan, Misnar, Lewiston and Lewiston, forwards.

Masseys: Fowler, goal; Wade and Blowers, backs; W. Logan, Westlake and Laidler, half-backs; Willis, Nicholson, W. Logan, Beggs and Foster, forwards.

Referee, John Ward; Linesmen, A. McKinley and J. Hodgson.

BOXING HONORS FOR ONTARIO

Earl Pickering Captures Bantamweight Title in Final From Christie.

BURTON OUTPOINTED.

LONDON, Ont., April 25 (Canadian Press) — The Ontario boxing championships were decided at the Armouries here on Saturday night and it was nearly midnight when Earl Pickering of St. Agnes A.C., Toronto, captured the bantamweight title in the final against Harry Christie of the London Garrison.

The boxing was of high order throughout and in some instances the "rough and tumble" game gained the decision over the better boxer, but on the whole the fans undoubtedly received more than their money's worth.

The new champions, some of whom will be sent to Winnipeg for the Olympic trials when the Dominion championships will be contested for, follow:

Flyweight—Steve Rocco, St. Agnes, A.C., Toronto.

Bantamweight—Earl Pickering, St. Agnes A.C., Toronto.

Featherweight — Sam Hackett, Classic A.C., Toronto.

Lightweight — William McGrath, Unattached, Toronto.

Welterweight—Charles Woolley, St. Thomas.

Middleeweight—Frank Brown, Orange B.S., Toronto.

Lightheavyweight—Sergeant Harry Cobb, Camp Borden.

Open Proceedings

Five bantams, reserved from the Friday competitions, opened the proceedings and Bobby Crothers of Toronto eliminated Gifford of Lions Club, St. Catharines, in the first clash of the evening. The judges however withheld their decision until an extra two minutes were fought.

Earl Pickering outpointed Bobby Burton of Hamilton in every round of the three in the second bout. Later in the card Harry Christie of London qualified to meet Pickering in the final, with a close decision over Crothers. The latter would have been a much better boxing opponent than Christie as he was not a match for Pickering in the final, proving nothing more than a shock absorber.

Billy Putwaine, a great favorite with the fans here, lost the decision to William McGrath, also a Toronto boy, in the first of the lightweight semi-finals. Putwain the smaller of the two failed to reach McGrath as consistently as he hammered Pete Lang of St. Thomas at the last tourney here. McGrath, built along the Jimmy Brady lines, found Putwain sturdy but rather easy to reach and on several occasions rocked the little hercules with heavy blows.

E. Roy Stephenson, however, was returned an easy winner for the Toronto Orange Boxing Club under whose colors Putwain also fought, when he had William A. Grant of Dundas groggy at the close of the third round.

Given Decision

McGrath and Stephenson then met in the titular bout. McGrath won his bout in three rounds but the judge wanted to see more of it and then ordered an extra two minutes. Stephenson almost held McGrath to an even score in the additional round and when McGrath was given the decision the Orange boy was not satisfied and wanted to clean up after the bell. He however apologized. McGrath was the aggressor throughout and earned the verdict without giving Stephenson time to get excited.

Willie Ferguson, Lions Club, St. Catharines, former flyweight champion of Scotland, for the sixth time was outpointed by Steve Rocco, St. Agnes A.C., Toronto, but the margin on this occasion was greater than of previous clashes. Rocco, a hard hitting and ruggedly set up boy was the master of the tiny Scot, piling up points throughout the three rounds.

Sam Hackett, Toronto Classics, eliminated Bobby Lawrence of the Orange Boxing School, Toronto, proving entirely too shifty, winning the featherweight title.

Sergeant H. J. Chevier, of the Royal Canadian Corps Signals, of Ottawa, won in another extra round affair over Percy Hunt of the Canadian Fusiliers, London, to qualify for the final of the welterweight title.

Chevier, a heady and hard hitting boxer has had some ring experience and should not have asked to go further than three rounds to gain the decision. In the extra two minutes Hunt rallied and fighting at his best gained almost enough to give him the verdict but lost out during the dying moments.

Charles Woolley, a short but well set up St. Thomas boy and a much stronger give-and-take exponent than a boxer eliminated Harry Sacks, Leonard A.C., Toronto, in the other semi-final, winning two of the three rounds.

Welterweight Bout

In the final for the welterweight championship Chevier and Woolley brought the fans to their feet. Woolley's cyclonic lunges which usually landed on Chevier's back with a smack that almost echoed through the building were plenty of cause for hilarity and these attacks usually followed after Chevier had landed heavily to the head. There was no comparison as to boxing ability. Woolley proved amply tough and he must have been given the surprise of his young life when he gained the decision ever Chevier for the provincial title.

Frank Brown and Vic Hall fought fairly even for the three rounds in the middleweight final. Hall, the Stratford boy disclosed a two-handed defense that proved troublesome to the more aggressive Toronto boxer. In an extra two minutes round Brown wore his man out.

Harry Cobb, lightheavyweight champion, defended his title, defeating Archie Cross, Lions Club, St. Catharines in three rounds. They both were in the same stage of the Ontario championships a year ago. Cross showed improvement and shook Cobb several times but not nearly as accurate as Cobb with telling and point-scoring thrusts.

Dutch Henry Allows 11 Hits, One of Which Was a Homer.

CARDINALS WIN.

NEW YORK, April 25 (Canadian Press).—Grover Cleveland Alexander, the grand old man of the Cardinals, worked on the mound at St. Louis yesterday and defeated his former Chicago Cub team mate, Vic Aldridge, of the Pirates, in a pitching duel. The score was 2 to 1. Traynor's homer in the 7th saved the Pirates from a shutout. Both hurlers had perfect support.

At New York the Giants outslugged the Braves and came out on top, 12 to 8. Dutch Henry went the route for the home team, although he allowed 11 hits, one of which was a homer by Brown.

The Brooklyn Robins played ragged ball before their own fans and lost to Philadelphia, 5 to 1. Dazzy Vance, darling of the Brooklynites, worked eight innings and struck out seven. Carlson kept the Robins' safeties well scattered.

The Chicago Cubs took a game from the Cincinnati Reds yesterday, 5 to 3. Superior hitting gave the Cubs the game. They jumped on Nehf in the first inning and he was replaced by Mays, whose batting and fielding was a feature of the game.

SMACKS HOMER FOR THE YANKS

Ruth Helped Club Along in 6-2 Victory at Washington.

HOMER FOR MEUSEL.

NEW YORK, April 25 (Canadian Press).—Babe Ruth smacked a homer at Washington yesterday and the Yankees took the Sunday game by a score of 6 to 2. Meusel helped the New York team with a circuit blow. The Yanks scored five times in the sixth inning. Pinch Hitter Durst knocking a triple with the bases filled.

Detroit bunched hits at Chicago, and with a daring double steal by Fothergill and Blue, defeated Chicago 4 to 3. Holloway held Chicago to 3 hits until the ninth, when the Sox rallied, but fell one run short of tying the score.

St. Louis batted Levsen out of the box in the second inning at Cleveland, scoring five runs and winning, 9 to 4. Sensational work in the outfield by E. Miller and Rice killed Cleveland's rallies.

There were only three games scheduled in the American League.

SKEETERS WIN DOUBLE HEADER

Parks Saves New Jersey From Tight Pinch in the Ninth.

READING LOST.

NEW YORK, April 25 (Canadian Press).—The International League yesterday staged seven games, of which Toronto Leafs, the champions, lost two. The Leafs went down before the Baltimore Orioles, who supplied a combination of good mound work and timely hitting. The scores were 4 to 3 and 6 to 4, Andy Chambers won a hurling duel with Fischer in the first session with seven and six hits allowed, respectively. Vincent came to the mound for the Orioles when George Larnshaw proved not so good in the second game. Vincent held the champions hitless for the remainder.

The Skeeters took both ends of a double-header from Buffalo at Jersey City by scores of 7 to 5 and 7 to 6. Buffalo loaded the bases, with one out, in the ninth inning of the second fracas, but Parks relieved Gordonier and retired the side without any scoring.

Syracuse and Newark divided their games at the Bear Garden, the visitors losing the first, 7 to 5, and taking the second, 12 to 6. The Bears fell heavily on the stars in the opening inning of the first game and scored five runs, which was enough until the eighth, when they added a couple. The Stars found their batting eyes and pounded three pitchers for eighteen hits in the second session.

Rochester defeated Reading, 4 to 3. Reading could get but three hits off McLaughlin.

MISSISSIPPI FLOOD WORST IN HISTORY

2,000 Marooned On Levee Face Death From Lapping Waters.

HUNDRED DROWNED.

Over Nine Thousand Square Miles of River's Valley Flooded.

HELENA, Ark., April 25.—Marooned on a crumbling levee two and a half feet wide, doomed to sure death if not rescued within twelve hours, 2,000 refugees were screaming for help at Knowlton's Landing, 20 miles south of here, as raging waters of the Mississippi River yesterday continued to lash away inches of the levee at a time.

Such was the critical condition decribed by R. P. Beith, farmer, who came 50 miles in his motor boat to Helena River officials for immediate aid.

The steamer Wabash, the only large boat available for rescue work at the present, left the landing last night with 750 of the refugees—all she could carry—leaving 2,000 persons behind, said Beith.

Sinking Described

The Wabash had not arrived here yesterday, but was bound from Knowlton's Landing with a load of refugees, according to a radio report received from her.

Beith described the sinking of the Government motor launch Pelican, in which nineteen persons were drowned. Only two members of the crew were saved and the rest went to the bottom of the river along with a load of refugees, he said.

Scene of Desolation

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 25 (A.P.).—A Sabbath scene of death and desolation was presented yesterday over more than nine thousand square miles of the richest lands in Mississippi and Arkansas as the flood waters of half a dozen mighty streams continued their relentless flow to the sea.

At least one hundred human lives had been snuffed out by the swirling, plunging waters since the rivers started tearing from their beds three weeks ago and the fate of other hundreds was left in doubt.

Hour by hour as the walls of water moved across the two States, more thousands were made homeless; additional crops were destroyed and livestock, homes, barns and property of almost every description were swept along in the maelstrom.

Warnings Issued

Urgent warnings to the people in the lower Mississippi delta to flee for their lives from the Mississippi flood waters sweeping down toward Vicksburg were issued during the day by army engineers and the exodus began before nightfall.

Far across country in Lafayette County, Arkansas, others were moving out to high lands before the waters of the Red River, which broke through the main levee at Findley Bend early in the day, with the prospect that an additional 20,000 acres of land would be inundated.

Southward in Louisiana, the effects of the flood were beginning to be felt as backwaters of smaller streams emptying into the Mississippi encroached upon the lowlands. Many inhabitants were being driven from their homes in Concordia parish, and every ferry entering Natchez, from Vidal, La., carried refugees.

Local radio enthusiasts who were tuned in last evening to station WSM, Nashville, Tennessee, experienced a thrill at the impromptu concert also the broadcasting throughout the evening of Red Cross collections for a fund for the Mississippi flood sufferers. Up to 10.30 o'clock the sum collected at Nashville exceeded $6,500.

WONDERFUL AUTOMOBILE ROADS.

The most wonderful automobile road in America, the Banff-Windermere Highway 104 miles in length, is in danger of losing its well earned laurels by the opening of another, and if possible, more wonderful road, the Great Divide Highway between Field and Lake Louise, which was completed last summer. But Prof. Laird's tour "Across Canada and Back," which leaves Toronto by Canadian Pacific Railway July 25th, 1927, for a 21 day trip, includes both these drives in his itinerary, and they are only a small part of the wonders to be seen. There is Banff, the beautiful; Lake Louise, the Pearl of the Rockies; Emerald Lake, second only to Lake Louise in beauty; the Yoho Valley, one of the most marvelous Valleys in the world, with Takakkaw Falls over 1,200 feet in height pouring into it, and all the magnificence and grandeur of 600 miles of Rocky Mountain scenery. Vancouver and Victoria, those marvelous Pacific Coast cities, as well as Winnipeg, Calgary and Edmonton, are only a few of the places to be visited, and three great bodies of water are also on the route, the Great Lakes, the Kootenay Lakes and the Strait of Georgia between Vancouver and Victoria.

Write for illustrated booklet of this marvelous trip to W. Fulton, District Passenger Agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, Toronto, or to Prof. Sinclair, Macdonald College, P.O., Que. 5-8-12-16-20-25-29.

FLOOD WATERS SPREADING OUT TO NEW AREAS

Many Lives Lost In Delta—Official Estimate is 200.

DISEASE SPREADS.

Strenuous Methods Adopted To Prevent Epidemics Among Refugees.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 25. Canadian Press. — The dark record of Mississippi valley desolation was continued to-day as the flood waters extended to new towns and farming communities. The death list, known to embrace at least 100, mounted as news trickled in from the stricken districts. Official estimates placed the probable death toll in the Mississippi delta area at 200. The fate of many others in the far flung sectors was doubtful.

100,000 Homeless.

With more than 100,000 persons already homeless and the refugee camps swelling almost hourly in population, grave fears were felt by officials for the inhabitants of the delta country between Greenville and Vicksburg. Thousands had been rescued from perilous situations while other thousands were reported still marooned. Throughout the flooded valley fleets of boats were taking refugees from the levee tops, trees, house tops, knolls, Indian mounds, and the upper stories of dwellings.

Epidemic Feared.

Disease continued to spread rapidly among the refugees quartered in some Arkansas camps, while strenuous measures were adopted to insure against epidemics. Anti-typhoid and smallpox vaccine were rushed to every camp. Orders have been issued that all drinking water must be boiled and vaccination has been made compulsory.

SECRETARY HOOVER ARRIVES

Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover arrived here this morning, as President Coolidge's representative, in the direction of relief work for the flood stricken Mississippi Valley. The Secretary was accompanied by Major General Jadwin, Chief of the Army Engineering Corps, and James L. Fiezer, Acting-Chairman of the Red Cross.

Mr. Hoover planned to go into conference with represntatives of the Red Cross, government officials and local relief workers, to arrange the programme for relief work. Following the conference Secretary Hoover and General Jadwin planned a week's inspection of the flood along the Mississippi river between here and New Orleans.

Two phases of the Red Cross' relief programme were under discussion at to-day's conference, the administration of the relief work and the complete formulation of the rescue and aid programme.

$50 MONTHLY GIVEN OFFICER BY EXPORTERS

Sub-Collector at Kingsville Was Given Tips, Witnesses Say.

FOR SERVICES.

Head Of Firm Says Money Was Not Paid As a Bribe.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 25 (Canadian Press)—Sub-collector Pearsall of the out port of Kingsville, Ontario, near here, was paid $50 each month as "a tip" over an unspecified period by the liquor export firm of Hoffman and Dunford. This was declared on the witness stand before the Royal Customs Commission this morning by L. Hoffman, senior partner of the firm.

"You knew you had no right to bribe a customs officer?" asked N. W. Rowell, Commission counsel. "I didn't bribe him," said the witness. "It was just a tip we gave him for coming down to the dock in his car and for his good services to us."

Sometimes he had to pay for a taxi to come down, Mr. Pearsall said. The office was a mile and a half from the dock he said.

"These men contended that they were held up for graft everywhere they went," Henry Russell, Windsor accountant, told the Commission. He was referring to the export liquor firm of Hoffman & Dunford, Kingsville, Ontario, for whom he did some work. The senior partner of this firm, said Mr. Russell, had explained a $50 cheque standing in the books of the company as a payment to a customs officer. There were other $50 cheques, but this was the only one explained to him in that way.

Prior to the examination of Mr. Russell, W. C. Dunford of the liquor firm testified. He proved a most reluctant witness when Mr. Rowell turned his attention to the $50 payments. They were listed under the head of "advertising."

"You might as well tell it now as later," Commissioner Wright finally told the witness. "It looks as if you are holding something back."

Still the witness remained silent.

"I must ask the Commission to direct the witness to answer," said Mr. Rowell.

"It's a kind of hard question to put to me," protested Mr. Dunford.

"It is not your fault you have to answer," Chief Commissioner Brown said. "We simply ask you to tell the truth. You are directed to answer."

At last Mr.Dunford said that he had been informed by Mr. Hoffman that the $50 payment was for "expenses to a customs officer."

Mr. Rowell produced a list sohwing Mr. Rowell produced a list showing ford did not know what it was. Mr. Russell, the accountant, admitted that he had not made very close inquiries into the payments. "I did not inquire very closely into this matter because I just didn't want to know who the payments were going to," he said.

Sharp Break In New York Stopped By Buying Move

NEW YORK, April 25 (Canadian Press).—The Stock Market appeared to be on the verge of a sharp break this morning, when scores of issues were carried down two to thirteen points in one of the widest selling movements in recent weeks, but steadied after midday, when buying support appeared for many stocks. Mississippi River floods and the Chinese situation were blamed for the selling. Renewal of selling pressure against the oils followed the publication of the quarterly report of the Marland Company, which showed earnings of only six cents a share as against $1.79 in the first quarter of last year. Steels were liquidated freely on reports of a further decline in demand, but United States Steel Common was fairly well supported on the possibility of some special dividend development at to-morrow's meeting.

South-Western Rails, which were among the strongest stocks in the market last week, fell back rather sharply. Speculation for the advance was not entirely abandoned, however, aggressive buying operations taking place in Lima Locomotive, United States Cast Iron Pipe, General Electric, and International Nickel, but the early gains were not maintained. The weekly report of Federal Reserve brokers loans to be issued after the close of the market is expected to show an increase of about $20,000,000.

Mining Stock Prices Firm In Active Market Session

TORONTO, April 25 (Canadian Press)—The market was active and prices firm on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day. Dome Mines featured the list with an upward movement of 25 cents a share to 8.65. Hollinger strengthened 10 cents to 20.85. McIntyre continued to display firmness and advanced 25 cents to 26.25. Lake Shore and Wright Harbreaves each declined five cents to 19.10 and 11.10 respectively. Barry Hollinger was active and firm at 45 3-4, a gain of 3-4. Beaver dropped two to 89. Canadian Lorraine moved up 2 1-2 to 29 while Amulet gained six cents to 1.15. Nickel eased 1.25 to 59.00. Central Manitoba Gold moved up two to 1.34.

General Trend Downward On Toronto Stock Exchange

TORONTO, April 25 (Canadian Press) — Stocks were reactionary on the market of the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day and consequently the major portion of the issues making their appearance on the board sold at lower levels. International Nickel was the leader in volume and, after an accumulation of buying orders over the week-end caused it to move up to 60 1-4, profit taking took place and it sagged to 57 3-4 to recover slightly at the close to 58 3-4, a decline of one point. Massey-Harris was the next most active and it sold off one to 36 1-8. The preferred was off 1-4. Brazilian Traction was an exception to the general trend when it advanced 1 1-4 to 137 1-2. The preferred was up 1-2. The distillery stocks were irregular. Seagram eased off 3-8 to 24 5-8. Alcohol remained firm at 28 3-8, while Walker and G. and W. each gained 1-2 to 44 7-8 and 57 respectively. Davies "A" declined two to 31. Canadian Oil moved up one to 149, as did British Columbia Fishing to 29.

Wheat Advances Sharply On Upturn At Liverpool

CHICAGO, April 25. Canadian Pres. — Wheat scored a sharp advance here to-day, influenced by an unlooked for steep upturn of quotations at Liverpool. A big decrease in the amount of wheat on ocean passage was noted. Starting at 5-8 to 1 1-2 gain, Chicago wheat held near to initial top figures. Corn, oats and provisions were also firmer, corn opening unchanged to 5-8 cent higher and subsequently ascending all around.

Ding-Dong!

The old school bells all over the province pealed forth again this morning calling the children back to their studies after the Easter vacation.

The feet trailed more heavily up that old path to the school door than they did when they left it ten days ago. There was no shouting and yelling as the youth apepared to be submitting to something which he detested with all his might, and why wouldn't he? Spring is here, although the weather is still quite chilly, but he has caught the spring fever in his system and with it he sees no pleasure in going back to school.

The boys would much rather play ball on the vacant lots and the girls would sooner be skipping.

Then there is that which the child has hanging over his head from the beginning of September to the end of June, the final examinations, when he has to give his account of his year's work. So, is it any wonder young Ontario went tardily to school this morning?

QUEBEC LEADER OF OPPOSITION OPENS CONTEST

RURAL CREDITS.

Favors "Real" Maintenance By the Government of Highways.

QUEBEC, April 26. — (Canadian Press.)—Arthur Sauve, leader of the provincial opposition in the province of Quebec, opened his election campaign here and presented to the electors the programme which he intended to carry out should his party be elected to power.

Capital would be protected, Mr. Sauve said, but not at the expense of the less well-to-do citizen. Rural credits, under a sound scheme would be devised. There would be awards to encourage farmers and other workers with families of ten children or more. The opposition favored 'real" maintennace by the government of the highways; and in industry the nationalization of some of the water powers left, so as to cheapen electricity. Concerning forests and hydro ,the Conservatives thought the balance should be kept for Quebec, exploited by Quebec captial, or nationalized. Mr. Sauve declared for more aid for the rural schools, and continued aid for the higher schools and universities.

In the civil service there would be reduction of personnel, but better salaries for those remaining to be taken on. The liquor commission would be kept, but the Conservatives would institute "a probe not only into the operations of the commission here, but also in Europe, to see where the profit goes and if certain favorites are too much favored."

Mr. Sauve declared for observation of the law in regard to Sunday work.

Interesting Talk on New Ontario at Home and School Meeting.

An open meeting of the Prince of Wales Home and School Association was held in the kindergarten room of the school last evening, with a good attendance. An interesting address was given by Mr. F. E. Kerr, who described a recent trip made by him through Northern Ontario, illustrating his talk by lantern slides showing mining operations in the northern section of the province. During the evening, the school orchestra rendered a fine programme of musical selections. The president, Mrs. G. Worboy, occupied the chair.

France Seeking Descendents Of The Normans; England Unable To Find Any Among Nobility

LONDON, April 26.—The French Government is seeking real descendants of the comrades of William the Conqueror. It wishes to invite them to participate in the celebration of the 900th birthday of the Conqueror.

The completeness with which the Norman conquerors of England were themselves conquered is shown by the fact that in this country, so far, no one has actually qualified for the invitation. Although there are many people with Norman blood in their veins, about the only authentic Norman traces in England are linguistic.

"The Norman blood has descended," said yesterday's Evening Standard, "to plenty of people in this country, but it is exceedingly hard to identify them, and those who "claim it are the least likely to possess it. Noble families have, naturally, the best kept genealogies, but these date as a rule only from their ennoblement or from their reaching a certain pitch of wealth and importance.

"We laugh at the American descendants of the Mayflower immigrants, but there are certainly many more Americans who can boast their descent from the Puritans and prove their boast than there are English who can substantiate their pretensions to descent from the Crusaders."

GOVERNMENT SPEAKERS START CAMPAIGN IN SUPPORT OF BILL

Members of Cabinet Say Trade Unions Bill Being Misrepresented.

NOT ATTACKING UNIONS.

LONDON, Apr. 26 (United Press).—The Conservative campaign to explain the Government's famous trade unions bill is now in full swing.

Sir Robert Horne, former Chancellor of the Exchequer under Lloyd George, speaking last night at Glasgow, declared the country was confronted with a monster propaganda movement designed to stir up the laboring classes against the bill and that this propaganda must be countered by activity not less assiduous expounding the truth to the electorate—that the Government, through this much discussed measure, was making no attack on the legitimate functioning of the trade unions.

Unions Not Attacked.

Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, Secretary of State for War, also spoke very strongly in support of the bill at Colchester, asserting that Great Britain must be protected against another general strike. Sir Arthur Steel Maitland, Minister of Labor, speaking at Birmingham, said that the bill was being misrepresented as a great attack on the trade unions and that it was nothing of the kind.

Another Birmingham meeting will be addressed next Friday by Rt. Hon. L. C. Amery, Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, while on the same day Rt. Hon. W. C. Bridgeman, First Lord of the Admiralty, will speak at Edinburgh and the Earl of Birkenhead, Secretary of State for India, at Manchester; on Saturday Rt. Hon. Viscount Peel, First Commissioner of Works, will continue the Government's campaign at Carlisle.

Leaflets Sent Out.

Meanwhile the Conservative central office has circulated 2,000,000 leaflets explaining the Government's intentions as regards the trade unions, and 7,000,000 copies of a penny pamphlet, entitled "The Trade Disputes Bill Popularly Explained," have been sold.

Labor's assertion that the bill does not deal with organized lockouts is answered by Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, who says that the Government will deal with illegal lockouts in the same way as it will with illegal strikes.

Because of the serious Parliamentary situation, Premier Baldwin is cancelling all his social engagements and not for many years has Britain known such intense political activity.

CHURCH CENTENARY IS HISTORIC EVENT

Booklet Published Giving History of St. John's For 100 Years.

In connection with the centennary of St. John's Anglican church, which is being celebrated this year a book, which will be a history of St. John's Parish for the last hundred years, has been prepared by Mr. F. M. De La Fosse, and will be published about the time of the celebration.

The book will contain a great deal of information, which will be interesting not only to members of the Anglican church, but to old residents of the city.

There is no doubt but that when it is issued there will be a considerable demand for it.

Sheffield Socialist Council Disbands High School Corps

SHEFFIELD, England, April 26 (Canadian Press Cable).—On the ground of "militarism" the Officers Training Corps attached to the Higher Grade Schools in Sheffield have been disbanded by the City Council of Sheffield, in which the Socialists have had a majority since the last elections in November. The Council for the same reason declines to permit a repetition of the military tattoo in one of the public parks, which last year drew thousands of spectators.

D. J. HOLLAND CHAIRMAN OF LOCAL BRANCH

Canadian Manufacturers' Association Holds Annual Meeting.

BALANCE IN TREASURY.

Activities of Past Year Are Reviewed By Retiring Chairman.

D. J. Holland was elected chairman of the local branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association at the annual meeting which was held in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce last night.

The treasurer's report, which was submitted by Gordon S. Matthews, showed a balance of $217.15.

W. S. Ferguson, the retiring chairman, reviewed the work of the past year. He expressed the appreciation of the association to G. S. Matthews and R. A. Brown for the way they handled the power factor question.

At the request of J. J. Turner, the Association last year co-operated with the Kiwanis club of Peterborough and the Retail Merchants' Association during "Produced-in-Canada" week. This the manufacturers felt has stimulated interest by the consumer in the products of the local plants.

Arrangements were made with the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, for the advertisement of products of Peterborough industries throughout America and the continent, through the medium of British trade commissioners.

An important event in the past season was the "safety first" banquet and address at which some 200 manufacturers with their superintendents and foremen attended as the guests of their individual plants. Arrangements have been made with the Industrial Accident Prevention Association for the further showing without charge of safety pictures in the local plants.

A subscription list has been opened to the manufacturers for the purpose of raising funds to assist in this year's building programme of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. Of the objective of $1,500 some $1,200 has already been subscribed," said Mr. Ferguson.

The officers for the ensuing year are: Chairman, D. J. Holland, of the Peterborough Cereal; Vice-Chairman, G. S. Matthews, of the C.P.C.; Treasurer, T. O. Donaldson, of the G. Walter Green Company; and Secretary, W. C. Ackerman of the B. F. Ackerman and Son.

Members of the Association expressed their appreciation of the work of the retiring chairman and the corresponding secretary, Frank Stinson, and granted to Mr. Stinson an honorarium of $50.

BALDWIN FACING BITTEREST BATTLE OF HIS PREMIERSHIP

Parliamentary Fight Will Begin To-day With Re-assembling of House.

OVER TRADE BILL.

British Government Not Anxious Concerning Fate of Budget.

LONDON, April 26.—What will undoubtedly prove one of the most momentous parliamentary battles Great Britain has experienced in many years begins to-day with the reassembling of the House.

The conflict will test not only the present strength, but the future power of all the parties and will menace the unity of the Conservatives. With the resumption of the debate on the budget insistent demands for economy will be hurled at the head of Right Hon. Winston Churchill, because although the Tories are pleased at the dexterity with which the Chancellor framed his budget, the enthusiasm of some has moderated after calm reflection and they insist that more economy is essential.

Trade Union Bill.

The Government, however, is not anxious concerning the fate of the budget, as there is sure to be enough support to ensure it getting substantial majorities. What does concern the Prime Minister and his Cabinet, though, is the fight with labor over the trade union bill.

The war drums have been heard continually throughout the last few weeks, and every day produces a fresh crop of Labor speeches threatening sabotage if the bill passes and insisting that Labor will repeal it when returned to power.

Baldwin Denounced.

Premier Baldwin has been denounced by Labor speakers as "the greatest hypocrite of the generation," and his sincerity and honesty, which the Tories are always emphasizing, have been questioned just as violently by moderate trade unionists as by the fiery Cook.

The Government in general is likewise being hotly criticized and speakers have referred to it as the most reactionary for a generation. This preliminary fury indicates the way in which the debate on the bill, which comes up for second reading next week, is certain to be conducted. Not only will it be fought clause by clause, even comma by comma, and obstructionists tactics employed, but the personal integrity of the ministers will be challenged. A series of stormy scenes, therefore, would appear inevitable. Members of the Government are returning to London in a combative mood, for the Tories, having been aroused by the vicious attacks of Labor, are just as keen to participate in the fray as their opponents.

In the background Premier Baldwin is frankly worried over Tory dissensions regarding the extension of the franchise to "flappers." The Morning Post declares itself as definitely opposed to the bill, which action is regarded as significant and undoubtedly many Conservatives will refuse to accept the Premier's explanation that Sir William Joynson-Hicks pledged the Government to the measure as an excuse for experimenting with the franchise.

LOCAL VISITORS HURT GOING HOME

Gananoque People Are Injured While Returning From Peterborough.

PORT HOPE, April 26.—Mrs. R. J. Littlejohn of Gananoque is lying in the Cobourg General Hospital suffering from a broken collar-bone and other minor injuries as a result of an accident which occurred on the Provincial highway five miles east of here at 7 o'clock Sunday evening, when the sedan in which they were returning from Peterborough was forced into the ditch. Other occupants were R. J. Littlejohn, the driver, and his two daughters, and Capt. D. J. Kenney of Gananoque, and all received bad shakings up. The sedan was travelling in an easterly direction when a touring car, driven by Leonard Oughtred of Wesleyville, near Port Hope, swerved in front and had its running-board smashed by the impact. It was turned completely around and overturned into a ten-foot ditch. The car was practically demolished, and the driver miraculously escaped death, but Sydney Wright, the other occupant, sustained bad facial injuries.

The party were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Kenny, 368 Downie Street on Sunday.

SALOON IN TREE STUMP.

BLANDFORD, Eng., April 26.—California may have trees so large that people can live in the hollow trunks, but this town boasts the only stump that ever housed a saloon. It is "Damory's Oak," a stump 36 feet in circumference with a hollow space 15 feet wide and 17 feet high inside. For many years it served as an ale house.

Escaped Convict Thinks Liberty Too Dangerous

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 26.—Declaring he feared he might commit another crime if he remained at large, Joseph Pioli, who says he escaped from Sing Sing prison at Ossington, N.Y., March 2, by hiding in a box of cotton, surrendered to the police yesterday. He was serving a term of 20 years in Sing Sing for the killing of Bill Brennan, pugilist, New York.

Von Hindenburg's Family Branches Live Apart While German Quarantine Law Covers The Palace

BERLIN, April 26 (A.P.).—Frau Oscar von Hindenburg, daughter-in-law of the German President, and Frau Irmengard von Brockhusen, the President's eldest daughter, have not been on speaking terms for the last two weeks, although both are sojourning in the Executive Palace on the Wilhelmstrasse.

What seems worse, they have been virtually banished and made prisoners in opposite wings of the spacious palace, which formerly housed the Marshal of the Imperial Household. It is no family quarrel, however, which keeps the sisters-in-law apart, but rather the inexorable German quarantine law, which does not even spare the members of the President's family.

Frau von Brockhusen arrived here several weeks ago with her five-year-old son to visit her father. The boy played with his two cousins, daughters of Oscar von Hindenburg, in the gardens adjoining the German White House, not knowing that they had contracted a light attack of scarlet fever.

By the time the character of their illness had been determined young von Brockhusen was considered so exposed that the health authorities insisted he must be quarantined for six weeks.

AIRMEN KILLED IN TEST FLIGHT

Two Men Preparing For New York-Paris Journey Die in Crash.

ENGINE TROUBLE CAUSE.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., April 26 (Canadian Press)—Commander Noel Davis, who was preparing for the New York - Paris trans-Atlantic flight, and Lieut. E[illegible]n H. Wooster, his alternate pilot, were killed to-day when their giant aeroplane, "American Legion," crashed near Messick, Va. Reports received at Langley Field said that the machine apparently developed engine trouble, became unmanageable, and fell several hundred feet. It was carrying a load of more than 13,000 pounds.

The bodies of the two officers were removed from the wreckage soon after the accident and were taken to the naval hospital at Portsmouth. Information at the naval base indicated that the plane crashed in about four feet of water and that both fliers were drowned. Officers at Langley Field were informed that Commander Davis was attempting a forced landing when the big craft became unmanageable.

TERMINAL PORT TO BE SELECTED

Prescott Believed Favored For Trans-shipment Facilities.

COMMITTEE AT WORK.

OTTAWA, April 26 (Canadian Press).—The Government's Inter-Departmental Committee appointed to select the Lake Ontario terminal which will be part of the Welland Ship Canal project will report next month, and it is probable that the findings of the committee will be made public in June.

For some years Kingston, Prescott, Brockville, and Gananoque have all been keen competitors for the terminal port facilities. While nothing official can be learned, it is said on very good authority that Prescott is likely to be selected by the committee for the eastern terminal of the Great Lakes grain traffic.

In any event, when the final decision is made this summer, the work will commence in order to be ready for the actual opening of the new Welland Ship Canal now scheduled for 1930. The terminal work will include harbors, wharves, and probably dry dock equipment. One estimate of the cost of the work to be done is $7,000,000. There will also be a large elevator with rapid transfer as well as storage facilities and a total capacity of six million bushels.

The work on the Welland Canal is proceeding rapidly and the Department of Railways and Canals hopes to have it completed during the winter of 1929-30 and open during the 1930 season of navigation, although some minor work may have to be carried on during that season. The selection of Prescott would add hundreds of miles to the Great Lakes route and bring the eastern terminus less than 150 miles from the port of Montreal.

Premier King Enters Sheep Farm Business

OTTAWA, April 26.—Hon. Mackenzie King, on a modest scale, is going into the sheep farming business. He has an estate at Kingsmere in the Gatineau, to which he has been adding continuously till now the property has a depth of four miles. As the place is well suited for sheep, the prime minister is going to try his hand at the business.

Opposition Leader Cost Large Amount Says Carron

QUEBEC, April 26 (Canadian Press).—Arthur Sauve, leader of the Opposition, is the most expensive man in the province, in the opinion of Hon. J. E. Carron, Minister of Agriculture. Hon. Mr. Carron, speaking at the Liberal convention at Nicolet, said that Mr. Sauve had been responsible for the three weeks' delay in the closing of the 1927 session of the Legislature. The cost during the session was $9,000 a day so that Mr. Sauve had caused the expenditure of over $200,000 of the money of the province, the Minister said that the Ontario Legislature had done more work in eight weeks than Quebec had done in twelve weeks.

NEW GROUND UNDER WATER THIS MORNING

Thousands More Driven Out By Mississippi and Branches.

MORE THREATENED.

Danger To New Orleans and Delta Towns as Flood Advances.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 26. — Canadian Press. — The Mississippi River and its tributaries to-day flooded new territory in Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana, rendering additional thousands homeless.

Concerned over threats to communities not yet reached by the record crest of water, relief forces, centralized in the organization of the American Red Cross, moved to establish advanced outposts so that any new emergency might be met speedily and efficiently.

With the known death list steadily climbing above the one hundred mark and varying estimates of from 200 to 300 dead in the whole stricken area, every precaution was being taken to prevent additional casualties from disease, hunger and exposure.

Relief Workers Active.

—While boats and aircraft scoured the flooded districts for marooned persons, other vessels and planes sped to concentration centres and stricken towns with food, clothing medicines, and assurances of continued relief.

Refugees from the newly inundated towns and communities in the three states swelled the ranks of the homeless, which already had been estimated at 150,000.

In southeastern Arkansas nearly a dozen small towns were receiving back water from old breaks in the Arkansas River, the inhabitants either climbing to the leves or removing to nearby towns which remained dry.

Danger in South.

With the crest of the flood past Memphis, and the belief that the main Mississippi levees for a good distance south, are in rapidly diminishing danger, Secretary of Commerce Hoover and Major General Jadwin, Chief of Army Engineers, have expressed concern for what may happen when the highest water reaches the lower delta. In a statement isued from the steamer Chisca, on the Mississippi River last night, Secretary Hoover declared that while the present problem of relief forces concerned the succor of refuges, "the great question is what will happen to the levees in the lower river with the arrival of the crest."

General Jadwin asserted that the great menace to New Orleans will be the joining of the Red River with the Mississippi and the full

WOMAN KILLS HER CHILDREN

Slashes Throats of Four at Her Home at Ford CITY.

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 26 (Canadian Press).—After killing her four children by cutting their throats with a butcher knife, Mrs. Humma Thomas, 34 years of age, of Reaume Road, Ford City, attempted to take her own life by slashing her throat. She is in the Hotel Dieu at the point of death.

The dead children, three girls and a boy, are Annie, aged nine years; Marguerite, aged seven years; Helen, aged four years, and Louie, aged six years.

The tragedy was discovered by neighbors shortly after eight o'clock this morning when Mrs. Thomas was seen pacing the verandah of her home with blood streaming from a wound in her neck. Police, who were called, found the bodies of the children stretched on blood-soaked beds in two rooms on the first floor of the house.

Police believe that the motive for the crime was mental derangement caused by poverty. They learned that she had been mentally deranged since the death of her husband six months ago. It was stated that she had been seriously affected by the threatened loss of her home, which was to be sold for taxes.

Dr. J. P. G. Morgan, Coroner, was of the opinion that the children were chloroformed before being slashed with a knife. They were killed late last night by the bed side, he suggested, and then thrown across the beds.

Evidence that Mrs. Thomas paced the floor all night after killing her children was found by Chief Constable Massonville. Bloody prints of her feet leading to the door of the basement and to the sink in the kitchen were plainly visible.

She had wiped the knife on a towel and used it to prepare her breakfast. The knife was covered with butter and jam.

The Thomas family came to the border six years ago from Fort William.

BOATS SHELLED BY CANTONESE

Two Thousand Northern Soldiers Drowned in Attempted Crossing.

BULLETINS ON CHINA.

SHANGHAI, April 26.—(Canadian Press.) — Two thousand Northern Chinese soldiers are reported to have been drowned when shells from Cantonese batteries at Nanking sank their boats in the Yangtze river. Two launches towing a dozen boats full of Northern troops attempted to reach the southern shore of the river near Nanking forts last night, despatches this morning said. A searchlight revealed their approach, eighty shells were fired by the Cantonese and all the boats were sunk.

Miss Craig Released.

SHANGHAI, April 26.— (Canadian Press.)— Miss Mary I. Craig, Philadelphia nurse recently kidnapped by bandits in Yunnan province, has been released. United States' Consul General Gauss was advised from Yunnanfu, the capital of Yunnan, to-day that she was free and well. While she and a number of other missionaries were making their way to safety from the interior more than a week ago, Miss Craig was captured by bandits. Rev. Morris Slichter of Toronto, Ont., and his eight year old daughter, were killed by the bandits. Mrs. Slichter and her five year old son were taken prisoner.

SEEK PRIVATE HEARING BEFORE CUSTOMS BOARD

C. A. Savard Fears Prosecution For Conspiracy If Held Public.

RECEIVED LIQUOR.

Frowned Upon By Commissioners—Given Until Thursday To Decide.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 26 (Canadian Press).—The Royal Customs Commission frowned yesterday on a suggestion that it should hold a private sitting to hear evidence of an American citizen who fears prosecution for conspiracy if he testified in public. The witness in question is C. A. Savard of Detroit, and Hon. N. W. Rowell, Commission counsel, stated that he had been recipient of large liquor shipments from various Canadian distilleries.

When the call went forth for Savard yesterday afternoon, his solicitor, William H. Furlong, took the floor. "Mr. Savard is an American citizen," he said. "He does not object to giving evidence before the Commission, but he does object to giving it in public." If his client came and testified in public, his appearance here might be followed by the institution of proceedings against him in the United States, said Mr. Furlong. "I suggest that the Commission hear him in private."

"I think that we had better follow the policy of hearing our witnesses in public," Chief Commissioner informed Mr. Furlong.

"We had the same situation in Vancouver, where witnesses were under indictment in the United States," interjected Commissioner Wright.

"Can we compel this man to attend here?" queried Commissioner Roy, of Mr. Rowell.

Might Stop Shipments

"No, he can remain in the United States and refuse to give evidence, and we cannot bring him here, but we might take other means," replied counsel. He went on to say that Mr. Savard had been receiving large shipments of liquor from Canada. In the event of the refusal of the witness to attend, he proposed to ask the Commission to stop further shipments to him.

Mr. Furlong then took the ground that his client had not been properly subpoenaed. He had not been furnished with conduct money, he said, and the form of the subpoena was wrong. He suggested that it was unfair not to consent to take Mr. Savard's evidence in private.

Commissioner Roy did not concur in this view. Mr. Savard, he said engaged in business with Canada his base of supplies. He profitted through the operation of Canadian law. Therefore it was the duty of Mr. Savard to appear and give evidence before the Commission.

Given Until Thursday

After some discussion, Mr. Rowell suggested that Mr. Savard be given until Thursday to think the matter over and decide whether or not he is willing to cross the Detroit river. If he decides not to come, Mr. Rowell said that he would ask for a recommendation from the Commission which will dry up his source of liquor supply.

That the sittings of the Commission in Windsor have not resulted in a complete stoppage of the liquor export business, even temporarily, was indicated by the evidence of John Wilson, customs officer at Lasalle, who was on the stand for a few minutes.

"When was the last shipment made from the Rheaume dock?" Mr. Rowell asked him.

"Saturday, I believe," he replied.

"Have they been making large shipments from that dock?"

"Yes."

"How many cases went out on Saturday?"

"Just a few."

Examine Railwayman

The Commission opened yesterday afternoon with the brief examination of R. C. Grout, General Superintendent of the Canadian Pacific Railway in Ontario. Mr. Grout was called to give some information in regard to rail shipments of liquor to this point, and Mr. Rowell asked him about an occurrence in the summer of 1925 which led to the dismissal of a former yardmaster in the C.P.R. employ at Windsor. This involved a proposal that two cars coming in over the Michigan Central Railway under seal should be diverted to the C.P.R. yard here, the seals broken, and liquor placed inside before they crossed the line.

A letter from Harry Low, then vice-president and general manager of the Carling Brewing and Malting Company, expressing regret at the discharge of the yardmaster and asking for his reinstatement, was read. This letter, said Mr. Grout had led to further investigation of the matter which resulted in the permanent dismissal of the official.

Some small fight on the financial operations of the Mexico Export Company was shed by Arthur M

LIBERALS WANT MANITOBA PACT WITH FARMERS

Hon. C. A. Dunning Bears Olive Branch To Bracken.

MOVE UNDER WAY.

Purpose To Foster Working Agreement In Provincial Election.

OTTAWA, April 26.— Hon. C. A. Dunning, minister of railways, has gone to Winnipeg, and his mission is said to be political. The provincial general elections are coming on and the Bracken farmer government is anxious to make a merger with the Liberals similar to the arrangement which worked efficaciously at the time of the Dominion general elections last fall.

As part of this plan the move was made some time ago to have Hon .T. D. Norris, Liberal leader, deleted as a political factor and provided for in the chairmanship of the grain commission, but so far in that line there is nothing doing.

Olive Branch.

In the meantime it appears that some external influences, mainly from Saskatchewan, have been exerted and some organization carried on among the Liberals with the idea of their putting up candidates against the Bracken government. It is understood that Mr. Dunning is taking out an olive branch, and that his purpose will be to foster peace, order and co-operative plan among the provincial Liberals and Progressives, such as worked with singular success in Manitoba at the last Dominion election.

LABOR LEADER APPROVES BAR

Says U. S. Government Action On Border Upheld By Unions.

STOPS INFLUX.

BUFFALO, April 25 (Canadian Press).—John J. Doyle, an official of the American Brotherhood of Painters, who since last October has been investigating Labor conditions along the Canadian border, asserted today that Labor views with approval the recent imposition of more stringent regulations upon the passage of Canadians employed in this country.

The investigation, he said, covered all American cities from Niagara Falls Westward to Detroit, where he has established temporary headquarters. The interest of Labor organizations arises from the fact, he declared, that thousands of Canadians are employed in United States industries, while they remain citizens and residents of Canada.

"Investigation shows that the immigration laws have been ignored, not alone in this section, but all along the border, as far West as Vancouver," the Labor official explained. "From the standpoint of organized Labor, the Federal Government is justified in putting into effect the regulations requiring passports and imposing restrictions which will tend to check the influx of Canadian workers."

THOUSANDS LEFT HOMELESS AS RELEASED FLOOD WATERS SPREAD OVER NEW TERRITORY

Rescue Workers Fear Several Lives Lost in Mississippi Delta.

LEVEES BROKEN.

Estimates of Damage Done Range To Half Billion Dollars.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 26—Swiftly and irresistibly, the flood waters of the Mississippi River and its tributaries rolled across new ground yesterday in three states — Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana—inundating additional towns and thousands of acres of farm lands.

Driving the homeless before it, the flood claimed new victims here and there, swallowing up a Mississippi National Guard rescue worker near Greenville, an Arkansas planter near Pine Bluff and the captain of a government craft assisting in levee strengthening on the Arkansas River near Gould.

With the known death list past the 100 mark, estimates of the total fatalities ranged up to 500. Rescue workers on the Mississippi delta fear that many lost their lives to-day as the flood waters continued across that region.

In the absence of any official estimates, varying calculations of the damage over 9,500 square miles of water-covered areas were made by business men here. These ranged all the way from one hundred million dollars to half a billion dollars

Threatens Towns

While the Mississippi was being held to its banks by heroic work at half a dozen points and over a long stretch north and south of Vicksburg, a new break in the Arkansas River levee at South Bend, Lincoln County, was reported with the released waters threatening several towns.

Breaks in dykes in smaller streams both in north and South Louisiana were reported, with a considerable area likely to be flooded and several more thousands made homeless. The crevasse in the Mississippi levee below New Orleans, opened Saturday by a steamer, was expected to flood about 30 square miles.

Towns which received flood waters to-day included Arkansas City, on the Mississippi, which was cut off from all communication with the outside; Marked Tree, Lake Villa, McGhee and Dumas in Arkansas, and Indianola in Mississippi east of Greenville.

Towns Evacuated

Arkansas City, a town of 2,000 people, has been evacuated, according to reports to the Arkansas military authorities, with the refugees seeking haven in McGhee and other nearby towns, which are gradually being flooded by the Arkansas River flow.

Evacuation also was going forward at Indianola, Arcola and other towns in the Mississippi delta, but there was no forcible evacuation by order of the military authorities either in those places or in Greenville.

While the flood waters were spreading at an alarming pace, comprehensive plans were laid here for relief work with Secretary Hoover at the helm.

Confers with Red Cross

Coming here from Washington by direction of the President, the man who fed Belgium through the war hurriedly conferred with Red Cross and other officials and announced that the full resources of the government would be placed at the disposal of the relief agencies.

The commerce secretary, before embarking on a tour down the Mississippi to Vicksburg and New Orleans to get a first hand picture of the situation, declared that the full five million dollars the country had been asked to give through the Red Cross would be needed and that perhaps more would have to be called for later.

Meantime agencies of the government was converging forces rapidly on the flood district with supplies of all kinds to relieve the sufferings of more than 150,000 now homeless. Rescue work also was going on apace in all districts with the aid of additional motor boats and sea and aeroplanes used to spot out the refugees on levees, knolls and housetops in isolated districts.

With the flood waters slowly seeping back into the Mississippi through its tributaries, a constant rise in the river between Natchez and New Orleans was noted with the gauge at New Orleans showing a rise of .2 of a foot to 21 feet, four feet above flood stage.

Cotton factors and mercantile experts of Memphis variously estimate the flood damage to date at from one hundred million dollars to half a billion dollars.

Levees Breaking

Flood At Glance

(By Associated Press.)

The flood waters have overrun at least six more towns in Arkansas and Mississippi.

Additional thousands of acres of farm lands also have been inundated.

The homeless now number 150,000, with the Red Cross preparing to care for more than 200,000 before the floods have run their course.

Fears were entertained by officials that the death lost of a little more than 100 had been greatly augmented by the rush of waters down the Mississippi delta.

RIVER RISING.

Report Says Assiniboine Has Risen 27 Inches at Virden.

BRANDON, Man., April 26.—(Canadian Press.)— Word has just been received from Virden, Man., that the Assiniboine river has risen 27 inches at that point. The roads to the north are completely cut off by the water, which has overflown the flats. The water yesterday reported at Virden to be five inches higher than at the peak of the flood in 1925. At Miniota the Assiniboine river is also higher than at any time in recent years. A rise in the river here is anticipated here to-morrow or Wednesday as this volume of water from the west comes down.

LITTLE FALL GRAIN AROUND HAVELOCK

Farmers Busy Now at Their Spring Sowing—Wheat Doing Well.

HAVELOCK, April 26. — Spring work is well under way here now and the prospects are that the crop will be all in at least two weeks earlier than last year.

Very little fall grain was sown for this district. This is partly owing to the late season last year, the crop being harvested a month later than usual so that in some cases the farmers did not have time to do their fall sowing. Any who have fall wheat report that it appears to be doing nicely.

Mr. James McMillan is expecting a good yield of alfalfa this season. He has two bushels planted, and it is looking splendid. Mr. A. D. Buchanan says that his alfalfa appears to be rotting at the roots in places where the ground is low. Any on high ground is all right, so that he is expecting to have only about a half a crop.

Princes Go On Sight Seeing Tour Of Spain

SEVILLE, Spain, April 26. — (Canadian Press).—The Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, who are visiting Spain, are being taken on sight-seeing trips to various districts.

The two princes, accompanied by Queen Victoria, visited the Provincial Fair Sunday afternoon and were greeted cordially. They visited many of the local homes, in each of which "fiestas" were in full swing, made up largely of popular dances. Arriving at one of the principal clubs, the Queen first danced with the Prince of Wales, then with Prince George. Both princes later took Senoritas as partners.

The royal party also went to the home of the Duke of Alba, where they witnessed a presentation of folk lore songs and dances.

SUSPECT GIRL TOOK OWN LIFE

Poison Bottle Was Found Short Distance Away From Body.

AT FORT FRANCIS.

TORONTO, April 26.— A preliminary report from Inspector A. Ward, of the Provincial C. I. D., who has been investigating the death of Mary Pickard, found frozen in a snow bank, during March last at Port Francis, says that some distance from her body, and some days after discovery of the latter, a bottle which had contained lysol, a strong antiseptic and poison, was found by investigators, along with several soiled towels.

It is also reported that when the body was found it was not fully clothed. It was minus shoes, although a pair of overshoes were pulled on over the stockings. The shoes were later found near the lysol bottle and towels.

Report on the analysis of stomach contents has not yet been received from Winnipeg, where they were sent by the police. It is now believed, however, that death was due either to poisoning by drinking the lysol, or from freezing as a result of stupefaction arising from use of the poison.

In any event suicide is considered to have caused the death rather than foul play at the hands of some other party.

OBITUARY

WARKWORTH, April 26—Mrs. W. J. Baker received the sad news of the death of her brother, Mr. James Taylor of Chatham. After an illness of several weeks Mr. Taylor passed away in St. Joseph's Hospital. He was seventy-six years of age and for many years was a prosperous farmer in Raleigh township, moving to Chatham twelve years ago. Two daughters and two sons survive.

MRS. EMMA PEARCE

APSLEY April 26 — Mrs. Emma Pearce, widow of the late William Gallon, passed away rather suddenly on Wednesday evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Gordon Reynolds, at Clanricarde. The deceased lady was in her eighty first year and had lived here about fifty years. She had a great circle of friends who will miss her greatly. Noted for her bright and cheerful disposition and also for her activity, she was, too, an accomplished pianiste, and possessed a touch which at her advanced age many a young musician might envy. The funeral was held on Saturday at the United Church, Apsley, the service being conducted by the Rev. J. W. Ogden, interment being made in the family plot in the cemetery. She leaves only one daughter, Mrs. George Reynolds.

JOHN SHAPTER

CAMPBELLFORD, April 26. — Word was received on Monday of the death of John Shapter of Calgary. Deceased was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Shapter, Centre Street, and was for many years a popular resident of Campbellford, moving to Calgary a few years ago. Full particulars of his death have not yet been received, but the family have the sympathy of a host of friends in their bereavement.

An expedition is proceeding to the interior of Africa in search for a strange tree or shrub which the natives call the "death tree." It is said that those who rest in its shade become gradually unconscious and, if they are not rescued in time, death results.

COOLIDGE OUTLINES U. S. POLICY FOR PROTECTION OF CITIZENS

President Expects Amicable Settlement Of Mexico Dispute Shortly.

FRIENDSHIP FOR CHINA.

Says Eugene Chen's Reply Is Conciliatory In Tone and Responsive.

NEW YORK, April 26 (A.P.).— A foreign policy devoted to the protection of American citizens and the maintenance of peace was outlined last night by President Coolidge as in keeping with the new position in the world in which he pictured the United States.

Speaking here at a press dinner, Mr. Coolidge discussed at length the problems involving the Government in Nicaragua and China.

Rejects Arbitration Proposal.

The President disapproved the proposal of the Senate for arbitration with Mexico of the dispute growing out of that nation's oil and land laws, and forecast an amicable adjustment of this situation on the basis of a recent conference he had with the Mexican Ambassador.

He revealed that Ambassador Tellez recently brought word from Mexico City that American property would not be confiscated by the Mexican Government.

"I am glad to report," Mr. Coolidge said, "that the Mexican Ambassador has recently declared to me that she does not intend to confiscate our property, that she has shown diligence in capturing and punishing those who have murdered our citizens, and expressed the wish which we so thoroughly entertain, of keeping cordial and friendly relations.

"With a strong sentiment of this nature, which, I am convinced, animates the people of both countries, it will surely be possible to reach an amicable settlement."

Protection of U.S. Lives.

Assurance was given by the President in his address, which was devoted almost entirely to foreign affairs, that wherever an American citizen goes "the duties of our Government must follow him. "He said protection of American lives and property constituted the main problems of the United States Government in both Nicaragua and China.

"Our Government has usually been too remiss, rather than too active, in supporting the lawful rights of its citizens abroad," he added. "That has been so long our established policy that it is rather difficult to conceive it assuming a truculent and arrogant attitude."

Taking cognizance of contentions in some quarters that America was imperialistic, Mr. Coolidge disclaimed any program of military aggrandizement. He considered it a "curious circumstance" that those who advocated this country taking mandates over "far-off countries in Asia" were "most critical when we are attempting to encourage the maintenance of order, the continuity of duly established government, and the protection of lives and property of our citizens under a general reign of law in these countries that are near at hand and where we have large and peculiar interests."

The President said that the revolutionary forces of Nicaragua "appear to have received arms and ammunition from some source in Mexico."

Further Consideration

The recent reply of Eugene Chen, Cantonese Foreign Minister, to the protest of the United States and allied Governments over the attacks at Nanking was described as "conciliatory in tone and to a certain degree responsive, leaving the final disposition of the issue a matter for further consideration by our Government."

Devoting most attention to Mexico, Mr. Coolidge reiterated that the main problem there was the question of confiscation of property. He said the Washington Government feared that Mexico "is threatening to disregard" the principle that "pri-

SCANDAL RAMPANT IN DUCK FAMILY

CHICAGO, April 26.—Oscar was just a duck, and not a very forward one at that. He lived in Lincoln Park Zoo with twelve other ducks, six of them flappers, six of them sheiks. When eating time came Oscar discovered that he had haltosis, or something, for he was left without a wife. Oscar moped, sulked, grew angry. Finally he began flirting with other ducks' ducky little mates, who primly repulsed him and told their husbands about it. The outraged males united and went after Oscar. It was six to one and Oscar couldn't duck them. He was buried quietly to avoid scandal in zoo society.

BLUE LAW CHARGE FOLLOWS CONCERT

Count Laid Against Ten Persons of Pittsburgh Symphony Society.

PITTSBURGH, April 26. — The Sunday blue laws of 1794 were invoked yesterday against ten persons connected with the Pittsburg Symphony society which Sunday night heard the first concert of its own orchestra.

There were no tickets sold to avoid legal entanglements, but agents of the Sabbath association of the Pittsburg area yesterday filed informations before Alderman McKinley, charging Elias Berkins, assistant conductor of the orchestra, and nine officials of the society, with violating the laws of 1794 on the ground that they "performed or permitted to be performed worldly employment on the Lord's Day."

An audience of 3500 persons—all members or associate members of the society—heard the concert only after the city solicitor, Waldsschmidt, had ruled the concert would not be in violation of Pennsylvania statutes on Sunday observance.

LABOR DEBATES BIRTH CONTROL

Women Of the Party Sharply Divided on the Policy.

21 RESOLUTIONS.

LONDON, Apr. 26 (Canadian Press) —Like their Liberal sisters, British Labor women find themselves sharply divided on the question of an official policy toward birth control. Whereas two or three conflicting resolutions are to be placed before the Liberal women at their convention in Blackpool next week, no less than 21 resolutions on the subject await the national conference of Socialist women at Huddersfield next month.

Most of the resolutions to be considered by the Labor women, emphasize that the conference in three successive years has voted in favor of removal of the embargo against giving such information at governmental maternity centres. It is also suggested that trades unions should become responsible for the dissemination of such information. Other resolutions favor officially leaving the matter alone.

AEROPLANE PASSES.

First Seen in Campbellford District in Some Years.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 26. — An aeroplane, the first to be seen around here for some years, passed over town yesterday afternoon about three o'clock. The bird man was flying very high and going in a north-easterly direction.

Held On Liquor Charge, Says He Is Envoy's Son

DETROIT, April 26.— (Canadian Press.)—Charged with violating the tariff act by smuggling 43 bottles of whiskey from Canada, Sarsfield P. Smiddy, 21, claiming to be the son of T. A. Smiddy, minister to the U. S. of the Irish Free State, was remanded to the county jail yesterday in default of $1,500 bail, after arraignment before J. S. Hurd, United States commissioner.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

FALLEN

I never see a tree come down
From out the summer sky,
And never in my native town
I see a good man die,
But well I know within my days
No tree will take its place,
And I shall miss in all my ways
An old familiar face.

Around me other friends will stand,
Around me other trees,
But not a one that reaches hand
Will seem the same as these.
For every tree has trunk and limb,
A semblance of its own;
For something I remember him;
The friend that I have known.

Life is not long enough to give Me back the tree again,
And, though around me men may live,
They all are other men.
The wounded sky will never heal,
Whatever green may start;
And friend for friend will always feel
An absence in the heart.
(Copyright, 1927, Douglas Malloch.)

OLD MASTERS

The fiddles were playing and playing,
The couples were out on the floor;
From converse and dancing he drew me,
And across the floor.

Ah! strange were the dim, wide meadows,
And strange was the cloud-strewn sky,
And strange in the meadows the corncrakes.
And they making cry!

The hawthorn bloom was by us,
Around us the breath of the south.
White hawthorn, strange in the nighttime—
His kiss on my mouth!
—Padraic Colum: "Across the Door."

WELCOME W.M.S.

Presentation and Address Tendered Mrs. Thomas Lockhart at Meeting.

WARKWORTH, April 26.—The regular meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. Dave Richardson, Dartford. The main feature of the programme was a presentation and an address to Mrs. Thomas Lockhart.

"Dear Mrs. Lockhart,—

"We, the members of the Dartford Dramatic Club, have very much pleasure in asking you to accept this certificate of a life member of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada.

"You are not only the oldest member among the membership not in the list of life members, but also one of those who has ever been willing to lend a helping hand whenever you could. We fondly trust that you may continue your loyal service to your society and to our blessed Lord and Master in the church of our choice.

"Signed—Helen Darling, Mrs. W. Hopkins."

The "at home" given to the Dartford Dramatic Club by the senior members of the community in the church on Tuesday evening was very enjoyable and created much interest. The senior members of the church provided the programme and the lunch and the young people took part in the Bible contest.

Mrs. Frank Wilson gave a good paper upon the subject, "Why Have a Church Paper?" This was dealt with in every way possible and showed careful preparation.

Mrs. Arthur Wand gave an interesting paper on the value of a handshake in building up a congregation.

Mrs. Ambrose Atkinson spoke on the appreciation of all for church choir.

Mrs. Nelson Hardy's paper was, "Why I Am a Member of the W. M. S.," and the following reasons were given:

"Because I believe it is right.

"Because I have a missionary responsibility to God, in home, church and community.

"Because I want to learn about the great work in which two hundred thousand other women of the United Church are so deeply interested.

"Because of the sisterly love between the members.

"Because we learn what a great deal of good there is in other women, good which the W.M.S. induces.

"Because by using our time, talents and money every woman, I believe, accepts the challenge of the great commission.

"Because of its splendid sociability.

"Because of the pleasure I find in this kind of giving, and a great reason is, that I can give myself to be used in my Master's service.

"Because we have experienced the presence of God so surely in the meetings."

A choir, composed of members who sang more than a quarter of a century ago, led all the singing, and only the old fond melodies were used. Mrs. Ezra Darling, church organist of other days, presided most creditably throughout the programme of special numbers and for the community singing. Following this the pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones, called upon Misses Mabel Honey and Gertrude Davey, the two captains in the contest based upon the first ten chapters of St. Mark's Gospel, to take their positions in either side of the church. Some thirty-six entered of the young men and women, and finally there were but twelve on each side, and no question was asked, but each of the twenty-four persons could give the correct answer, and the pastor had to call it a tie and presented the prize to the two captains jointly.

The following are the questions that were used in the contest for which the young people were preparing during Lent:

"What O. T. prophet is quoted in the first chapter of Mark?

"What N. T. person is referred to in this prophesy?

"What was the food of this N. T. man?

"What water did he use in baptism?

"Who was the most important one to receive this baptism?

"What voice was heard above the baptists?

"After the baptism Jesus was driven into the wilderness for how long and why?

"How many temptations are mentioned?

"How did John the Baptist meet his death?

"What method did our Lord use in getting disciples?

"How do we know He was a married man?

"How many disciples did it require to bring one sick man to Jesus for healing?

"The question of forgiving sins arose out of this healing. What did Jesus say about it?

"Our Lord was accused of Sabbath breaking What did He do to merit the charge?

"Whom did Jesus send forth to preach?

"What did Jesus say would happen if a house were divided against itself?

"When our Lord saw the multitude by the sea, how did He feel?

"What did He do for them?

"How many people were fed?

"How many baskets were over?

"When our Lord gave the parable of the farmer, what season of the year was He working?

"What per cent. was the yield?

"During the storm on the sea, what was the Lord doing when they found Him?

"When the Lord saw the danger, what did He do?

"When Jesus cast out the unclean spirit of the man of the tombs, what did it say its name was?

"Into what kind of animals did the spirits enter?

"What happened straightway?

"What request did the owners make of our Lord?

"Here was a person ill for twelve years who was suddenly healed in a large crowd. How?

"When the Lord raised from the dead the little daughter of the ruler, what three men were with Him?

"Mark, six and third verse. How many members were there in the Lord's family?

"When the woman from the North Country besought the Lord to cast out the evil spirit from her little daughter, what strange words did He use in reply?

"What is called Peter's great confession?

"What simple rule did the Lord lay down for any one who would be His disciple?

"What happened upon the Mountain when Jesus prayed?

"What two persons appeared to the company upon that occasion?

"What members of the body did the Lord say would be more likely to bring us into trouble?

"What did Jesus say of little children?

"What reward did Jesus promise His followers?"

Several of London's principal thoroughfares, including Pall Mall, Whitehall and parts of Piccadilly and Oxford streets are still lighted by gas lamps.

SYNOPSIS

Bob Ward, college student, gets work as a dancing partner for rich women in a New Jersey roadhouse. There he meets the prettiest, sweetest girl he has ever laid eyes on—Sally Smith, the cigarette girl. Reciprocating his interest, she warns him against the mysterious and beautiful Mrs. Hammond, habitue of the Inn, who finds her "thrill" in "hunting" Bob for her lovenest apartment. Mrs. Smith, meeting Bob, is hostile; favoring Mannion, a rich suitor. Mrs. Hammond is subtly overcoming Bob. Sally realizes she has to fight for him.

Bob Ward shyly took hold of her hands.

"Sally Smith," he said eagerly, "tomorrow night I have no classes. Let's go for a ride on the Fifth Avenue buses, or something! The movies downtown—anything you say!"

Sally's eyes shone like awfully happy stars, freshly spawned from the bourne of Eternity. "The bus!" she laughed. "I like that better. We can sit on the back seat and—and—"

"You just leave the 'and' to me, Sally Smith!" chuckled Bob, and then he turned and sprinted like a three-year-old toward the Subway station. He had to do that—to keep from boldly seizing Sally and kissing her.

And Sally, who knew full well what impulse had made him run—wished he hadn't!

The rest of that week passed gloriously, what with the Bus ride picnic on Wednesday, and the carefree rides home in the pleasant serenity of each early June evening. They sang, always, when the four of them were together; and, in the rite, which was his alone, of seeing Sally home, Bob got to lingering longer each evening on the doorstep of the Smith house. This, despite Mrs. Smith's attempts to discourage it—by sudden and hostile appearances, and frosty remarks.

"I like that better. We can sit on the back seat and-and—"

Mrs. Hammond, meantime, continued to play her hand of passion—in her own cunning and practised way. She calculated on a showdown assault on Saturday afternoon. Then, if ever, she would test and try Bob's virtue!

CHAPTER XII

Saturday afternoon came. Bob thought of it as the day on which he was to receive a sorely needed fifty dollars in salary; a tremendous lift toward the expenses of Commencement Day, less than three weeks off.

Sally thought of it as the day before the Sabbath day of rest, on which Bob had already made a date to meet her, directly after she returned home from church; they were to go away to Manhattan Beach for an early season swim.

Mrs. Hammond thought of it as the day of fruited plans.

She was in a seemingly serious mood as she met Bob and began to dance with him that afternoon. She carefully avoided any display of personal charm, or physical allurement. She was his friend; his earnest, sisterly friend.

She talked to him of the graduation day, so near at hand. She talked to him, presently, in a low-toned and oh! so deeply concerned way, of his financial problems and worries; of his ability to meet the heavy expenses incident to receiving his degree. There were so many extra things to think of, she knew—suitable clothes, and all that.

Bob found himself revealing his whole money condition, his innermost soul, in fact, to Delia Hammond. Through the week he had been building a conception of his own of Mrs. Hammond. Quite frankly, he liked her; although he had been a little afraid of her. That fear had worn off, and he had come to discount the lurid tales told to him about her by his chums, by Mazie, by even Sally.

Shucks, there was nothing of immorality or mystery about Mrs. Hammond. It was her own business if she chose to dance here under a nom de plume. A lady in her social position had to take care. But she had revealed herself to Bob as nothing more than a brilliant woman, with an abiding interest in the things of the mind.

After all, Mazie Revere was a dumb-bell. Why take her word against Mrs. Hammond's character. And Freddy and Arch were just irresponsible, and inclined to romanticize. That's it: the reputed lovenest on Park Avenue was just a figment of foolish, or mongering, minds.

"Bob, how in the world are you going to meet your graduation expenses?" Mrs. Hammond was asking.

"I wish I knew," he said earnestly. "Thinking about it gives me a headache. Of course, the money I'm making here is going to help a lot. But a fellow needs a little more than just enough to pay his immediate bills. Of course, I can get any kind of a job for the summer, but I am the sort who hates to waste time. I want to get right into my chosen field. Gosh, I hope I graduate with honors. The big industrial corporations are always watching to give jobs to fellows who win honors in the engineering course—"

"Bob, I'd hate to see your first chances ruined by the grind of poverty. I know so many important men, so many engineers, that I am sure I shall be able to do something for you very quickly, after you graduate. But, meanwhile, we must try to think up some way to help you over Commencement."

"Try to think up some way? That's all I do!"

"Yes, but you're just a sweet boy, Bob, and you haven't had any experience in such matters of the world. You need counsel, aid. For instance, one of the most important things of all is for you to make a good appearance when you interview men, after you graduate, for a position. A good personal appearance, I mean—clothes, you know!"

"Yes, I know!" said Bob, with just a trace of bitterness. He was thinking of the hundreds of dollars he had had to give to the charitable help of relatives, blasting his own plans and needs.

"Well, I'll try to think of a way to help. You won't mind if I'm so interested in you, will you, Bob? Of course, if you do—why—"

"Indeed I won't. I think it's mighty nice of you."

Her offer had come so spontaneously, so utterly devoid of passion or anything more than a purely platonic and friendly interest, that Bob was disarmed on the moment. Besides, his needs were so desperate that he could not afford to instantly set his face against any sort of an offer of interested help, particularly so apparently unselfish an offer as Mrs. Hammond's. It was all very well for Freddy and Arch; they had a good bit salted away. Though they had always been generous friends, they had lived frugally and had not had the same demands made upon them with which Bob had been faced.

"I'm glad you feel that way, Bob, really I am. Because I like you, and have nothing but the friendliest motives. Maybe it seems a bit strange to you that a woman like me should be so interested in helping you. And perhaps these people here have been repeating all sorts of idiotic and idle gossip to you about me. But I tell you, Bob, there is no truth in anything anyone has said to you about me. They know nothing about me, you see, and it irks their spite. People, especially women, of a certain class, are that way."

"What I've often wondered, Delia," said Bob, frank because she was speaking so confidentially, "is why a woman like you comes here to such a place. I'm sure you must know so many interesting people that you'd never be bored for want of something to do."

"There's a long story behind that, Bob. Some day I shall tell it to you. And very soon now, the first chance, in fact, that we have to talk together alone, I shall tell you who I really am. You will understand then the truth of what I am now going to tell you—that my whole purpose in coming here was a purely sociological one. I am President of a society women's federation that investigates all sorts of sociological conditions. I have written several books on sociology. And I am here merely seeking local color. I'll admit, too, that there is a good deal of the tomboy in me," she added, with a confessional sort of laugh, designed to be most disengaging, "the playgirl, you know. So I do have fun about my investigations. And that's why it was most refreshing and unusual for me to meet anyone like you here."

FRIENDS HONOR ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. John Porteous Have Been Married 50 Years.

BETHANY, April 26.—On Saturday afternoon, April 16, Mr. and Mrs. John Porteous were given a surprise when their children and grandchildren numbering thirteen gathered at their home to celebrate with them the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Porteous were both born in the township of Manvers and the greater part of their life was spent in this community. They were married in the village of Bethany 50 years ago, the officiating clergyman being the Rev. Mr. Walker. The bride was attended by Dorothy Porteous and the groom by Robert Cowan, of Orono.

When all the guests were assembled the fifty-year-old bride and groom were ushered into the drawing-room, and the following address was read by their granddaughter, Miss Jean Thorndyke, of Toronto:

"On behalf of your family who have met on this fiftieth anniversary of your wedding and who wish to express the joy we feel in being permitted to be with you on this occasion, as a very slight token of our love for you we ask you to accept this little gift, hoping that you will be spared many more years of wedded bliss.

"Signed on behalf of your children and grandchildren."

This was responded to by the groom who in a few well-chosen words expressed the appreciation he and his wife felt the kindly remembrance of their children on this most auspicious day.

A dainty wedding supper was then partaken of in the nicely decorated dining-room, and a social time was spent together.

Those present besides Mr. and Mrs. Porteous were: Mrs. E. O. Veale and daughter, Donna, of St. Catharines; Mrs. Ona Thorndyke and family, of Bethany; Mrs. Claud Porteous and children, of Cavan, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Porteous, of Cavan.

Later in the evening representatives of all the departments of the United Church, of which Mr. and Mrs. Porteous have been life-long members and active workers, called on them and extended their congratulations to the happy couple, and the following address was read by one of their number:

"Mr. and Mrs. John Porteous.

"Dear Friends,—We have learned with pleasure that you have come to the fiftieth anniversary of your wedding. It is a joy that is only granted to a few people. Many are separated by divine will long before they reach the fiftieth milestone of their matrimonial journey, but you have been graciously spared, and we rejoice with you today in recognition of the goodness of our Heavenly Father in sparing you both for this day, and we trust and pray that you may be spared to continue the journey of life together for many years.

"Although this is your golden wedding, we know that all the days have not been golden. Fifty years bring many cares and worries, but we realize you have met them all with a wonderful fortitude and grace, and around you have been the "Everlasting Arms." We are reminded that you have always tried to look past your own difficulties to the cares and problems of others, and have helped to make them lighter for those who found them hard to bear. You have earnestly tried to follow the golden path of service, and many have been cheered by your kindly words and deeds.

"We, the representatives of the church, Sunday School, Ladies' Aid, W.M.S. and League, are met to thank you for all your kindness and for the interest you have shown in all departments of our church life. We cannot put into words all we feel, but perhaps you will understand something of our deep friendship and love by our visit with you this evening.

"We congratulate you heartily on this, your golden wedding day. We believe your love for each other is as youthful as in 1877, and fifty years more deep and affectionate.

"Signed on behalf of the Church Session, T. J. Jackson; Sunday School, Alex. H. Monk; Ladies' Aid, Mrs. F. C. Dawe; W.M.S., Ada E. Richardson; Y.P.L., Bert A. Monk; Alfred Poulter, pastor."

Chemist Tells How To End Dandruff and Stop Falling Hair

That dandruff is responsible for nearly all the diseases to which the scalp is heir, as well as for baldness and premature gray hair, is a well-known fact. We appreciate, therefore, the importance of any agent that will destroy its power. For this reason it is a pleasure to give herewith the prescription which a famous scalp specialist states he has found, after repeated tests, will completely end dandruff in from one to three applications. It will also almost immediately stop falling hair and it has in numerous cases produced a new hair growth after years of partial baldness. The prescription can be made up at home, or any druggist will put it up for you—6 ounces Bay Rum, 2 ounces Lavona de Compose, one-half drachm Menthol Crystals. Mix thoroughly, and after standing an hour it is ready for use. Apply night and morning, rubbing into the scalp with the finger tips. If you wish it perfumed, add 1 drachm of your favorite perfume—you'll be delighted!

AVERAGE INCOME ELEVEN .. .. CENTS A MINUTE

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 26.—Every time the minute hand of the clock moves up a notch, the workers of the United States have pocketed $550,000, declares and enterprising statistician of a clock company here. The average income of the American citizen gainfully employed in a regular eight hour day is 11 1-2 cents a minute. He also figured that President Coolidge receive 50 cents a minute as chief executive 50 cents a minute as chief executive; Will Hays gets a dollar a minute; and Judge Landis makes 43 cents. Douglas Fairbanks leads the list, with $6.67 a minute. A single second wasted by American workers would cost $9930.

Although the old volcanic peak of Mount Hood, Oregon, has long been classed as extinct, the rocks near its summit always contain enough heat to boil coffee.

TUESDAY, APRIL 26, 1927.

. . . REPORTER OF THE NEW . . . REMEMBRANCER OF THE OLD AND TRIED . . . HERALD OF WHAT IS TO COME.

THE BUS SERVICE.

Mayor Holloway's explanation of his statement made at the Bell Telephone banquet to the effect that if the new bus line did not show a profit at the end of thirty days the service would be discontinued, was received too late for a change in The Examiner's editorial reference to the subject in last night's issue.

His Worship explains that his intimation of the suspension of the service if a month's trial indicated the enterprise unprofitable was not official so far as the bus company was concerned, but was merely his own opinion as to what would happen if the buses were not sufficiently patronized.

However, Mayor Holloway was not far off the mark.

The service is a commercial proposition, and is not likely to be continued if it does not give signs of showing a profit.

Citizens would do well not to lose sight of that fact.

EVERYBODY LOVES A CIRCUS.

Ten teams of boys started out last evening on a ticket-selling campaign on behalf of the Boys' Week circus which, as The Examiner has pointed out, is being counted upon to finance some at least of the activities of this great week.

It is the intention of the committee, if there should be a surplus after the expenses of Boys' Week have been met, to donate the balance to charitable institutions, inasmuch as the effort is not a commercial affair, but a campaign to interest the community in the boy and the boy in the community.

On that basis it should receive general support, and The Examiner, confident that it will, suggests to its readers that it co-operate with the committee by purchasing circus tickets when the boy canvassers make their call.

The admission fee has been placed at the popular price of 25c, and at this price the tickets should find a ready sale.

Help some boy you know to win a worth-while prize and help all boys in the city to benefit by Boys' Week by getting your circus ticket early.

Everybody loves a circus, and this particular event embodies much more general benefit to the community than the usual travelling aggregation.

SAVE THE FORESTS.

By Royal proclamation the present week has been set aside in Canada as "Save-the-Forest Week," the objects being to convince Canadians of the value to the Dominion of the forests and the need of preventing their destruction by fire.

There is ample warrant for such a campaign.

The Forest Service of the Department of the Interior is responsible for the statement that last year Canada had 5,529 forest fires, which burned over a total area of 1,824,015 acres, with a total loss of $7,468,343.

Fortunately this total was smaller than the average yearly loss for the five years from 1922 to 1926, which was $14,214,646.

Let that figure sink in.

It means that in five years a loss of over seventy million dollars was sustained by this country in forest fires, many of which started through the carelessness of some camper, hunter or settler.

In the last couple of weeks there has been an epidemic of grass fires in Peterborough, giving the Fire Department a good deal of trouble.

The rapidity with which these fires spread, as was evidenced at Armour's Hill a week ago, gives some idea of how a forest fire once fairly going sweeps through many square miles of valuable timber.

The best time to stop such fires is before they start, and it is this angle of the question that the Save-the-Forest Week seeks to present to the people of this country.

Governments can do their part by providing forestry patrols and fire-fighting equipment, but the most effective contribution can be made by individuals in being reasonably careful when in the woods.

THEY'D BETTER GET TOGETHER.

J. O. Herity, Secretary of the Central Ontario Power Association, accuses The Examiner of being unfair in its view that membership in the association is of doubtful value to Peterborough.

In regard to the closing down of the Peterborough street railway he writes:

"To attribute this action to any influence exercised by the Central Ontario Power Association is entirely aside from the fact and grossly unjust."

Mr. Herity's quarrel is not with The Examiner, but with the officials of his own association, if the charge that the association was in any way responsible for the withdrawal of street railway service by the Hydro Commission is inaccurate.

Interviewed on April 1, F. L. Mason, of Oshawa, the President of the Central Ontario Power Association, and G. D. Conant, also of Oshawa, the Second Vice-President, hailed the shutting down of the Peterborough street railway as a sign that the Commission was meeting the requests of the association.

With the President of the Central Ontario Power Association thus claiming on behalf of his organization the credit for Hydro's action, it is difficult to see why Secretary Herity should charge The Examiner with being grossly unjust in calling attention to the fact.

The officials of the Central Ontario Power Association had better get together and decide upon an official spokesman.

That would prevent the President from making statements that the Secretary declares, when repeated by a newspaper, are entirely aside from the fact.

A RUM-RUNNER'S PARADISE.

The prohibition enforcement officers of the United States located in the Detroit district have been extremely kind to Canadian exporters of liquor. It has been the favorite spot for shipments across the border. When there was not enough booze available in Ontario and Quebec to keep the rum-runners busy it came from the other Provinces. It came from Vancouver, and it came from Halifax. The figures presented to the Customs Commission lead to the belief that the way was almost wide open.

Canadian officials are supposed to notify the American officials when shipments leave, and complaint has been made in Detroit that although this has been done fairly regularly no use has been made of the information. It would appear so. If the United States officials were in earnest in the enforcement of their laws they could have learned that the Canadian waterfront was more than adequately provided with liquor export docks and that they were busy places.

Perhaps Washington will take cognizance of the information that last year 80 per cent. of all the beer and whiskey exported to the States went through this point and will act accordingly. Whether or not Canada plays the part of the good neighbor, as it should, and takes steps to prevent the export of liquor across the line while a prohibition law is on the statute books, the information secured by the Commission on Customs should be made the basis of a more thorough checking system. It is not of much advantage to the Border Cities to be known as the chief source of liquor supply for the States. They can get along without this business, and their people should join in a demand that the waterfront be used for legitimate trade instead of furthering the traffic of the bootlegger.—The Globe.

BUOYANT FINANCES.

Canada's fiscal year has closed. It was a twelve months of expanding revenues, amply justifying the Minister of Finance in his tax reduction programme and suggesting the possibility of still further tax cuts to come.

Total taxes collected in Canada in the twelve months to March 31 were $336,000,000, an increase of $18,000,000 over the previous year, despite reductions made a year ago in income and other taxes. The largest share of the increase was contributed by the Customs Department. Customs duties increased from $126,000,000 to $140,000,000, the expansion being $14,500,000, of which perhaps two-thirds was attributable to the stricter methods of collection in force. Excise duties also increased from $42,500,000 to $48,000,000, no doubt much of the increase being traceable to the same cause.

Sales and stamp taxes produced $6,500,000 more, the revenue being $97,000,000; income tax brought in $8,000,000 less, 1927 revenue amounting to $27,000,000.

Expenditures declined slightly from $330,000,000 to $324,000,000.

All in all, the year was an excellent one for the Dominion Treasury.

The effect of the higher revenues and lower expenditures was to decrease the debt burden of the country during the year by $61,000,000. Of this, about $33,000,000 represented a decrease in the funded debt of the country, an important reduction, reflecting considerable credit upon the Finance Department. This cut was augmented by an increase in sinking fund of over $3,000,000. Thus the actual net bonded indebtedness of Canada declined during the year by $36,000,000 without any increase in temporary loans or for the use of other expedients.

This reduction in debts, together with the refunding of maturing issues at lower rates of interest, is having the effect of reducing the interest burden of the taxpayer.

Interest charges paid in the previous year totalled $125,300,000. In the year just closed, they totalled $122,000,000.

The reductions in debt and in interest charges appear small when considered beside the existing totals. But they are substantial reductions when the general lack of prosperity durwing the past five years in Canada is considered. It is to be expected—and in fact will be demanded by business men—that more substantial reductions will be made from year to year in the future. The next ten years may conceivably see the annual interest burden of the Government reduced by $50,000,000. If only a small part of this saving were set aside to build up a sinking fund, the debt of the country could be brought within very moderate proportions inside of a few years. It is not generally thought that sweeping reductions in the Dominion debt are essential. Most observers are willing that the payment of the war costs should be spread over a considerable term of years in order not to bear too heavily upon the generation that has already contributed most heavily to such of the war expenses as has been paid out of current revenue.—Financial Post.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, April 26 (Canadian Press)—Wheat prices marched right up the hill yesterday and marched right down again. Better weather and lack of sustained buying proved to be an offset for a big shrinkage both in the amount of wheat on ocean passage and in the United States visible supply. Wheat closed irregular, 1-4 net lower 1-8c to 1-4c advance; corn 1-8 to 1-2c off; oats 1-8 to 1-2c down, and provisions showing two to 12 cents gain.

More favorable conditions for field work had a bearish effect on corn and oats. With wheat turning weak, corn and oats declined in the face of visible supply decreases of 3,592,000 bushels for corn and 1,417,000 bushels for oats.

Provisions were firmer as a result of strength shown early in the cotton market.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, April 26 (Canadian Press).—The foreign demand for Manitob Spring wheat here over the week-end was fair, and a moderate amount of business was worked.

Trading in cash grain was quiet, the demand being only for odd cars for domestic and country account, but the feeling was firm.

Prices for all grades of Spring wheat flour were well maintained under a moderate demand from foreign and local buyers. The movement of Winter wheat flour continued small and prices were unchanged.

The tone of the millfeed market was firm and the demand continued good. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was quiet but steady.

Owing to the continued good demand for eggs at country points for storage purposes, a firmer feeling prevailed here and prices were marked up 1 cent per dozen. The receipts were 1,800 cases.

The strength which has characterized the butter market for the past ten days was again the feature of the trade yesterday and prices scored a further advance of 2 1-2c per dozen. This was due to the continued small supplies coming forward and the good demand. The receipts were 362 packages.

Owing to the above jobbing prices were also marked up another cent per pound to 42c per pound for finest grades in solid packages, and to 43c per pound for one pound blocks.

The cheese trade was again very quiet, but prices were steady. The receipts were 123 boxes.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

WHY SUICIDE?

By Dr. Frank Crane.

At least 20 cases of suicide have been recently reported in the American Press, most of them young people. Why suicide?

Many things have been assigned as reasons for suicide. The usual causes commonly alleged are world weariness, disappointment in love or business and a general disgust with the drabness of life.

There are times when it takes a great deal of courage simply to go on living.

Life is an adventure. There are always dangers and risks in it, even at the best, and there are some people who have not the heart to tackle it.

It seems to me, however, that the real cause of suicide is egotism. Suicide is a phase of egotism.

One who broods too much upon his own condition, one who thinks too much about his own prospects or takes too much to heart the flings of an outraged fortune is apt to become morbid.

There may be some good in self-examination, but it is a practice usually overdone. Those who are constantly picking their own selves to pieces are apt to become one-sided in their views.

If you will concentrate your attention upon your forefinger for sometime it will develop some kind of a disease. Most any part of your body gets out of order before long if you keep thinking about it.

The best remedy for most morbid ills is to think of something else.

When you let the body and soul alone they generally take care of themselves. They are managed by nature and instinct which are much wiser than you are.

The people who have the best health, as a rule, are the people who never think of their health. You do not find healthy people on the porches of sanitariums and in asylums, but you find them on the baseball field, the tennis court and the polo grounds, where they are playing the game and not thinking about themselves.

Whoever has never cultivated a lively interest in the things and people about him misses one of the chief resources of happiness. Never to know the pleasure of making some one else happy is to miss the greatest joy in life and the most lasting joy. The reaction from doing good to others is of vastly greater benefit to body and soul than the effect of doing good to ourselves. Whoever coddles himself generally becomes morbid.

The most unhappy people to be found are the professional pleasure seekers, those always seeking for a new thrill. And the happiest people we know of are those who are busily engaged in some work which takes them out of themselves and to whom happiness comes, as it were, over the shoulder.

Joy is not a contemplated product of living, but it is a by-product of life.

All the natural functions of life if they are allowed free play and are not dwelt upon, operate with pleasure.

If you feel a disposition to suicide coming on quit thinking about yourself and interest yourself in doing good to somebody else quickly, and pretty soon life will look so good to you and so full of promise that you can't wait till the next day to see how it comes out.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

SAYS REPORT WRONG.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir: I am a subscriber and a reader of your paper and would appreciate it very much if you would print the following:

An article from the "Orange Corners" was published in your paper about April 5th, with the idea of giving the history of St. John's Church, Emily.

I am sure that if the writer had gone to Mr. Walter Magee he would have given information that would have resulted in an accurate history. A number of years before Mr. John Magee (the former's grandfather) came to Canada, there was a church and there it remained during the time that Mr. Thompson, the missionary, labored among the settlers. That would be about the years 1814 to 1833, when the Rev. Armour became rector. It was years after Mr. Armour's time (I don't know how many) that the church building was erected on Mr. Magee's farm. The early date, on which the writer said that a piece of land was donated, is incorrect. The country was not as modern as the story would lead us to believe. It was a dense forest, with no roads, save the Indian trail. We could hardly expect it to be properly surveyed. Anyone knowing the history of the early settlers, would know that Mr. Magee was not in a position, or had the authority to do so. If any person doubts this, they will get the early history at the Omemee Rectory, and the later years at the Millbrook Rectory.

ANSWER TO "FARM" MAN.

To the Examiner:

Dear sir:

I feel constrained to reply to the letter signed "A Farm Man", in your paper of the 22nd, as it seems to be unfair to the Peterborough Council of Women not to do so.

Many overtures of friendship have been made by past officers, who are charming women only to find that the Women's Institutes failed to respond. We venture to mention a recent experience.

The Agriculture Department at Ottawa sent us a lecturer and demonstrator from their markets branch, the object of which is to increase the sales of Canadian products rather than imported goods.

Thinking the matter one of general community interest the President of Peterborough Council of Women wrote to the Institutes Branch at Toronto obtained the names and addresses of the officers of all local Institutes wrote a personal letter to each president giving her a hearty invitation to meet us, and enjoy the lecture. Through her we extended the invittaion to all the women in her community.

The result was that one member of Warsaw Institute attended from the others we heard not a word.

As far as the writer can judge, what is keeping us apart is a sensitiveness on the part of the farm women—a fear that the city women are snobbish.

The writer of this letter is herself a farm woman—the daughter of a farmer, whose lot it has been to live in cities for some years. In her admiration for the work of the National Council of Women, she has overcome this inferiority complex and found it to exist only in her own mind.

The founder of the National Council of Women, the Countess of Aberdeen and Temair, is herself a farmer's wife. Her Christmas greeting to us was a picture of her farm yard, showing a flock of healthy turkeys, with the greeeting, "The fowl of Temair cackle a greeting."

Now Mr. Farm Man, if you can sugest plans to overcome this barrier, we shall be only to grateful.

To the farm women of the Peterborough district, one who has jumped into the current and found it good, extends this invitation, "Come on in, the water's fine."

CURING PRURITUS THROUGH DIET

There is intense burning or itching with all forms of pruritus. The form which effects the membrane around the rectum and generative organs is the kind to which physicians usually give the name of pruritus. When the itching is located just around the anus it is called pruritus ani. This is a very common disorder and is not primarily caused by any infection, so, therefore, cannot be cured by the external application of remedies.

Physicians usually recognize that there is a nervous origin for pruritus, but frequently find that lithemia (alkaline urine) or excess acidity of the urine is present in many cases, and the toxemias which produce this change in the urine also produce the irritation around the anus or, in the female, around the vulva. In many cases, it is associated with, or actually due to, vascular lesions, hepatic sclerosis, renal degeneration or other processes of a fibroid nature.

Nervous excitement, no doubt, makes the trouble worse; and the use of tea, coffee, and alcohol is especially irritating to this trouble and, in fact, to every kind of an itch caused by toxicosis. Constipation and the consequent absorption of poisons must be cited as an important cause, while incompatible food mixtures, such as cereals with sugar, produce an irritation of the entire alimentary canal and, of course, the rectum and anus are also irritated.

In the wintertime, when the elimination from the skin is less, more poisons are thrown out through the colon and bladder. These poisons irritate the delicate membranes of the generative organs and the rectum, so itching in these parts is more common in the winter than in the summer. Patients frantically try every remedy they hear of to stop the burning and itching, but without much relief.

A few weeks ago I examined a patient whose doctor had gone to the extreme of operating and removing sections of skin around the rectum, thinking, that by the removal of this skin, he would be able to stop the terrible itching. The skin-removing operations were, however, unsuccessful, and the patient came to me almost insane with distress.

She is now entirely well and has no itching at all. Her cure was effected entirely through taking a short fast followed by a well balanced diet which got rid of the auto-intoxication and the intestinal poisoning from which her trouble originally developed. I have never seen a case which did not respond to this blood-building, body-cleansing treatment, and I cite the above case simply to show you what results can be obtained, as this was probably one of the worst cases I have ever observed.

If you are troubled with any disorder of this kind, start dieting at once and treat your trouble systemically and not locally. It may be a week or two before you will notice a change, but a cure is certain as soon as your system becomes completely detoxicated.

AT THE REGENT.

AT THE REGENT

LILLIAN GISH IN "THE SCARLET LETTER".

There were large crowds at the Regent Theatre yesterday for the opening performances of "The Scarlet Letter," with Lillian Gish in the role of Hester Prynne; Lars Hanson taking the part of the Reverend Arthur Dimmesdale, and Henry Walthall as Roger Prynne, husband of the wearer of the scarlet letter.

The famous story written by Nathaniel Hawthorne has been beautifully handled by the producers. Once again, Lillian Gish demonstrates the superb artistry which sets her on a pinnacle among the women of the screen. From beginning to end, she is the gentle Puritan girl who gives her life to public repentance of sin and expiation for the love which sent her out into the world with th first letter of the, world "Adultress" worked in scarlet thread against her breast.

The background and atmosphere of Puritan days has been reproduced with faithful exactitude, in the manner in which American producers do such things. They take immense pains to delineate small details of bygone ways and customs, then cast over the whole production the modern glamor of up-to-date screen methods. The dress and living habits, the stern intolerance and narrow-mindedness of these early men and women of the Colonial settlement of Boston, the speaking-tubes for lovers that kept them at a respectable distance from one another, the laws governing even the washing of "immodest" female undergarments, all have a place in this picture, and a pleasant interlude is the ducking of the village gossip who has been among the first to revile the gentle Hester.

The story centers about the love of Hester Prynne, who, unknown with the first letter of the word parted long since to a man still living, and the Reverend Arthur Dimmesdale, the bright-browed, eloquent preacher of the stern word of God, beloved by his fanatical people and the — little Hester alike. While he is absent on a political mission in England, their child is born, and the girl is publicly branded. She refuses to reveal the name of her partner, and adjures the minister to remain silent, fearing the effect of such a disclosure on the minds of his people. The pictured story departs slightly at moments from the book narrative.

Finally, Hester's long absent husband, Roger Prynne, returns, and the story works up to a wonderful climax and a sad but logical ending.

Backgrounded by the atmosphere of old Puritan days, giving a glimpse of the bigotry and fanaticism of the olden times, centering about a famous love story and the tale of a woman's sacrifice for the man she loved, with Lillian Gish as the heroine, "The Scarlet Letter" is a memorable production in every way.—Jeanette.

AT THE CAPITOL.

ADOLPHE MENJOU IN "THE SORROWS OF SATAN."

Beelzebub, so it appears, according to the romantic-minded late Marie Corelli, is a personage whose existence is passed under a curse that compels him to constantly tempt the souls of mortals. However, resistance to his wiles brings him happiness and "an hour at the Gates of Paradise." This is his sentence. And it is the working out of the curse that has given D. W. Griffith a splendid opportunity to exercise his magic in the feature picture, suggested by Corelli's famous novel, now on the screen at the Capitol Theatre. The silver sheet portrayal does not hew to the line strictly, departing very often from the written tale.

Adolphe Menjou has one of the most noteworthy roles of his career in this picture. He alone probably, could give to the delineation of Lucifer, walking the earth in the flesh, that mixture of triumphant genius and rather aloof sadness that surrounds Prince Lucio Riminez.

The Prince is the "familiar," one might say, of Geoffrey Tempest (Ricardo Cortez) and lures him on to the gates of damnation by offering him everything that the world can give.

The picture opens with a genuine Griffith touch in the presentation of the change of the shining Lucifer to the dark-hued Satan, from the courts of heaven to the precincts of hell, and his condemnation in Paradise. As the Prince Lucio Riminez, he comes later, in lightning and storm, to the attic room of Geoffrey Tempest, a "penny a liner" literary critic, half starved, who, in a moment of revolt against God, offers his soul to the devil for money that will take him out of his sordid existence. He has become involved in an intrigue with Mavis Clare (Carol Dempster) and wishes to marry her, but is prevented by lack of money. This part of the lovely, small Mavis is adorably taken by Miss Dempster, in fact, the whole production has the Griffith touch of perfection in its casting and atmosphere.

Swathed in worldly joys, Tempest marries the seductive Princess Olga Godovsky, (Lya de Putti) who wishes to win the love of the Prince Lucio. Spurned by him, because Satan has at last found, in the soul of Mavis Clare, one who will give him a longed-for hour at the gates of Paradise, by resisting his temptations, Olga suicides, and in a furious scene which follows, Satan reveals himself to the horror-stricken Tempest. This also has the Griffith artistry of production, with the shadowy, horned and hoofed figure of the temper pursuing the crazed man, fleeing at last to Mavis for consolation and refuge.

It is a notable picture and filled with interest, by reason of the macabre atmosphere and vivid portrayals of its cast.

WONDERFUL AUTOMOBILE ROADS.

The most wonderful automobile road in America, the Banff-Windermere Highway 104 miles in length, is in danger of losing its well earned laurels by the opening of another, and if possible, more wonderful road, the Great Divide Highway between Field and Lake Louise, which was completed last summer. But Prof. Laird's tour "Across Canada and Back," which leaves Toronto by Canadian Pacific Railway July 25th, 1927, for a 21 day trip, includes both these drives in his itinerary, and they are only a small part of the wonders to be seen. There is Banff, the beautiful; Lake Louise, the Pearl of the Rockies; Emerald Lake, second only to Lake Louise in beauty; the Yoho Valley ,one of the most marvelous Valleys in the world, with Takakkaw Falls over 1,200 feet in height pouring into it, and all the magnificence and grandeur of 600 miles of Rocky Mountain scenery. Vancouver and Victoria, those marvelous Pacific Coast cities, as well as Winnipeg, Calgary and Edmonton, are only a few of the places to be visited, and three great bodies of water are also on the route, the Great Lakes, the Kootenay Lakes and the Strait of Georgia between Vancouver and Victoria.

Write for illustrated booklet of this marvelous trip to W. Fulton, District Passenger Agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, Toronto, or to Prof. Sinclair, Macdonald College P.O., Que.

DESIGN WELL SUITED TO CANADIAN CONDITIONS

By Messrs. Reilly, Warburton & Reilly, Architects.

Here is an addition to the group of English Domestic designs previously illustrated in this series. The rather high proportion of homes shown designed in this style is illustrative of the manner in which many architects throughout Canada are coming to consider this style as the one best suited to meet Canadian conditions, and to appeal to the Canadian sense of beauty

Passing through the vestibule, we enter the hall, in which the distinction imparted by a single piece of inexpensive built-in furniture may be observed.

On the right a wide doorway leads to the living room, with its fireplace and doors to the effective little sunroom, and to the dining room, in which an excellent idea has been utilized by the construction of a recess containing a built-in sideboard. Even when this fixture is not desired the formation of a recess to accommodate a buffet is well worth while.

The kitchen, which has a tile dado and an electric range, gives easy access to the side door, basement, hall, main stairs, and through the breakfast nook to the dining room.

Upstairs are four bedrooms and a tiled bathroom, together with ample provision for clothes and linen closets.

Erected with reinforced concrete foundations, frame walls with tapestry brick veneer up to the window sills and stucco above, a high quality shingle roof, and oak floors, this house cost approximately 8,500.

Readers desiring further information regarding the plans and specifications of this house should communicate with the architects direct. Address Messrs. Reilly, Warburton & Reilly Regina, Sask.

SAFEGUARDING MILK

BY PASTEURIZATION

(Report of M.H.O. Toronto, continued from Saturday)

For the past twelve years there have been absolutely no cases of any communicable disease that we have been able to trace to the milk supply in Toronto.

A very interesting report in connection with tuberculosis appeared in the American Review of Tuberculosis for October, 1924, by Professor C. E.-A. Wnislow, in which he states that: "It is found, according to our investigations, that among the group of children of the milk consuming age, one to four years, in cities where a high percentage of the milk consumed is pasteurized, there is a death rate from non-pulmonary tuberculosis of about 75 per 100,000 of population, as contrasted with the pulmonary rate of about 25 per 100,000. On the other hand, in cities where there has been but little efficient pasteurization, there is an increase in the non-pulmonary rate to 100 per 100,000, where the pulmonary rate remains about the same."

The "non-pulmonary" tuberculosis is the type associated with milk, and is, for the most part, of bovine origin, and the wonderful reduction in these cases where pasteurization has been rigidly carried out is very interesting.

The number of cases of tuberculosis in Toronto in the past eight years that could be even suspected of being of bovine origin, has been practically negligible, and it is gratifying to feel that this record is due almost entirely to the pasteurization of our milk supply.

The foregoing are but a few of the evidences of the dangers of transmission of the various communicable diseases, through non-pasteurized milk.

How Can These Dangers Be Eliminated?

With such overwhelming evidence of the dangers of the transmission of disease through milk, the problem confronting Departments of Health is how can we most efficiently remove these dangers.

CANADA IS A NATION.

Canada is a nation, some day in the near future she will be a great nation, and it is within the range of possibilities that she will be the greatest unit of the British Empire. It is a wonderful country, a country, of unlimited resources and magnificent possibilities. As a nation she celebrates her sixtieth anniversary this year. What better way for you to celebrate it then by taking a trip "Across Canada and Back" and seeing for yourself the reason for this optimism about the future. Prof. Laird of Macdonald College, Que., has arranged with the Canadian Pacific Railway for a special train of sleeping cars to leave Toronto on July 25th, cross the continent and get back to Toronto on August 15th, and in that space of 21 days to see all the principal cities, and the noted beauty spots of the West. After Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and the principal cities of the prairies, there is the magnificence of the Rockies, and those famous beauty spots, Banff, Lake Louise, Emerald Lake and Yoho Valley. Then there are two wonderful motor drives, from Banff to Windermere 104 miles, and from Field to Lake Louise 40 miles. The Kootenay district of which Nelson is the capital, and Okanagan Valley fruit country in which is located Penticton will be visited, and Vancouver and Victoria, those rapidly growing Pacific Coast cities, will delight everyone.

An illustrated booklet descriptive of the tour is now ready, and can be had on application to W. Fulton, District Passenger Agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, or to Prof. Sinclair Laird, Macdonald College P.O., Que.

HEALTH LAWS ARE OPTIONAL

New Regulations Effective Only When Passed by Councils.

MANY CLAUSES

Ontario's new health regulations, passed by recent Order-in-Council and made public last Wednesday, are purely optional in nature. They will be effective only in those municipalities which desire to adopt them—part or parcel—and Municipal Boards of Health and Councils both must be parties to that adoption.

In the words of Premier Ferguson, the new regulations simply represent "a wide scope of authority within which any municipality can introduce regulations to meet its immediate needs."

The regulations are issued under the authority given by the Public Health Act, 1927, and as such are of the same effect as statute laws, subject, of course, to the municipality having the right of choosing whether or not the regulations shall apply.

In connection with bakeries regulations, it is stipulated that the floor of every place used as a bakery, if below the street level, shall be constructed of concrete, asphalt, or other non-absorbable material. As a precaution against flies, all bakery windows and doors shall be fitted with self-closing wire screens from April 1 to December 1 in each and every year. No person shall sleep or live in any bakery. Domestic animals are not allowed. All workmen engaged in manufacturing or handling bakery goods of paint, which must be renewed every or shoes and a washable suit of white to be used for this purpose only.

Provides For Wrapped Bread.

All places must be kept free from communicable diseases. None shall be located within 25 feet of any place where horses or cows are housed. All vehicles, boxes, baskets, etc., from which bakery products are sold in the streets must be closely covered, and all bread must be delivered in baskets. No person employed as driver or deliverer of such products shall carry the articles in his hands or arms unless the articles are wrapped in paper or other material to protect them from dirt and dust.

Restaurant Rules.

Requirements governing restaurants and other public eating places put the ban on the presence of dogs and other animals. The rooms of the restaurants must be kept in a strictly sanitary condition at all times. The walls and ceilings of such rooms shall be painted white with enamel finish, or whitewashed. If painted, they shall have three coats of paint, wich must be renewed at least every two years. Whitewash jobs must be renewed every three months.

No sleeping rooms or washrooms shall communicate directly with eating or rooms in which food is prepared. All persons handling food in restaurants must furnish medical certificates that they are not suffering from any communicable disease. Restaurants must provide storerooms for keeping food. Dry sweeping is taboo. Kitchen and dining-room floors shall be mopped, cleaned or oiled at least once every twenty-four hours.

Persons operating hotels, drug stores, soda fountains, etc., must furnish suitable facilities for the efficient cleansing of drinking utensils.

Ice cream must be manufactured and stored in rooms with water-tight walls. Vessels used for the making and sale of ice cream must not be used for any other purpose. Plain ice cream shall contain not less than 7 per cent. of butter fat, fruit ice cream not less than 6 per cent. and nut ice cream not less than 6 per cent. In all three cases there shall be not more than 2 per cent. of filler. No old or melted ice cream or ice cream returned to the manufacturer, from whatever cause or source, shall again be used in the preparation of ice cream for sale in the municipality.

Tongs or Gloves.

In the delivery of buns, bread, and other bakery products, it is ordersd that no person, firm, or corporation shall engage in the work without first protecting the hands from coming in contact with the products by wearing white-laundered cotton or thin gloves. The gloves must be kept in the bread basket, when not in use, and must be laundered at least twice a week. This regulation is not enforced where the deliverer uses tongs approved by the Medical Officer of Health, or where the bakery products are properly wrapped with wax paper.

Regulations regarding the manufacture of cheese state that none shall be manufactured or stored out of doors; that milk coming from the dairy farm directly to a cheese manufactory shall be sealed with two seals bearing the name or initials of the producer and they must not be broken until the milk is in the cheese room; and that all cheese shall be stored in a clean receptacle and when sold shall be wrapped in clean manilla or oiled paper.

Another regulation, governing exposure of foodstuffs for sale, makes it unlawful for all vendors or clerks to moisten their fingers in their mouth before picking up papers necessary to drop food products in.

In chicken-killing establishments the stock and sale room must be separate from the killing room. All crates must be lime-washed at least once a week. Floors must be flushed or washed daily.

To License Cutting of Ice.

No ice shall be cut from lake, river or stream for the purpose of being sold in a municipality, unless a permit has first been obtained by written application from the Local Board of Health. On receipt of such application the M.O.H. shall have samples of the ice to be cut examined bacteriologically.

Because of the fact that the common drinking cup has been repeatedly demonstrated to be a not uncommon source of the transmission of communicable disease its use in public places is prohibited.

Regulations governing lodging houses are drastic in nature. No beds or bunks shall be placed one above another, and no one shall be permitted to sleep or dwell in a basement. In every lodging house there shall be provided for each lodger a separate bed with bedstand, bedding and bedclothes, and no lodger shall be allowed to sleep elsewhere than in such bed. All mattresses shall be provided with waterproof covering. No comforter shall be permitted, but blankets must be used instead. Nothing but iron or metal bedsteads shall be used. At least one shower bath shall be provided on each and every floor for the use of lodgers.

An adequate supply of clean towels and hot and cold water shall be provided lodgers free of charge. Licenses to be granted to lodging houses shall be subject to revocation at all times.

Inasmuch as the common use of the roller towel may be prejudical to public health, persons, firms or corporations are forbidden to maintain such a towel in a public washroom.

Nighis Must Be Quiet.

Production or cause of unnecessary noises in any municipality between the hours of 10 p.m. and 7 a.m. are prohibited.

In order to provide for prevention of the spread of hay fever, it has been made unlawful for any one to allow weeds to grow over a foot in height or stand on his or her premises.

All wiping rags supplied to workmen shall have first been sterilized by a process of boiling for 40 minutes in a solution containing 5 per cent of caustic or washing soda. Every parcel of wiping rags shall before being sold or offered for sale be plainly marked "Sterilized Wiping Rags," with the name and location of the laundry in which the rags contained in such parcel or package were laundered and sterilized, and the date thereof.

Regulations have been drafted also against "the common practice for cities and towns on the Great Lakes and tributary rivers to pour their sewage into these bodies of water.'

"It is known to the Department of Health," the regulations read, "that steamers on Lake Ontario have pumped polluted water in for drinking, washing and culinary purposes, a practice which has resulted in the origin of many cases of typhoid fever."

Under head of barber shop regulations, the tonsorial artist is allowed to use individual caustic sticks if they are immediately destroyed afterward. The use of powder puffs and sponges is prohibited. Separate towels must be used for each and every customer. No rum or other astringment, shall be used on a second person. No barber shall shave a customer when the surface to be shaved is inflamed or broken out with rash, unless such person has his own individual utensils for shaving. No barber shop shall be used as a dormitory or sleeping room.

Any person or persons contravening any of the provisions of the aformentioned regulations shall incur the penalties prescribed by the Public Health Act. Non-compliance means cancellation of the barber's license.

An Ex-Buck Private Goes Back to France

Dear Mac:

Do you remember the estaminet on the Rue de Toot Toot? Remember the mademoiselles you used to know—Celeste and Joan and Marie?

Well, I'm going back over the top this summer. I'm going to visit every cafe where we ever had a vin blanc. I'm going to "do" Paree and Wipers and all the rest. And I'm going to write you letters telling you all about it, like the Yanks told us all about the war after making a long-distance survey. If you don't like my story, you don't have to read it. Read the pictures; they're easier on the mentality.

Talking about crazy people reminds me of Agnes McPhail. You remember the guy who said he wouldn't kill a worm? The poet says: "Fellow feeling makes us wondrous kin."

They can all take a slap at military training now, but when another war breaks out they'll be mighty glad to invite a bunch of us to step up in front. Yea! It's just like Mr. Kipling said:

"O it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' Tommy [illegible] way;
But it's 'Thank you, Mister Atkins', when the b[illegible]ins to play.

"O makin' mock o' uniforms that guard you while you sleep
Is cheaper than them uniforms, an' they're starvation cheap;
An' hustlin' playful sodgers when they're goin' large a bit
Is five times better business than paradin' in full kit.
Then it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' 'Tommy, ow's yer soul?'
But it's 'Thin red line of 'eroes' when the drums begin to roll."

Well, I was glad anyhow on my last Sunday in Peterborough to see the old gang get together so well at that Church Parade. We used to skip them when we could in the blooming army, but it sure looks good nine years after the big scrap to see that the boys haven't, like our governments, forgotten. That's why I like this Canadian Legion business. I had a pal who was gassed at St. Julien, and you know what they did with gas cases. A fellow might know he was slowly dying, and everyone else might see him fading out of the picture, but a government medical board is blind and deaf when it wants to be. My sidekick couldn't get anything. Then the G.W.V.A. took up his case and forced it through. He got a pension.

There's one thing certain, if the crowd doesn't stick together for a square deal, the buck private will be out of luck.

This isn't getting very far towards France, but then this is just a kind of preliminary reconnaissance, as it were. I just want to let you know that I'm on my way, so that you won't be taken unawares if your wife reads in the paper some night about Alphonsine or Valentine asking for you. If there are any mademoiselles you'd like me to look up, send the names to the Editor of The Examiner and he will forward them to me.

No thanks, I don't need any money. I have beaucoup francs and if I go broke I'll call on some of the natives I helped out with sugar and bacon from company stores.

Toodle-do!
PAUL ADAMS.

During this week there has been much improvement in Peterborough in regard to the "Clean Up Campaign." Throughout the city many lawns are worthy of commendation for their neat appearance.

Some of these noticed by The Examiner were: St. Joseph's Hospital surroundings are in excellent condition and show that much care must have been taken of it to produce the appearance they have at the present time. The Westclox Company is also to be congratulated for the manner in which it has tried to make this campaign a success.

In the west end of the city such lawns as those of the Queen Mary School, A. W. Cressman, C. Ackerman, St. Peter's church, Trinity church, are in splendid shape. In fact, all the residents deserve credit for the splendid co-operation they have given the city for the "Clean Up Campaign."

BANQUET ENDS LEAGUE SEASON

Many Present at Final Function of Norham Branch.

INSPIRING SPEECHES

NORHAM, April 26. — The meetings of the Peoples' League were brought to a close for this term by a banquet held in the hall on Friday evening to which almost 100 members sat down. The affair was a rousing success all through. The hall was prettily decorated with flags, pictures and tissue paper fixtures. The tables were ornamented with bouquets of artificial, as well as natural flowers. The committee who had the menu in charge, Mrs. Wesley Newman, Mrs. George McAllister, Mrs. Richard Knight and Mrs. David Evans deserve great credit for the splendid way in which everything was done so well and in order. Fred H. Huycke had and excelled himself in his office. Miss Lulu Mitchell, the league president, was the accompanist. Six of the young people of the league took part in the toasts. The pastor, Rev. J. F. Everson, acted as toast master. Richard Knight was the soloist and Mrs. Lorne Evans the reader of the evening.

Four special speakers gave short addresses, Rev. W. W. Jones, and Rev. Mr. Fowler of Warkworth, Rev. James E. Beckel of Castleton, and Rev. Mr. Manson Doyle, B.A., of Toronto.

The guests gathered in the church and at 7.00 o'clock the call was rung for supper when all marched in a body to the hall and found their seats according to the names on the place cards. Each person remained standing until the Grace was sung. There were no waiters, the tables being already completely adorned with delicious viands. As a last course six young men, who had been previously appointed and conveniently seated, served ice cream.

At 8.15 the programme was opened by a toast to the King, followed by the National Anthem. The toast to "Our Country" was moved by Hayden Newman and seconded by Miss Clair Curtis, and responded to by Rev. Mr. Fowler, who pointed out that true patriotism involves expressing in action one's love for his country, and does not stop short of letting one's life revolve around Jesus Christ.

"O Canada," and "Neath the Crust of the Old Apple Pie," was then sung.

The toast to the People's League was moved by Ralph Campbell and seconded by Miss Lulu Mitchell and responded to by Rev. W. W. Jones, who drew attention to the fact that young people do not feel themselves perfect and want older ones to help them by their prayers, by their sincerity through being friendly and by giving them a share in life's work.

Flossie Everson moved a toast to "The United Church," which was seconded by Donald Knight, and responded to by Rev. James E. Beckel, who pointed out the task of the church in directing young people in their recreational work, and helping them to discriminate between good and evil. There was an intellectual work to do by way of educating them to an understanding of the value of the church and the Sunday school. Mr. Beckel sounded a strong note of revival evangelism through which young people would be soundly won for Christ. One of the great works of the church is conserving the gains, keeping people, old and young, in the church, enthusiastic about attendance and duties.

Mr. Knight sang "Carry me back to dear old childhood."

Mrs. Evans gave two readings, which were much appreciated.

Mr. Huycke then led the company in singing, "Massa's in the cold, cold ground," and "Day is dying in the west."

Rev. Manson Doyle spoke on "What young people are doing today," and gave facts from his own experience which showed that the hope of the church is in the young people who are much alive as to what are the best things in life.

Dr. Doyle assured his hearers that "if we work with our young people and become pals to them, and deem their interests worth while, we will reap a glorious harvest of stalwart men and women who will cause religion to thrive, and who will be great Canadian citizens."

He stated that from May until October a year ago an average of thirty-two letters a day went out of his office about young people's work.

Mr. Samuel Gummer in a brief speech, thanked the speakers from outside for their courtesy in coming to Norham to help forward so great a work. The singing of the doxology closed a most successful undertaking.

Mr. R. Stone ably filled the position of chairman.

An excellent programme was given, consisting of music, vocal and instrumental, and impromptu speeches.

Mrs. (Rev.) Howard, of Millbrook, and Mrs. F. Waterman, South Monaghan delighted those present with the solos which they sang, accompanied on the piano by Miss Waterman.

The Misses Bertha Lang and Gladys Williamson played piano duets. Mr. R. Matchett and Miss Muriel Matchett sang a humorous duet which was heartily applauded.

Impromptu speeches were interspersed with the musical numbers.

The Rev. P. C. Howard gave a short and interesting address.

At the beginning of the programme Mr. Howard read an address and Mr. Wes. Williamson presented Mr. and Mrs. Lamb with a beautiful gift of flat silverware, from their neighbors and friends.

Mr. Lamb, on behalf of himself and wife, made a suitable reply, after which the people joined in singing, "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows," and "See Him Smiling."

After the programme, lunch was served. Dancing followed, music being provided by Messrs. Todd and Rusk on violins accompanied on the piano by Mr. Todd's son, relieved by Miss Ingram.

Regent Street Ladies' Aid Has Done Great Deal of Work.

LAKEFIELD NEWS.

Lakefield, April 26.—The regular meeting of the Regent street Ladies' Aid was held in the church parlor on Tuesday afternoon, with the President, Mrs. Albert Darling in the chair. There was a good attendance, Miss Webster, the past president, read the Scripture lesson which was taken from the 14th chapter of the Gospel according to St. John, the first fifteen verses.

Four new members joined the society at this meeting and were heartily welcomed.

There were seventy-three members on the roll at the beginning of the year; ten meetings were held with an average attendance of twenty-two. The Thanksgiving Dinner and the Christmas Bazaar, the two biggest annual events managed by the Ladies' Aid were exceedingly successful, due in a great measure to the capable management and harmonious work among the ladies. During the year the Ladies' Aid gave financial help to the Quarterly Board and to the Sunday School and did some decorating at the parsonage, besides purchasing several articles for it. The year's work was indicative of the splendid spirit of co-operation and zealous work which has been the motto of the Ladies' Aid.

The treasurer of the Flower Fund, Mrs. F. H. Richardson, reported receipts of $14.18 and expenses $11.35, leaving on hand a balance of $2.83.

A.Y.P.A.

Monday evening was gentlemen's night at the A.Y.P.A. and the committee provided a very pleasant evening's entertainment.

Mr. K. A. Mackenzie kindly provided the first part of the evening's programme giving a series of moving pictures, which were particularly interesting as they were local news and as familiar faces appeared on the screen there was applause. Fire drill at the public school, the local fire brigade, the Grove hockey team, a thrilling snow fight, some delightful child pictures and also the pictures of his own wedding, taken at St. Peter's Church, Stoney Lake, were shown.

A hearty vote of thanks was given Mr. Mackenzie for his contribution to the evening's entertainment which was very much appreciated and it is hoped that some time the pictures may be repeated.

The remainder of the evening was spent in playing progressive euchre at which the prizes were won by Miss Blanche Graham and Mrs. Chappell.

The men served refreshments at the close of the evening.

A vote of thanks was extended for the pleasant evening, which had been provided for the entertainment of the ladies.

LAKEFIELD DANCE WELL ATTENDED

Village and Surrounding District Well Represented—Lakefield News.

LAKEFIELD, April 26.—The dance held on Easter Monday night in the Memorial Hall was very successful, with about two hundred present. The patronesses were Mrs. L. H. Grahame, Mrs. E. R. Tate, Mrs. A. G. Lawless, Mrs. Marling, Mrs. D. A. Langley, Mrs. Trude Waldon and Mrs. C. C. Stenner.

A good orchestra furnished the music, which was excellent, and thoroughly enjoyed by everyone, whether their part was that of looker on or performer. Those present included practically all the younger people of the village with a larger proportion of the older people than one sees nowadays at dances and also a large quota from out of town. The hall was in festal attire and looked its best.

Junior Institute.

The Junior Institute held a successful afternoon and evening in the Little White Shop on Saturday last, when they sold home cooking, candy and aprons. This is the initial effort of this society, and the results were very satisfactory. The little store presented an attractive appearance, with its artistic decorations and tastefully arranged window in which among the tempting wares, was a large pot of daffodils in bloom.

Grass Fire at The Park.

During the past week there have been a number of grass fires and on several occasions they became sufficiently large to cause an alarm. About two o'clock on Tuesday afternoon a fire in the Park which was started by the Park Commission to burn rubbish and grass, got out of bounds and the siren summoned the Fire Brigade, who spent the afternoon "on the job" as there is a large pile of saw dust on the site of the old Armstrong mill and a fire there might have been very serious. The wind fanned the flames and while no damage was done of any account, it required constant vigilance to keep it in check. The Park is increasing in popularity with tourists and is an asset to the village.

Easter Services.

The attendance at the Easter services in St. John's church was a record one with large congregations at all the services. There were a particularly large number of communicants, more than at any previous Easter. Celebrations were at 8 a.m. and 11 a.m. with Evensong at 7 p.m. The Easter Anthem was Caleb Simper's "Thanks Be To God" and Maybrooke's "Te Deum," Mann's "Sanctus" and Calkin's "Gloria Tibi," and Walmsley's "Kyrie" were sung. Rev. W. J. Creighton, M.A., the Rector of the Parish was in charge, assisted at the 11 o'clock service by Rev. A. W. Mackenzie, while Dr. F. H. Lingwood read the lessons at both morning and evening services.

At the morning service at the Regent street church, a children's choir robed in white surplices augmented the adult choir and was a pleasing addition, the fresh, clear, child voices being heard to particular advantage in the Easter music. The pastor, Rev. S. A. Kemp, was in charge.

The young people of Fairview United church are giving their dramatic entertainment, "The Old Fashioned Mother" under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of Regent street church in the church schoolroom on Thursday evening, April 28th. Mrs. J. A. Creaser (nee Jean Burritt, of Ottawa) held her first reception at her home on King street on Wednesday afternoon, her mother, Mrs. D. F. Burritt, of Ottawa, receiving with her. Elmsley poured tea and coffee, and a bevy of pretty girls served the callers, Misses Mary and Florence Mackenzie, Dorothy Langley and Angela Osborne, while Mrs. Kenneth A. Mackenzie and Mrs. C. R. May assisted the hostess.

SPLENDID CONCERT IS GIVEN AT DELORO

Misses Grainger and Newton Entertain For Social and Dramatic Society.

MARMORA, April 26.—Deloro's Hall was almost filled on Wednesday evening, when, under the auspices of its Social and Dramatic Society, the Misses Ethel J. Grainger and Pearl Newton, of Toronto, put on a first-class concert of song and recitation that left the desire for a return visit. Mrs. Ross Hunter at the piano proved an ideal accompanist for the offerings of Miss Grainger. This lady, who possesses a rich contralto voice, charmed the audience with her ten numbers which included "There's a land," "My Ain Folk," "Mate O' Mine," and "Two Eyes of Blue."

Miss Pearl Newton as an elocutionist showed great versatility. Her facial expressions were such as few in her class acquire. Her second number, a small boy's essay on a cow was the first to provoke hilarious laughter. Her next offering, "Bridget" in which an Irish girl's impressions of a Conservatory of Music are revealed, was another mirth provoker. Miss Newton's dramatic powers were exhibited in her presentation of the Trial Scene in "The Merchant of Venice," her impersonation of Shylock being remarkable. The audience, a little later, were seat into fits of laughter with her monologue, "Cheering the Invalid." For her last two numbers, Miss Newton appeared in Indian dress reciting, "The Red Girl's Test," and "Canadian Born."

SEEK PRIVATE HEARING, ETC.

Cowie, manager of the Dominion Bank here. The Mexico Export Company was the exporting agency for several of the large Canadian distilleries up to a short time ago. Recently, according to evidence, it has suspended operations.

Mr. Cowie testified that the Mexico Export Company had kept an account in his bank, and produced certain slips which covered banking transactions. Mr. Rowell glanced through come of them.

"It seems to have been not only an active but a very large account," he remarked. "Would these figures be a fair indication of the account?" he asked.

"Yes," reolied Mr. Cowie.

Mr. Rowell then said that from the 27th of July to the 6th of August last, deposits in the account totalled $270,000.

Messrs. Durfee, Caplan and Stickels were the men he had dealt with in connection with the account, said the witness. Cheques were signed by "Caplan, Stickels and Rheaume."

Did Not Know

William J. Hume, General Manager of the new Walkerville distillery since its organization in January of this year, said he did not know or do business with the Mexico Export Company.

"Since the new Walkerville Company was formed, how do you handle liquor for export?" asked Mr. Rowell.

Mr. Hume replied that orders were telephoned or mailed into the distillery and delivery was made to points on the river front. Trucks operated by the distillery made delivery, and the truckmen were furnished with export entries.

"Do most of your orders come by telephone?" asked Mr. Rowell.

"Yes."

The witness said that the volume of business here "is quite considerable."

L. Sinclair, order clerk for Gooderham and Worts, Toronto, stated that shipments from the distillery to this point for export since August, 1926, were sent to the consignee with instructions to notify Al Rumenapp. He did not know whether or not Rumenapp was connected with the Mexico Export Company.

Mr. Sinclair said that the names of the boats on which liquor was to be exported were not filled in on export entries sent out with the liquor from Toronto because they did not know which boat would carry the liquor across the river.

"Didn't you know that the law requires you to put in the name of the boat?" asked Mr. Rowell.

"No."

Counsel read the section of the Act which, he said, was applicable.

Rented Dock

The next witness, Art Rheaume of Lasalle, declared that he was in the fresh fish business. Before he went into that, he was doing "nothing—staying at home." He had a dock which he rented to the Mexico Export Company for $250 a month. He denied working on the dock, and told Mr. Rowell that there were a lot of other Rheaumes. He was told to stand aside until counsel made sure that he was the right man.

Thomas H. Yates, surveyor at the Port of Windsor, was examined by R. L. Calder, K.C., as to the customs supervision over the ferries crossing the Detroit river. He said that if his men saw people carrying bags, parcels, or noted anything suspicious about a passenger, he or she was called in for examination.

"No precaution is taken to see that a man is not bringing in concealed goods on his person?" asked Chief Commissioner Brown.

Mr. Yates replied that it would be impossible to examine every passenger. If anything was observed on a person, there was a careful examination.

"They don't look very hard," interjected Commissioner Wright. "There is a marked difference between the examination on this side and on the American side."

"I am informed that it has become almost a rule to bring cigarettes over in lunch boxes, dinner pails and tool bags," said Mr. Calder.

The witness replied that every now and then these receptacles were searched. There were 23 officers on duty at the Windsor ferry, and the work day was ten hours. Most of them were required to work overtime. There was only one female customs examiner on duty, but another had been asked for.

The number of appraisals made in a year at Windsor was in the neighborhood of 30,000, Ralph Hall, divisional appraiser told the Commission. There were two appraisers, but one or two more were badly needed. There were very large importations of automobiles and automobile parts here, he stated. He was of the opinion that there was very little commercial smuggling. The rule of examining one case in ten of shipments was adhered to, he said.

The Commission adjourned until today.

EASTER SERVICES

ROSENEATH, April 26.—The services in the Roseneath churches on Sunday were of Easter nature. In the morning Rev. J. N. Lovelace preached in the United church to a large congregation and spoke of the Atonement of Christ. The love of God expressed by the life and death of Christ. The Atonement takes in the life and humiliation of Jesus. While Christ is not merely an example and teacher, but pre-eminently a Saviour, His matchless grace extends to His gracious words and His sinless life, and that every word and work of Jesus has something to do with our reconciliation. Rev. Lovelace spoke briefly on the beautiful character of Christ and said a clean character always means salvation. The Atonement of Jesus always works towards the enrichment of the character and life of all true believers. How shall we see the full value of the Atonement? By laying aside mere theories and consider the words of Christ Himself.

Rev. Lovelace concluded with a few words on the resurrection by saying the resurrection of the righteous is but a changing from glory into glory, till in heaven we take our place. From the death of sin. The good soul never dies.

Special Easter music and singing was rendered by the choir.

The service held in St. James Anglican church on Sunday afternoon was ably delivered by Rev. W. Pippen who gave his Easter message from the First Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Corinthians, and conveyed to his people the power to rejoice once more in the radiant sunlight of the resurrection of Jesus. Once more its Easter. It is the day that declares to the children of men that the Son of God arose in glory from the dead and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel.

The play had the benefit of a splendid cast, and was acted in a way which did credit to all taking part. It was very humorous throughout and was accorded a very enthusiastic reception by a large audience.

O.T.A. OFFICIALS LEAVE SERVICE

Hales and Ayearst To Give Up Office When Law Changes.

DINGMAN STAYS.

TORONTO, April 26.—When the Liquor Control Board of Ontario is ready to function, either on May 16 or June 1 (the date yet to be officially decided), James Hales, K.C., Chairman of the Board of License Commissioners for Ontario, and John Ayearst, Chief Inspector for the board, will retire from the Government service. Mr. Hales will return to the practice of law and Mr. Ayearst will take a well-earned rest.

Information to this effect has reached the Liquor Control Roard and the Attorney-General's Department. W. S. Dingman, member of the Ontario License Board, will accept a position with the Liquor Control Board, probably in the capacity of an inspector of Government stores. Frank E. Elliott, now at the Grenville street office of the Ontario License Commissioners, will succeed Inspector Ayearst.

Methodist Minister.

Both Mr. Hales and Inspector Ayearst have long been identified with the administration of the Ontario Temperance Act. Inspector Ayearst entered the service of the Government under very unusual circumstances. He was a Methodist minister of the London Conference and in the early days of the Whitney Government he headed a deputation of temperance people who complained of the non-enforcement of the law in local-option districts. Sir James admitted that there was some ground for complaint, but he claimed there were many difficulties in the way. There and then he asked for the help of Mr. Ayearst and urged him to accept the appointment which he is just now relinquishing.

Mr. Hales accepted appointment as Chairman from the Drury Government. He was a prominent Dominion Alliance worker and a former member of the Toronto City Council. He was at one time a partner of Hon. W. E. Raney. Mr. Hales is expected again to become an active worker in the cause of temperance immediately upon his retirement from the Government office he now holds.

SEEK PRIVATE HEARING, ETC.

Cowie, manager of the Dominion Bank here. The Mexico Export Company was the exporting agency for several of the large Canadian distilleries up to a short time ago. Recently, according to evidence, it has suspended operations.

Mr. Cowie testified that the Mexico Export Company had kept an account in his bank, and produced certain slips which covered banking transactions. Mr. Rowell glanced through come of them.

"It seems to have been not only an active but a very large account," he remarked. "Would these figures be a fair indication of the account?" he asked.

"Yes," replied Mr. Cowie.

Mr. Rowell then said that from the 27th of July to the 6th of August last, deposits in the account totalled $270,000.

Messrs. Durfee, Caplan and Stickels were the men he had dealt with in connection with the account, said the witness. Cheques were signed by "Caplan, Stickels and Rheaume."

Did Not Know

William J. Hume, General Manager of the new Walkerville distillery since its organization in January of this year, said he did not know or do business with the Mexico Export Company.

"Since the new Walkerville Company was formed, how do you handle liquor for export?" asked Mr. Rowell.

Mr. Hume replied that orders were telephoned or mailed into the distillery and delivery was made to points on the river front. Trucks operated by the distillery made delivery, and the truckmen were furnished with export entries.

"Do most of your orders come by telephone?" asked Mr. Rowell.

"Yes."

The witness said that the volume of business here "is quite considerable."

L. Sinclair, order clerk for Gooderham and Worts, Toronto, stated that shipments from the distillery to this point for export since August, 1926, were sent to the consignee with instructions to notify Al Rumenapp. He did not know whether or not Rumenapp was connected with the Mexico Export Company.

Mr. Sinclair said that the names of the boats on which liquor was to be exported were not filled in on export entries sent out with the liquor from Toronto because they did not know which boat would carry the liquor across the river.

"Didn't you know that the law requires you to put in the name of the boat?" asked Mr. Rowell.

"No."

Counsel read the section of the Act which, he said, was applicable.

Rented Dock

The next witness, Art Rheaume of Lasalle, declared that he was in the fresh fish business. Before he went into that, he was doing "nothing—staying at home." He had a dock which he rented to the Mexico Export Company for $250 a month. He denied working on the dock, and told Mr. Rowell that there were a lot of other Rheaumes. He was told to stand aside until counsel made sure that he was the right man.

Thomas H. Yates, surveyor at the Port of Windsor, was examined by R. L. Calder, K.C., as to the customs supervision over the ferries crossing the Detroit river. He said that if his men saw people carrying bags, parcels, or noted anything suspicious about a passenger, he or she was called in for examination.

"No precaution is taken to see that a man is not bringing in concealed goods on his person?" asked Chief Commissioner Brown.

Mr. Yates replied that it would be impossible to examine every passenger. If anything was observed on a person, there was a careful examination.

"They don't look very hard," interjected Commissioner Wright. "There is a marked difference between the examination on this side and on the American side."

"I am informed that it has become almost a ruleto bring cigarettes over in lunch boxes, dinner pails and tool bags," said Mr. Calder.

The witness replied that every now and then these receptacles were searched. There were 23 officers on duty at the Windsor ferry, and the work day was ten hours. Most of them were required to work overtime. There was only one female customs examiner on duty, but another had been asked for.

The number of appraisals made in a year at Windsor was in the neighborhood of 30,000, Ralph Hall, divisional appraiser told the Commission. There were two appraisers, but one or two more were badly needed. There were very large importations of automobiles and automobile parts here, he stated. He was of the opinion that there was very little commercial smuggling. The rule of examining one case in ten of shipments was adhered to, he said.

The Commission adjourned until today.

EASTER SERVICES

ROSENEATH, April 26.—The services in the Roseneath churches on Sunday were of Easter nature. In the morning Rev. J. N. Lovelace preached in the United church to a large congregation and spoke of the Atonement of Christ. The love of God expressed by the life and death of Christ. The Atonement takes in the life and humiliation of Jesus. While Christ is not merely an example and teacher, but pre-eminently a Saviour, His matchless grace extends to His gracious words and His sinless life, and that every word and work of Jesus has something to do with our reconciliation. Rev. Lovelace spoke briefly on the beautiful character of Christ and said a clean character always means salvation. The Atonement of Jesus always works towards the enrichment of the character and life of all true believers. How shall we see the full value of the Atonement? By laying aside mere theories and consider the words of Christ Himself.

Rev. Lovelace concluded with a few words on the resurrection by saying the resurrection of the righteous is but a changing from glory into glory, till in heaven we take our place. From the death of sin. The good soul never dies.

Special Easter music and singing was rendered by the choir.

The service held in St. James Anglican church on Sunday afternoon was ably delivered by Rev. W. Pippen who gave his Easter message from the First Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Corinthians, and conveyed to his people the power to rejoice once more in the radiant sunlight of the resurrection of Jesus. Once more its Easter. It is the day that declares to the children of men that the Son of God arose in glory from the dead and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel.

O.T.A. OFFICIALS LEAVE SERVICE

Hales and Ayearst To Give Up Office When Law Changes.

DINGMAN STAYS.

TORONTO, April 26.—When the Liquor Control Board of Ontario is ready to function, either on May 16 or June 1 (the date yet to be officially decided), James Hales, K.C., Chairman of the Board of License Commissioners for Ontario, and John Ayearst, Chief Inspector for the board, will retire from the Government service. Mr. Hales will return to the practice of law and Mr. Ayearst will take a well-earned rest.

Information to this effect has reached the Liquor Control Board and the Attorney-General's Department. W. S. Dingman, member of the Ontario License Board, will accept a position with the Liquor Control Board, probably in the capacity of an inspector of Government stores. Frank E. Elliott, now at the Grenville street office of the Ontario License Commissioners, will succeed Inspector Ayearst.

Methodist Minister.

Both Mr. Hales and Inspector Ayearst have long been identified with the administration of the Ontario Temperance Act. Inspector Ayearst entered the service of the Government under very unusual circumstances. He was a Methodist minister of the London Conference and in the early days of the Whitney Government he headed a deputation of temperance people who complained of the non-enforcement of the law in local-option districts. Sir James admitted that there was some ground for complaint, but he claimed there were many difficulties in the way. There and then he asked for the help of Mr. Ayearst and urged him to accept the appointment which he is just now relinquishing.

Mr. Hales accepted appointment as Chairman from the Drury Government. He was a prominent Dominion Alliance worker and a former member of the Toronto City Council. He was at one time a partner of Hon. W. E. Raney. Mr. Hales is expected again to become an active worker in the cause of temperance immediately upon his retirement from the Government office he now holds.

Scout News and Notices

THIRD PETERBOROUGH "VIMY" TROOP

There have been great doings in the Third since our last report. With hikes, overnight camp, big Council Fire meeting, and the passing of many tests, the Easter Holiday has been a very busy time.

The Saturday before Easter found five Scouts under A. S. M. Taylor, in camp about eight miles north of Peterboro. They spent Saturday and Sunday nights under canvas, and were joined Monday morning by three Scouts of the Third and three of the Fourth. The weather was perfect, and a great time was had by all. Nearly everyone tried and passed Scout's Pace, several passed Fire Lighting, and one or two passed Second Class Cooking. Altogether, it was a very successful two-day camp, with no accidents of any kind to mar the good time.

Last Friday night at the Troop Room was another big time. The whole evening was spent around the "Camp Fire." Stunts, plays and songs were the order of the evening. It was our first attempt at a real artificial Council Fire, and it proved a great success.

Logs were piled in the centre of the room and covered over with red paper. A light bulb supplied the "fire" and made a very realistic Council Fire. The Scouts were seated around in horseshoe shape, leaving one side open, where all the stunts were performed.

Many and varied were the performances put on. The opening was an 'Ice breaker" wherein each Scout picked someone in the opposite side of the circle and laughed as hard as possible at him. Everyone felt better after that and nearly raised the roof with the Scout Yell. The Hounds were to receive the prize for winning the Pat ol Competition, but the prize had not arrived in time, and the Hounds were disappointed and had to wait until next meeting for their reward.

Each Patrol in its turn was called on for a performance and each showed great individuality in the stunts put on. One stunt by the Hounds was a tight rope walking act, by Sun Wun Lung, a Japanese expert. Just before the act was to come on the stage, however, it was announced that Mr. Lung had arrived, but his apparatus had all been left behind somewhere. Sooner than disappoint all his audience Mr. Lung would give his act, although without the rope. Mr. Sun Wun Lung performed some wonderful feats (along a crack in the floor) and altogether gave a very creditable performance.

Many were the jokes cracked before the night was over. The Wolves came out with a string trio, singing and playing several pieces with great gusto, although not with much harmony.

The Chickadees put on a Radio broadcasting stunt, broadcasting Boy Scout Hour from Station B.V.D. Sir Robert Baden-Powell himself gave a talk, an interesting story was told, and in between times jokes were cracked.

Then came one of the real events of the evening, when P. L. Archie Inch was awarded his Second Class Badge. Scout Inch is the Second Scout in the Troop to win this honor. He has worked hard for the Badge and has certainly earned it. Good luck and good camping to him.

P. L. Gordon Roper of the Wolves once more tried his Entertainer Badge and gave a real performance of magic tricks, jokes, etc. He performed some spiritualistic table knocking, getting his spirits to answer many questions. It was discovered after the stunt that under the table was hidden a bottle of "Pre-War Stuff"—maybe that explained the table's strange antics.

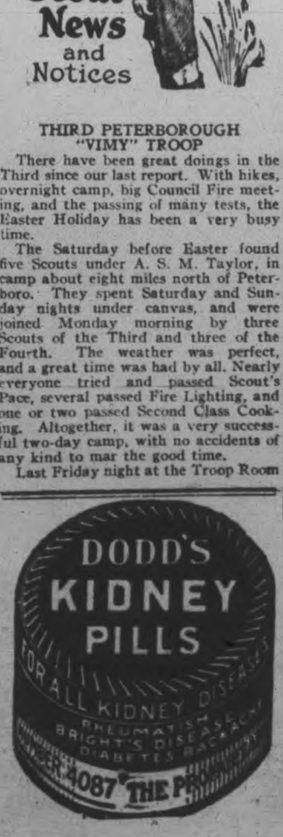
Gordon then called for a volunteer to step on to the stage and be hypnotized. Gordon made his victim do, or rather stopped him from doing, many things which he wanted to do.

The Hawks came next and performed some more tricks. They gave some real conundrums to study out, and did some funny tricks.

A short story of Baden-Powell's travels through Norway was told by A. S. M. Taylor, emphasizing the fact that everything in Norway is clean. The men, women and children are all flaxen-haired, sun-browned, clean and happy. They are a real example for Scouts to follow.

The closing number of the programme was the singing by all of "Do a Good Turn Daily" and it was good to hear it sung the way it was.

After "God Save the King" the Scouts left for home to meet again next Friday, when a new competition will be started, to run until the middle of June.



KINGSTON CARS STOPPING SOON

Notice Given By Company That Service Ceases This Week.

NOT PAYING.

KINGSTON, April 26.—W. F. Nickle, K.C., President of the Kingston Street Railway Company, announced on Saturday that after next Saturday night local street cars would not operate, as the company had refused to accept an offer of the Public Utilities Commission to supply power at a rate of 65 cents per kilowatt hour from Jan. 1, 1926. For months an attempt has been under way to settle the question of the price of power.

The Street Railway Company wanted the Utilities Commission to state whether the price at which it offered power was cost. The Commission did not care to do that. It appears that some years ago the ratepayers voted to give the street railway power at cost, and at that time the cost price was fixed and agreed to as $1.20 per kilowatt hour. This was fixed when Kingston generated the electric power with a steam plant.

Now the cost is much less, owing to the supply coming from the Hydro-Electric Commission. The Street Railway Company holds that for some years it has been paying the Utilities Commission more than the cost for power it used, and would be entitled to collect the excess price paid. The company has announced that it will not accept anything in the way of a bonus.

Street cars here have not paid the company for a long time, and it looks as if Kingston may shortly be in the same position as Peterborough, without street railway service, unless the City Council acts in the meantime; and does something to have the service continued until the power-price question can be straightened out. It is declared that if the Street Railway Company was given power for next to nothing, its service would, even then, yield little profit, so deep have the automobile and taxi cut into its business. Kingston has had street car service since 1876, and electric cars since 1893. Lately the Street Railway Company reduced fares from 7 cents to 5 cents in an effort to increase traffic.

ORDERS 4000 FROGS.

HONOLUL, April 26.—Two thousand pairs of frogs who have been harmonizing under the Hawaiian moon will be given a trip to the Orient in an order from a Japanese frog fancier can be filled. Why the Hawaiian variety of croaker is desired is not stated but natives claim the edible hind legs are made unusually large and muscular by surfriding.

WON'T IMPORT STARS

Ward McAllister, Celebrity of the Screen World, is Manager.

OAKVILLE, April 26.—Directly following the publication of the All-British films scheme which received empire wide notice in the press within the past few weeks, comes the announcement of the first independent Canadian Motion Picture concern under the name of British and Canadian Pictures Company, with headquarters in Oakville.

This week, the main office of the Company was installed in the new Davis Block. The main studio is located on the lake front at Mt. Vernon, one of the most historical and beautiful of the old Oakville mansions.

The manager of the Company is Ward McAllister, who has been playing in the movies for several years prior to being a director and producer in his own company. Mr. McAllister played with Harold Lockwood, May Allison and Lottie Pickford in "The Diamond From the Sky", with Blanche Sweet in Lasky Production, and has been associated with Cecil de Mille and many other producers in the American film world. He is said to be the first American star to be taken to England, where he played for three years. Mr. McAllister is also a scenario writer and has experience from every angle as an actor, producer and writer.

James Gordon Youngdeer, a pioneer of the film industry, is the director of the Company, and the photographic department is under the supervision of Chas. de Soria, an experienced cameraman.

Interviewed today, Mr. McAllister stated that the concern is in the process of organization and that every effort is being made towards producing a picture at an early date. He said that the plot of a story which he had in mind centred about a turf classic and that it was possible that the running of the King's Plate at the Woodbine in May could be utilized.

"No, we are not selling stock," he said when queried. "It is an independent concern that is backed by a Toronto manufacturer whose name is to remain a secret for the present time. As to camera subjects, we hope to be able to draw actors and actresses from material right at home here, and to date we have taken about 1,500 camera tests. At one time we thought of importing several stars from United States but we do not think that it will be necessary."

MOVING DAY

Mrs. Henrickson snatched the evening paper from the verandah and carried it into the house. Turning to the classified ad page, she scanned anxiously the list of "Houses to Rent." Presently her brow smoothed itself out. She read one item two or three times, then consulted the telephone directory and called a number —Later, when Mr. Henrickson came in to supper, she solicitously removed his coat and ran to get him his carpet slippers. Mr. Henrickson glanced at the paper, still open on the table, and nodded his head.

At supper, he said, suddenly: "My dear, I have been thinking that we have been long enough in this neighborhood. Just a year ago to-day, we moved in, and knowing your fondness for change, I made arrangements to-day to move out to Pleasant Meadow Annex. There are houses there, dirt cheap, and plenty of ground for a little garden. The place I have in mind has an acre of ground" (Mrs. H. shuddered) "and a stable where we could keep a cow. You know how proud you used to be of your butter. I thought you would like to try your hand at it again. Then we could have a few chickens and perhaps a pig or two. It is a small house, without a bathroom, but we could put one in before the winter. I will have to plant a few trees too and seed some grass in. It needs painting and a little touching up inside. There are only two bedrooms upstairs, but the front room downstairs is fairly large and there is a dining-room and a lean-to kitchen—"

Mrs. Henrickson interrupted him. "I changed my mind to-day about moving," she said. "I think we might stay here for awhile longer. It will do finely if you give a little bit of paint to the verandah and fix up the kitchen roof." Going to the telephone, she called the real estate office and cancelled an order she had given for a car to come in the morning to take her to look over some new locations.

Mr. Henrickson winked at the cat and went on with his supper. He had a contented air as he buttered his fourth piece of bread.

A Graceful Afternoon or Evening Frock

Exceedingly graceful is the frock pictured here. The two-piece pointed skirt is gathered to a bodice having the lower edge slightly rounded, thereby giving a graceful line. The attractive arrangement of the surplice effect is effectively shown and there are lace shields at the front and back. The long pointed sleeves may be omitted for evening wear, if desired, thereby making this frock suitable for many occasions. An added note of contrast is introduced in the flowers placed at the shoulder and hip closing. No. 1501 is for Misses and Small Women and is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 18 (36 bust) requires 3½ yards 39-inch material, or 2⅝ yards 54-inch, and ⅜ yard allover lace for the shields. Price 20 cents the pattern.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

"Beaverboard, nailed to strips of pine. Two thicknesses of beaverboard," Anderson explained, in answer to Banning's question as to the nature of the partition between the farmer's room and that occupied by Cherry and Chris.

"Is this beaverboard partition sound proof?" Banning asked.

"Not by a long sight," the witness answered emphatically.

"Did you sleep undisturbed for the rest of the night?" Banning asked, satisfaction radiating from his flushed face.

"No, sir. Me and the wife lay talking for about an hour—talking about the elopement and what old Mr. Cluny must be thinking and feeling—"

"You'd read of the approaching marriage of Mr. Cluny and Miss Cherry Lane?"

"Sure we had."

"You knew that the bride who was your guest for the night was this same Cherry Lane?"

"Sure. Seen her name on her marriage certificate. Me and my wife don't take any couples in less'n we're satisfied they're married," the farmer answered virtuously.

"Could you hear conversation through the partition before you went to sleep?" Banning asked.

"We could hear low talking going on, but they was pretty quiet," Anderson answered. "Couldn't make out any words—and we wasn't listening anyway."

"All right, Mr. Anderson. Go right ahead with your story in your own way," Banning urged.

"Well, me and the wife both dozed off, but we was waked up about three o'clock in the morning—"

"Can you fix the time, Mr. Anderson?"

"I struck a match and looked at my watch a few minutes after we woke up, and the hands pointed to a quarter past three," Anderson stated with belligerent positiveness.

"Sounds of crying and quarreling," Anderson raised his voice, as if he realized how important his testimony was, and intended to make the most of it. "My wife says to me, 'Jeff,' she says, 'they're at it already! Can you beat that'?"

The farmer flushed at the quickly quelled burst of laughter that greeted his naive bit of testimony.

"Could you hear what was said in the guest room, Mr. Anderson?"

"Not much of it."

"Mr. Anderson, can you repeat any remarks or single words that you overheard?" Banning asked, leaning upon the arm of the witness chair.

"Well, I heard a good many words and scraps of conversation, here and there, first and last—"

"Repeat, as nearly as you can remember, any sentence or connected words that you overheard," Banning directed him a little impatiently.

"Well, it musta been toward morning when I heard the girl's voice scream out, 'I hate you! I hate you! You made me do it, and it will kill Maggie!' Or leastways, it sounded like she said 'Maggie!' Some name like that!"

Faith put her arms about her sister, as the white-faced little defendant broke into bitter weeping, her ashen lips murmuring over and over, "Muggy! Muggy!"

In the deathlike stillness that followed, a reporter's hoarse exclamation—"The kid confessed!"—was as audible as if it had been shouted.

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story.

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S PEPPERMINT CANDY

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

"May I come with you to the woods today, Uncle Wiggily?" asked Dazie, the dark blue Wogglejig girl of the rabbit gentleman as she saw him hopping away from the bungleump one morning.

"Don't you have to go to schooi, Dazie?" inquired Mr. Longears.

"Not until afternoon," Dazie answered. "You see the Hollow Stump School is getting so crowded that the Lady Mouse Teacher told some of us to come in the morning and some in the afternoon. I'm one of those who go in the afternoon."

"Then you may come with me," invited Uncle Wiggily.

"Are you going to look for an adventure?" asked the little wogglejig girl, taking her tail out and putting it back in place again. This did not astonish the rabbit gentleman. For all the Wogglejigs could take themselves apart and put themselves together without any trouble at all.

They were all out of peppermint candy.

"I am going to look for an adventure and I hope I may find a jolly one," chuckled Mr. Longears.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Dazie.

"What's the matter?" asked the rabbit.

"I thought maybe you were going to look for peppermint candy," and Dazie took off her head and put it on upside down, which made her look so funny that Uncle Wiggily laughed so hard that he nearly lost the pink twinkle from the end of his nose.

"You can't find peppermint candy in the woods, Dazie," said the rabbit gentleman when he had caught his breath after laughing. "Candy grows in the three and four cent store."

"Then let's go there and look for an adventure!" cried Dazie eagerly.

"Ha! Ha!" chuckled Mr. Longears. "Adventures don't grow in the three and four cent stores any more than peppermint candy grows in the woods. But we can first stop at the store to buy you some candy and then go to the woods to find an adventure."

"That will be fine!" joyfully shouted Dazie. Soon she and Uncle Wiggily were at the store. But, sad to say, they were all out of peppermint candy.

"We have some molasses candy, though," explained the little mousie girl clerk behind the counter. "And you could dip that in peppermint juice and it would then be peppermint candy."

"Oh, I couldn't do that!" exclaimed Dazie. "I don't know how to make peppermint juice."

"I do!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "We'll take half a pound of molasses candy," he told the mousie girl clerk. "And when we get to the woods," the rabbit went on to Dazie, "I'll make it peppermint for you."

"I don't see how you can do it!" murmured the little Wogglejig.

"You shall soon see!" promised Uncle Wiggily.

It did not take him and Dazie long to reach the woods. There, on the bank of a little brook grew some dark green leaves, and no sooner had Uncle Wiggily picked a few than Dazie cried:

"I smell peppermint!"

"No wonder," replied the rabbit. "These green leaves are off the peppermint plant. I will squeeze some of their juice into a cup and when you put a few drops of the juice of the leaves on your molasses candy, you'll have as fine a peppermint stick as your heart could wish."

"Wonderful!" exclaimed Dazie. "But where will you get a cup?"

"An acorn cup will do for that," said the rabbit. In the woods grew oak trees and on the ground were many acorns that had fallen off last year. Taking the top of one of these acorns, which was shaped like a little cup, Uncle Wiggily squeezed into it some juice from the peppermint leaves.

"Don't put too much peppermint on your molasses candy," he warned the Wogglejig girl. "It is very strong and may burn your tongue."

"I'll be careful," promised Dazie. So she only put a little of the leaf juice on her molasses candy and, surely enough, she had molasses peppermint as fine as heart could wish.

Uncle Wiggily ate a little, too, and then, all of a sudden, out of the bushes jumped the Bushy Bear.

"I'm going to bite somebody!" he roared.

"Here, bite this!" cried Uncle Wiggily. He flung the acorn cup of strong peppermint juice into the open mouth of the bear.

"Oh, wowzie! How my tongue burns!" howled the bad chap, and down the hill he ran, making his funny little tail go around like a pin wheel on the Fourth of July.

"Good for you, Uncle Wiggily!" cried Dazie. Then the bunny made more peppermint juice for the molasses candy.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

The rose satin underslip is generously veiled with black chiffon, while the girdle and bow are of black satin.

Every season a number of French words or phrases are taken over by American dress buyers and fashion writers—and soon become current, though usually villainously pronounced and frequently misused. We Americans seem to have a certain fondness for French words to describe our clothes—providing we don't have too many of them at a time. The fact that an English word would do just as well makes no difference But perhaps an English word would never do just as well, because it wouldn't have that smack of the Rue de la Paix and the Faubourg St. Honore that we all like so much.

There is a certain glamour about a new hat or a color scheme called by a French word, even though we stammer and feel embarrassed when we try to use it. In this way we got such well established words as negligee, lingerie, ensemble, and corsage—applied to the flower worn on the frock. Then there was ombre—applied to the use of shaded materials—lame, diamente, degrade.

The interesting thing is that only two or three of these French terms become current a season. Some of them are discarded with the fashions they describe—and others, with their pathetic mis-pronounciation, remain a part of our dressmaking patter.

Voilage is a word that bids fair to become popularized this season—and in a way no single English word will do the trick quite so well. Sometimes these French words are more explicit when used here than in France, because we use them always with a single meaning in view, whereas in France they retain their varied association. Thus, while veiling may be a fair equivalent for voilage—voilage as we use it means simply the veiling of a light fabric over another usually more substantial material, and veiling might mean a number of things.

There is nothing actually new in this idea. But with the fashions of recent years the lining or foundation of clothes has not been emphasized. There has been an effort to make clothes appear to be draped directly over the body. Foundations and slips have been reduced to a minimum. But now one dressmaker uses chiffon draped over a substantial satin foundation. Organdie is shown over an under dress of silver lame, lace is draped over taffeta and crepe de chine, showing intricate drawnwork, reveals a foundation of silk in contrasting color.

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, 1927

Contrary planetary influences are active today, according to astrology, but benefic aspects dominate.

There is promise of success for all constructive work under this direction of the stars. Building is well directed, and there is likely to be a great interest in new homes.

Engineers again are subject to the most stimulating forces and theyare likely to be in unusual demand abroad, stimulating forces and they are rike

The stars forecast the service of many Americans in foreign countries where their abilities will receive due appreciation.

Adveneturis to be experienced by women as well as men in the next few weeks when much real life drama may be looked for.

This should be a lucky day for all who seek work of any sort. Employment should be easy to find under this planetary sway.

There is a sign of great promise for those who bestow gifts today, unless they bestow real estate.

The rule is not favorable to the aged and indicates even more radical changes in the future than in the past.

Old things have passed away definitely and in the new order the years of transition are discouraging necessarily to the aged, the seers explain, but this period is one of great development.

Education is subject to conditions making for substantial achievment, and again changes affecting university methods are foreseen.

Under this direction of the stars women should be quiescent, delaying all important plans, personal or civic.

This is read as an unfavorable wedding day, since it presages many changes and diversion of interests.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a busy, happy year in which many things favor them.

Children born on this day probably will win great success by hard work. They should not trust their friends too much.

Every citizen of Montpelior, France claims the right to call himself baron. In 1537 the Baron de Caravette, who lived there, bequeathed his title and estates to the city. Hence, it is argued, every child born in the city may adopt the title.

SELF EDUCATION

As an illustration of the advantage of quiet reading and education at home and self-teaching in the field, no better instance could be found than the "Autobiography of Sir Archibald Geikie, the Scots geologist, who became Director-General of Geology in Great Britain. He wrote books on geology, also for popular reading, such as "A Piece of Coal" and these were sold in millions. He, himself, laid the foundation and most of the superstructure of his life-work by going out into the fields, highlands, mountains and islands of Scotland. A geologist and mineralogist are both self-made. This tendency to get practical training by their own hand work is the Scots characteristic, and that is why the Scots are next to the Germans, the best educated and best equipped practical geologists in the world. But some will say that they also attended schools and colleges and often became professors. So they did, but colleges sought them as professors, because of their self-acquired practical knowledge, not for their book-learning.

This autobiography will give any earnest reader a first knowledge of the theory and results of geology. The works of Sir Charles Lyell and Sir Archibald Geikie will give anyone a full talking knowledge of geology, but not of course, a first-hand working knowledge. But it is the knowledge of theory, of principles, and of the results in any science that makes an educated, if not a practical man. Understanding how a thing is done is next to being able to do it, and for intellectual or educative purposes it excels the practical.

Professor Geikie was the first real explorer of Scotland, geologically, and he was the first to occupy a chair of geology in Scotland that science hitherto not having had a chair to itself there.

There are two great schools of opinion regarding the surface of the earth, and how it got into its present condition; one called the Plutonic, after the god of the lower regions and the other the Neptunic, after the god of water. One school maintains that it was the earth fires and steam which broke up and left the surface of the earth mountainous, with great river canyons, etc. The other school maintains that the crust or surface of the earth was largely elevated plateaux, and that it is the action of rain and snow that is of water upon this elevated crust that has produced mountains, canyons, watercourses, etc.

Of course the igneous or underlying rock systems are sometimes pushed up by volcanic action and great lava beds owe their rise to that action, also as do great rifts, dislocations, etc., but the "present" surface of the earth, generally, is as it is, because of the denudin-effects of water, rather than of volcanic action or subterranean fires. At any rate these are the two schools. They fought each other with great bitterness. But Geikie, by his investigations chiefly in the Rocky Mountains of America, showed that denudation is undoubtedly the prevailing cause.

Now, then, what do we learn from all this? First, that in geology, if we want to learn anything we must read up geology, and then take a hammer along and use it in conjunction with our eyes and thinking powers. It requires great courage, industry and physical strength. The plain evidence of our senses shows us what has taken place and our hammer gives us specimens for laboratory examination. You ask, "What use is all this?" Our mines depend upon it. Our knowledge of the earth depends upon it. Taken in conjunction with other branches of knowledge, our education and knowledge of the globular world depend upon it. But you ask again, "What does all that avail us?" The answer depends upon your intellectual curiosity. If you had rather be a mere ignorant animal you will consider all this great general knowledge or science useless. You will consider steam, electricity, radio, etc., etc., unnecessary. You will urge that the simple life is the best and discoveries in science, generally, as in the science of medicine, a lot of bunk. This all involves the question of where all this science gets us to—where also does all our Greek and Latin learning get us to? It is hard to say. There is room for a first-class debate on the question "Is the acquisition of learning a d of a knowledge of things not of simple use to simple people either necessary or really desirable?" We are disturbed and hurried madly along by too much knowledge which does more harm to our health than good. The pursuit of knowledge for its own sake and the supposition that "improvements" and new things are necessary, are, when carefully considered, not so sound as they at first appear to be. But if we decide to "go on" then we must do it off our own bats—that is by self-education and homework.

If we decide, on the other hand, to roam the wilds as did the cavemen, let us go to it and do so. Whichever we decide on and, this is my point—it is we, personally, who must do it and not alone any system of teaching or vicarious attainment.

All knowledge has been discovered, except in rare cases, by an experience arising from preconceived ideas or theories, and if we can't know more than theories which are the intellectual parts of knowledge, we can know them and profit by them.

It is that which develops our brains, the other our hands. But it is the latter which most directly benefits mankind because we can't after all, do more than eat, drink and generally support our bodies. We are all the same in that particular. Scientists and wise men usually present poor contrasts physically with open-air, simple-life people. My own idea is that we are overdoing education, and certainly providing schools and college and compulsory training for all is merely to wean away people, as a whole from the simple life who would be best served by it. The weeding-out process is the best. Those who want to, and are capable, will rise by their own efforts, at any rate as high as is necessary Those who are not capable and do not wish to rise in that way should be allowed, after the rudiments, to follow their own bent. Education does not lessen crime or injustice. What good, then, does it do? It rids us of superstition? No, it does not. The truth is we are interfering with ourselves too much. We have come a long way without all this leadership and twaddle and their advantages are greatly overrated. Meanwhile, let us "go easy." There is no hurry whichever way we look at it and hurry never gets anybody anywhere, anyhow. Forcing pupils to do what they are not capable of doing is no sign of the successful cultivation of the intellect in those who are doing the forcing. It is most unwise and this inconsistency has a very bad effect on popular appreciation of education. People have now begun to regard it as a fad and a burden which is too great for them to bear and it cannot be said that the modern system of education justifies itself by turning out greater and better men because such is far from being the case.

Science has no regard for opinion, but only for the facts of nature. Hence it is that a teaching of the first principles of science teaches the first principles of a regard for truth or fact. It is so palpably profitless to lie about nature that no one does it. There is no good advantage to be gained by misrepresenting nature, so it is no done, even by those who would do it in a minute if they thought they could gain anything by it. Religion, on the other hand, depends wholly upon the disposition and motive of those involved that is, upon the wish and will to do what they think is right. It may not actually be "right," but the will to do well is excused for it is said in the Word of God that those who will to do well shall know of the doctrine. It will be seen, therefore, how totally different the bases of religion and science ar . The one is actual fact, the other is a wish to do what is right. It is the difference between moral questions and physical questions. A man may be by will and disposition, a great liar, but yet a great scientist; but he is wholly unfitted to be a Christian. Education, therefore, in religion is not covered by science, nor can it ever be. Moral philosophy is a branch of education of the utmost importance and yet we wholly neglect it except in our churches, where it is not taught as such. Is it not as valuable to us as science? If so, why is it neglected?

This is one great branch of education which depends wholly upon the individual himself. He reaches the highest point in it when he becomes sincere, earnest and desirous of telling the truth, let the chips fall where they may. Such a life is a life of self-sacrifice, that is, the sacrifice of self for a principle and if elevation of character is worth while this is certainly the way to teach it. The dividing line between that which advantageth a man and that which does not, is the line which we most narrowly scan.

Similar data will be collected in other countries to find which nation produces the best proportioned women.

ST. PAUL'S PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The series of addresses given in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church by Dr. Ford C. Ottman the noted Bible teacher and author of New York came to a close Sunday evening with a striking address which showed that according to prophecy the remarkable part the Jews have played as a race in the past as God's chosen people will be surpassed by the events of the future as foretold in the Scriptures. Dr. Ottman's addresses were followed throughout the week with the deepest interest the Sunday school hall being well filled the four evenings on which he spoke, the attendance Friday evening being particularly large. The address Friday evening related to the New Jerusalem, and was described by Rev. Mr. Allan as being one of the most notable addresses of the kind he had ever heard. Dr. Ottman has a remarkable ability to quote Scripture and again and again impressed those in attendance by the striking nature of certain passages of Scripture as he quoted them and showed their importance. The musical services on Sunday were high-class and were featured by special solos by Mrs. Howe of Ottawa one of the leading church soloists of that city.

"The Jew" said Dr. Ottman in opening the Sunday evening sermon "holds a place in prophecy from which neither unbelief or critical study can dislodge him. One of the singular things about this singular people is the extreme poles of character which they represent. Compare Paul and Judas. Where will you find a greater man than Moses or intellectually where will you find a greater than Daniel?

Dr. Ottman stated that he held no brief for the Jewish people but said that the man who fails to see the central part they occupy in the Scriptures fails completely to understand the purposes of God as these have been unfolded through this people. Sometimes people ask why the Jews are spoken of as "the elect" or "chosen people." The answer is simple. God desired to bless all the nations of the earth and in the carrying out of His purpose found it necessary to use a certain race. For this reason He called out Abraham and announced that through him and his seed all the nations of the earth would be blessed the predicted seed being Christ. God might have selected another race but in His divine wisdom chose Abraham.

The land God promised to give Abraham and His seed forever is unique both in its extent and in its location. It is much larger than Palestine as it extends from the Nile to the Uphrates and from the Mediterranian to the Gulf of Persia. It is midway between three continents Europe Asia and Africs. It is on this stage where many of His purposes for this race and for the world will be revealed. The Jews were called to be God's witnesses and they needed to be trained. It was impossible for them to mingle with the nations around them and at the same time give any testimony worthwhile for God. As we read their history as unfolded in the Scriptures we cannot help being struck with the failure of this nation to maintain their position of isolation. It was at this point that they constantly failed and it is where the average Christian also fails. Too many Christians are living so much like the people of the world round about them that it is impossible for them to give any worthwhile testimony for God. It is just as necessary according to the New Testament for Christians to be a peculiar people living unto God as it was for the Jews.

After their long centuries of trial the Jewish people made their greatest mistake when they failed to recognize their Messiah. This was because they were laying too much emphasis on temporal matters and therefore failed spiritually. They were seeking for a great ruler who would break the Roman yoke and rejected Christ and insisted on His being nailed to the Cross. In the words of the Martyr Stephen they were "stiff-necked and uncircumcized in heart and ears always resisting the Holy Ghost" as their fathers did before them. Because of their failure they were sentenced to the spiritual blindness which has marked them as a race ever since. Their failure had been foretold and because of it they were scattered among the nations of the earth. Just as surely however as the Scriptures have come to us through them so surely is the stage being set for their return to the Promised Land where they have yet to complete the unfilled portion of God's plan for them.

The long rule of the Turk is over. God has used Great Britain through Lord Allenby and General Lawrence to rid the Holy Land of that people. Under the leadership of the spirit of God the people of Great Britain recognize the right of the Jews to fly their own flag the flag of David in their own land and have given Palestine back to them. Recently they have been returning to that land at the rate of over 3 000 a month. It is impossible for the land to assimilate more than that number. What is the purpose of the transformation that is taking place in that land? It is God's intention that they shall yet be a holy nation unto Him and to use them in proclaiming that purpose unto the nations of the earth. Watch every item of news that comes across the seas about this peculiar people as they return to the Holy Land. Marvellous things are taking place that are fraught with great importance to the nations of the earth. Now as never before it is evident that "the day of our redemption draweth nigh."

causing the axe-head to flock in II. Kings 2, 6.

A splendid crowd heard the evangelist's great message on "Stones" that are being hurled at Jesus today, naming hem: Inconsistency, Indifference, Ingratitude, Unbelief, and Unforgiveness.

At the close of the message a large number gathered around the altar, and gave themselves anew to the Lord's service.

An unusually good company for a Monday night was present last evening to hear a touching message upon the subject "On the Trail of a Soul." The high point of the message was when the evangelist pictured Jesus looking up through the opened roof of the house in Capernaum, anud "seeing the faith" of the four men, whom the evangelist called Love, Faith, Perseverance, Wisdom, and said to man sick of the palsy, "Son, thy sins be forgiven thee." The evangelist said there are still those who were blocking the way of sinners getting Jesus, and urged his hearers to be sure they were not standing in the way of those who are sick in sin and their only Deliverer.

The service will continue all this week, beginning at 8 o'clock.

The following are the subjects of the Evangelist's messages for the week:

Tuesday: The price of my redemption.

Wednesday: The pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.

Thursday: God's traffic officers.

Friday: The coming King, or 'As it was in the days of Noah.'

Sunday a.m.: The price of power.

Afternoon: The Great Physician: How to get healed and how to keep healed.

Evening: Delilah's Shears: Or Sampson gets a hair cut.

SCHOOL PAPER IS ATTRACTIVE

Grove Chronicle Well Prepared and Interesting Publication.

MANY ILLUSTRATIONS.

The Easter Number of The Grove Chronicle, the official publication of the Lakefield Preparatory School, is a particularly well-gotten-up and well written school paper. The editor is A. W. Mackenzie, M.A., Principal of the school, and his assistants are Thomas Wood, B.Sc., K. Mackenzie, and T. Boultbee.

Particularly interesting to those who are not well acquainted with the school, are the pictures showing the "Quad," the attractive entrance gate, exterior and interior views of the pretty little chapel, and many illustrations of the boys at play. The spacious dining room and the infirmary are also shown, and a large double-spread drawing shows the playing fields and the buildings.

The Grove School has always been known, not only in this district, but throughout the world, as one of the best boys' schools in existence, and this magazine prepared by the faculty goes a long way towards proving the contention. Most of the articles, of course, deal with the boys' life, and the magazine contains a great deal of information regarding the sporting activities which go so far towards training the healthy body in which the School endeavors to build up a sane mind.

There are many Old Boys of the School in Toronto and an Old Boys' Association has been formed there. Recently another branch was organized at Montreal and the outposts of The Grove School are scattered throughout almost every country in the world.

The Grove Chronicle should go a long way towards maintaining the esprit de corps that was built up during the time that the boys spent in the very agreeable Grove School.

BETHANY TABERNACLE.

"Behold, I am the Lord, the God of all flesh; is there anything too hard for me?" Jeremiah 32:27, is the slogan for these metings, said Evangelist W. G. Weston, who began a series of special meetings in Bethany Tabernacle Sunday, a.m.

Both the services of Sunday were marked by a deep spiritual tone, giving evidence of the blessing and presence of the Lord at the very beginning of the meetings. The evangelist in a most convincing way, pictured the supernatural power of the Lord from the incident of Elisha

Price Advance Resumed With Steel Shares Strong

NEW YORK, April 26 (Canadian Press).—Speculators for the advance regained control of the price movement in to-day's Stock Market. Talk of higher steel prices next quarter had a sustaining influence on the steel shares, the special strength of United States Steel Common being in anticipation of the splendid quarterly earnings report at to-day's meeting of the board of directors.

Pierce Arrow issues broke sharply on the publication of a poor quarterly report, the Preferred collapsing ten points to the lowest price in over two years. Texas and Pacific and R. H. Macy also sustained sharp declines but Commercial Solvents 'B' rallied from 321 to nearly 330. Delaware and Hudson was again the outstanding feature of the rail group, soaring above 125 to the highest price in twenty years. Chicago and Great Western Preferred was one of the strong spots in the low-priced group.

Selling Predominates On Mine Market To-day

TORONTO, April 26 (Canadian Press).—A flood of selling occurred on the market of the Standard Mining Exchange to-day and consequently several prominent stocks suffered sharp recessions. Nipissing was the weakest feature with a drop of 74 cents a share to 6.56. McIntyre was another of the high-priced issues to drop sharply, when it sold down to 25.75 for a net loss of 50 cents. Noranda declined 85 cents to 21.40. Dome Mines was an exception to the general trend when it sold up 40 cents to 8.50. Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves were both up three cents to 6.95 and 11.08 respectively. Hollinger was off 15 to 20.75 and Lake Shore four to 19.10. Barry Hollinger was active and easier at 43, a decline of two. Amulet moved up eight cents to 1.20, and Nickel 2.63 to 59.50. Central Manitoba Gold was off three cents to 1.48.

Toronto Exchange Quiet; Trading In Narrow Limits

TORONTO, April 26. Canadian Press. — International Nickel, Massey-Harris, and Brazilian, were the features of a quiet and narrow market on the Toronto stock exchange to-day. Nickel was the active leader and sold up sharply following yesterday's reaction to close at noon, three points higher, at 59 3-4. Massey-Harris was the next most active, and at 36 1-4 it registered a gain of 1 1-8. Brazilian recorded a new high at 140½, a gain of 3½ points in active trading. Dominion Stores gained 1¼ to 82¼.

The distillery stocks were dull and generally unchanged. The mines were active and soft.

Seeding Weather Good; Wheat Prices Go Down

CHICAGO, April 26 (Canadian Press)—Wheat underwent a set back to-day after a display of firmness at the start. Reports that crop conditions in the southwest are just about perfect and that with clear warm weather in the northwest spring wheat seeding is becoming general had a bearish influence. Opening unchanged to 1-4 higher. Wheat subsequently showed a moderate decline all around. Corn and oats were easy, corn starting unchanged to 5-8 off and later sagging a little more. Provisions tended upward.

LAWN BOWLERS PLAN SCHEDULE

Will Have Single Series Instead of Playing in Groups.

TOURNEY JULY 20 AND 21.

The spring meeting of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club was held in the Chamber of Commerce last night, with President J. Sedgwick in the chair, when general business matters for the coming year were discussed. It was decided to hold a two-day tournament for local and outside competition on July 20 and 21.

In place of a group schedule as held in former years, the club decided to run single schedule, which means that each rink will play seventeen or eighteen games instead of eight or nine as the previous schedule provided.

A letter was received by the Secretary from Dr. Craig in regard to the parade on July 1, asking aid from the club to participate in this celebration; and a committee composed of Messrs. Sedgwick, Seymour, and Martin, was instructed to meet with Dr. Craig to arrange details.

A resolution was passed in which all agreed to do all in their power to make this great Jubilee a success.

Many new applications for membership are coming in and any one contemplating joining the club must hand his name in before May 10th, as the schedule is made up at that date.

SHANGHAI, April 26.—(Canadian Press.)—The vernacular newspapers published an official Kuomintang (Cantonese political organization) manifesto to the world to-day stating that the British minister at Peking proposes to prepare for the occupation of Shanghia and Nanking in the event that the Chinese government should reject the demands made by the powers growing out of the Nanking disorders of March 24.

TANK THROWN THROUGH ROOF BY EXPLOSION

Part of Artificial Ice Apparatus ights on Roof of House.

AT KINGSTON PLANT.

Tank Prevented By Beam From Falling on Baby in Crib.

KINGSTON, April 26.—A serious explosion, which wrecked the building to a considerable extent, occurred in the plant of the McCormick Artificial Ice Company yesterday morning. Miraculously enough, no one was hurt, despite the fact that the oil tank was blown out through the roof of the plant and dropped in through the roof of a frame dwelling house 50 feet to the south-west.

Allan Mayo of the McKelvey & Birch firm and Mr. McCormick, owner of the ice plant, were working endeavoring to locate a leak in one of the ammonia pipes. Mr. Mayo was standing on part of the machinery, and Mr. McCormick had stepped into the office to get another wrench. Just as Mr. McCormick had stepped out there was a terrific explosion, emanating from the oil tank, caused by a combination of oil and air and possibly some ammonia. The tank travelled in a south-westerly direction for a distance of 50 feet, and dropped through the roof of a little house occupied by Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Smith and their family coming to a halt on the floor just above the front parlor, wherein a seven-month-old baby lay in its crib. Part of the ceiling was torn, but an upright beam prevented the tank from falling into the room on top of the sleeping baby.

Mr. Mayo had a very close escape from death. Simultaneously with the explosion he was knocked off the machine, and in that way was out of the path of the explosion. He had a hammer in his hand, and two parts of the hammer were completely severed. Mr. Mayo suffered only a slight cut to his left hand.

AIRPLANE FLIGHT OFFERED AS PRIZE

Captain Ayres Offers To Help Boys Plan Models For Hobby Shows.

An added feature to the programme arranged for Boys' Week was unearthed this morning.

H. B. Ayres of the Canadian Aviation School located here has kindly offered to give plans with instructions whereby boys can make a model aeroplane which will actually fly.

Those boys who are interested can obtain particulars as to material and dimensions from Doug. Loomis at the Y. M. C. A.

A competition as to flight and workmanship will be held in front of the Armouries in Central Park on Saturday, May 14th, forming part of the boys' programme of various competitions at the Armouries that afternoon.

When one considers the fun of making a miniature plane that will soar, and the prize to the ultimate winners, because Mr. Ayres has also offered to give the lucky ones an aeroplane ride, there should be a large response from boys of all ages.

More particulars will be published later.

Would Break Levee.

New Orleans is threatened as the Mississippi flood crest approaches the city. The State of Louisiana asks the War Department for permission to break the levee below the city to relieve the situation. Army engineers in the valley now make no secret of their apprehensions for the safety of New Orleans. They have estimated that a break to the north would flood that city to a depth of many feet in some sections with a resultant los of millions of dollars in property, if not of life.

Rolling Fork, Miss., and much territory in Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana, is evacuated. Tenants on plantations around Rolling Fork, refused to heed the warning, and fear of their safety is felt. Two additional deaths are reported, and unconfirmed reports tell of others. The dead now are estimated at 500.

PRINCE AND COOLIDGE TO DEDICATE NEW PEACE BRIDGE

The new peace bridge, connecting Buffalo, N. Y., and Fort Erie, Canada, is pictured above. It is nearly completed and is to be dedicated in May by President Coolidge and the Prince of Wales. The span is dedicated to the 100 years of peace between the United States and Canada and as a reminder that no fortifications exist on either side of the border from coast to coast.

Cards Leading In National-Leafs Lose Third Straight

CARDS TAKE LEAGUE LEAD

Defeat Pirates at St. Louis by Margin of Single Run.

HOMER FOR SOUTHIT

NEW YORK, April 26 (Canadian Press) — The St. Louis Cardinals snatched the league leadership yesterday when Jess Haines outpitched Ray Kremer at St. Louis and the Pirates had victory snatched from their grasp by the margin of a single run. The Pirates had a goose egg and Haines only allowed them three hits. At that the Cards only made it because Southit knocked a casual homer.

Five consecutive singles with none down enabled the Reds of Cincinnati to score seven runs in the eighth inning and win from the Chicago Cubs yesterday, 11 to 9. The Cubs had scored five runs in the first half of the eighth. Four Cub and four Red pitchers were batted, or, perhaps better, battered freely.

Boston Defeated

At Philadelphia the home team had little trouble taking the first game of a series from Boston, 12 to 4. Nearly the entire Philadelphia team hammered for a bag or so. Pruett had little trouble winning his first National League victory, holding the Braves to six scattered hits.

Only three games wer scheduled in the National League yesterday.

GERMANY ISSUES CHALLENGE FOR CUP

Informed Entry In Six-Metre Series Will Be Acceptable.

By SEABURY LAWRENCE.

Germany has been added to the list of countries challenging for the Scandinavian Gold Cup, a trophy now held by the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club and which is to be sailed for in Long Island Sound off Oyster bay late in September. Commodore W. A. W. Stewart, chairman of the American Six-Meter Committee, received a query recently from German yachtsmen asking if a challenge from them would be accepted and they cabled a reply in the affirmative.

Besides Germany, the countries that will send six-meter yachts here to try to win the cup captured last year at Oslo by Lanai, include England, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Holland. It is possible, Commodore Stewart said, that Italy also may enter. There is a large six-meter class in Italy and it is likely that country could send a fast boat.

The dates have been set for the Seawanhaka Cup races, as well as those for the Scandinavian Gold Cup. The Seawanhaka Trophy, which also was won by the swift Lanai in 1925, on the Clyde, will be at stake preceding the series for the Gold Cup, starting on September 17.

Two Boats in Seawanhaka.

The Seawanhaka Cup series is a two-boat affair, the competing yachts being the Norwegian challenger and the American defender. According to the deed of gift of this trophy the race is limited to two boats and is decided on the best two-out-of-three principles.

The Scandinavian Gold Cup is an open race and at least six challenging yachts will attempt to take the trophy from the American defender. This series is scheduled to begin on September 24. Among the entrants will be a yacht sent by the Crown Prince of Norway, but it is uncertain as yet whether the Prince will come over to sail the boat. For the Scandinavian-American six-meter series of 1925, which was sailed in Long Island Sound, the Crown Prince sent over the Oslo, an extremely fast boat.

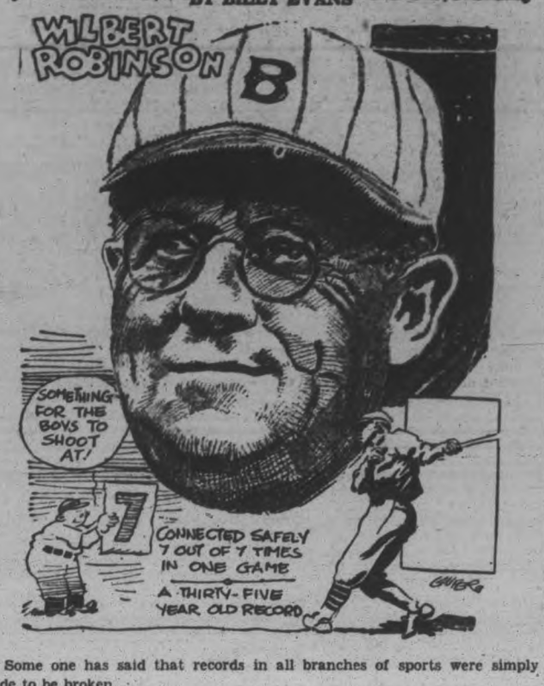
You'd Be SURPRISED!

BY BILLY EVANS



Some one has said that records in all branches of sports were simply made to be broken.

Perhaps that is true, but 35 years ago, Wilbert Robinson, now managing the Brooklyn club of the National League, but then playing with Baltimore, hung up a record that has survived.

Batting against three of the crack pitchers of the St. Louis club—Getzein, Young and Breitenstein—Robinson made seven hits in as many trips to the plate. Six of them were singles, one was a double. Despite the fact he reached first every time up, he scored only one run, due to the lack of a timely hit on the part of the players who followed him in the batting order.

Since June 10, 1892, the greatest batters in the American and National Leagues have been shooting in vain at Robinson's record of seven hits in seven times at bat in one game.

In the National League 25 players have made six hits in one game, while nine American Leaguers have turned the same trick, but Wilbert Robinson stands alone as the only player in the history of the major leagues to make seven hits in seven times at bat in a regulation nine-inning game.

RALLY IN 7TH TIES SCORE

Yanks Lose to Senators 5-4 in Hard Fought Game.

TIGERS DEFEATED

NEW YORK, April 26 (Canadian Press)—The Yanks and the Senators fought it out at Washington yesterday, the New York sluggers getting one run behind in the end and losing, 5-4. Washington's three run rally in the seventh when Goslin knocked a homer, tied the score. The Senators won in the eighth on Bluege's walk and steal, an infield out and West's infield single. The Yanks couldn't hit in the pinches and left 13 men on base.

Chicago defeated Detroit, 7 to 6. George Connally went in for Red Faber and saved the day for the Sox by checking a Detroit rally and slamming out a timely single.

While Kerr held St. Louis to four hits, Cleveland found Ballou after the sixth inning and Vangilder easy and knocked out 14 hits to win in a walk, 9 to 1. It was Cleveland's first batting rampage this year.

Philadelphia's scheduled game at Boston was postponed because of rain or cold weather or something.

vate property should not be taken without fair compensation."

"Everybody favors arbitration when the question at issue is arbitrable," he continued, referring to the Senate's suggestion. "Under the present circumstances I can see grave difficulties in formulating a question which the two Governments would agree to submit to such a tribunal.

"The principle that property is not to be confiscated and the duty of our Government to protect it are so well established that it is doubtful if they should be permitted to be questioned. Very likely Mexico would feel that the right to make a Constitution and pass laws is a privilege of her sovereignty which she could not permit to be brought into question.

"It has therefore seemed that we are more likely to secure an adjustment through negotiation."

ORIOLES LEAD INTERNATIONAL

Combination of Hitting and Pitching Wins Victory Over Leafs.

BREAK STREAK

NEW YORK, April 26 (Canadian Press) — The Orioles defeated the Leafs 9 to 4 yesterday and by virtue thereof, lead the International League. A combination of tight pitching and hard hitting gave the Birds the victory. Dick Porter led the hitting with a triple, a double and a pair of singles. Tillie Walker matched the performance of the Leafs with a homer, a single and a double.

The Reading Keystones broke their losing streak by defeating Rochester, 6 to 5, in the second half of a double header yesterday, after losing the first 9 to 6. The games were marked by final inning rallies. Reading scored four runs in the final of the first session, and Rochester duplicated the feat in the second.

ARTIFICIAL ICE RINK AT OSHAWA

Motor City Men Plan New Building To Seat Four Thousand.

HAVE PLANT.

OSHAWA, April 25. — According to Wm. Hambly of Hambly Bros. plans are nearing completion and work will start shortly on the consruction of a new artificial ice rink here. A few weeks ago it was announced that Toronto interests would erect a rink on the site of the old curling rink on King street west, but this plan did not materialize.

Now Hambly Bros., who operate an artificial plant have decided to go ahead with the project. The seating capacity of the proposed building will be 4144 and the ice surface 80 by 190 feet.

Soccer Notes

A league game between the Quakers and the Masseys will be played on Saturday afternoon at the King Edward park. Kick-off at three o'clock prompt. Referee John Ward. The executive instructed the official to start the match on time, irrespective of the number of players on the field of play, so as the public would not be disappointed with late starts.

Arrangements were made for the following Saturday afternoon when the Masseys meet the Thistle on King Edward Park.

Last season the Senior Association donated over forty dollars to charity through the Phelan Cup games.

The local executive have alloted a practice night to each club team—Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays of each week. While Saturday afternoon is left open for the official games.

The Thistle football club are holding a dance on Friday evening in the W.O.W. hall for the purpose of raising funds to pay for equipment.

A special meeting of the Junior Association will be held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms on Wednesday evening, at eight o'clock.

Two official referees have made applications as "Knights of the Whistle" under the jurisdiction of the senior board, and paid the necessary fees.

All Thistle players are requested to be at the practice game on Wednesday evening at six o'clock.

The Massey F. C. have registered the following players: W. Logan, D. Grant, A. Fowler, George Logan, J. Nicholson, W. James, A. Beggs, A. Laidler, G. Blowers, W. E. Westlake, F. E. Wade and S. L. Willis—twelve players.

To encourage the soccer game, and to let the public see the trophies played for during the season, the bond holders of the cups were instructed to leave them at White's Cycles and Sports store, for demonstration purposes.

Campbellford anticipates placing a team in the cup-tie games throughout the season.

WALES CELEBRATES WINNING OF TROPHY

Scenes Reminiscent of Signing of Armistice Held at Cardiff.

CARDIFF CITY, Wales, April 26 (Canadian Press Cable).—Scenes reminiscent of the celebration of the signing of the armistice in 1918 were witnessed here yesterday when the Cardiff City soccer team, who won the English Football Association Cup Saturday from Arsenal by one goal to nil, returned to the city with the blue ribbon of English soccer.

It was the first time in the history of the English Cup that a Welsh team had won the honors.

All streets leading to the station were thronged with crowds estimated at over 150,000. Two hours before the arrival of the train traffic was suspended.

The crowds besieged the station, and when the train steamed in and the cupholders appeared at the windows, the throngs gave way to wild and unrestrained enthusiasm.

A section of the multitude, including many women, broke through the lines and mobbed the players as they stepped from their carriages. Few of the players escaped being kissed.

Headed by mounted police and a band, the team were driven through the streets and they were given a tremendous ovation by the populace, who had climbed telegraph posts and other vantage points. The police barriers were again broken by the crowd, who ran alongside the cars bearing the players, bombarding them with flowers and mascots until they arrived at the City Hall.

Breaks in small levees on streams in both North and South Louisiana were reported; refugees were streaming into nearby towns.

The Mississippi River was rising between Natchez and New Orleans with army engineers gravely concerned about the safety of the south's largest city.

Full resources of the government for food and relief work were pledged by Secretary Hoover as he began personal survey of the situation so as to co-ordinate and expand rescue work and relief facilities.

Evacuation of refugees to large concentration camps went forward steadily. Hundreds of small craft were engaged in rescuing those who sought refuge on the levees, housetops, mounds and in trees.

PAGEANT RESULT OF MUCH TRAINING

Hard Work and Time Needed To Prepare For "Y" Programme.

All the multitudinous activities which go toward the production of an affair like the Pageant annually presented by the Young Women's Christian Association, are swinging along toward a successful completion. The men and women who attend these annual events, and sit in comfortable seats, watching the unfolding of a well-planned and executed programme, done with clockwork regularity and military precision, have little knowledge of the immense amount of effort in many quarters required to carry it to the stage of the Grand Opera House, and present it in the splendid fashion which has characterized these Pageants in the past, under direction of Miss C. Littlefield.

Just to watch the untiring directress training the little tots alone is a lesson in what is required. The small things love their dances and exercises, they like the bright lights and the pretty costumes and the applause that follows their cunning efforts, but they are difficult to train and their attention often wanders far from the matter in hand. They are always, however, one of the most interesting portions of the big Pageant.

Then there are many lovely dances with varying groups to instruct in the proper postures, gestures and tempo. Costumes are chosen to conform with the character of the number portrayed, and materials and colors are matters of careful and expert selection. This year will see a great variety of these pretty dances, ranging from the humorous mood of the "Sergeant Major and the Cook," through the romantic measures of the Columbine number and the gay atmosphere of the Russian Gypsy dance, and the Frolic waltz, to the funniness of the Junior Spinning Top Dance and the Babies' 'Happy Dance' of Mother Goose rhymes.

The popular and difficult Swedish gymnastics will also be featured as a portion of the physical section programme, with intricate club-swinging figures, rhythmic work for the Babies' Classes, wand, reed and dumbell exercises.

WHAT'S YOUR RATING?

Here are the answers to questions on page 5.

1. Red, yellow, blue.
2. A tree.
3. John Churchill, Duke of Marlborough (1650-1722).
4. A luminous meteor display in the north, and resembling the dawn.
5. Mayor William J. Gaynor.
6. Columbus.
7. After 25 years of married life.
8. A steam organ.
9. Owen Johnson.

ICE ENGINEER TO GIVE TALK

Dr. H. T. Barnes of McGill, Will Address Local Engineers.

WELL KNOWN MAN.

A meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada will be held on Thursday evening, April 28th, at the Chamber of Commerce Rooms. The speaker of the evening will be Dr. Howard T. Barnes of McGill University, who will speak on "Ice Engineering."

Professor Barnes' recent experiments in breaking up ice jams and preventing floods have drawn a considerable amount of attention to this subject and the present address will, therefore, be of considerable interest.

The Employment Bureau records for last week show 62 new applicants and 57 placements, with 151 still on the list. Officials at the Bureau told the Examiner this morning that the working conditions were picking up and work is being obtained more easily this year than the spring of 1926.

UNITED PRESS ANNIVERSARY

Many Attend Dinner at Which Coolidge is Chief Speaker.

JOURNALISM IS ADVANCED.

NEW YORK, N.Y., April 26.—(United Press.)—One of the romances of American journalism, the founding and growth of the United Press, was celebrated here last night in a twenty-tieth anniversary dinner at the Hotel Biltmore, with President Coolidge as the guest of honor and principal speaker.

More than eight hundred guests, including leading publishers and newspaper workers from all parts of the continent and many industrial and business leaders joined in the commemoration.

President Coolidge, accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge, and a small personal staff, arrived in New York at six p. m., receiving the cheers of New Yorkers as he drove through the crowded streets at the rush hours direct to the Biltmore. He was met at the Pennsylvania station by Karl A. Bickel, President of the United Press, who accompanied him to the hotel. Mr. Coolidge returned to Washington immediately after the banquet.

Bickel described the part American Press Associations played in the progress of American journalism to a point, "unrivalled by the press of any other nation," and of the contribution by the United Press through its policy of non-exclusive distribution of news.

WEDDING BELLS.

ALLEN—LAWRIE.

The marriage of Margaret Hunter Lawrie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Lawrie, of 317 Onslow Drive, Glasgow, Scotland, and Ralph Percival Hall Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Allen, Balmoral Villa, Barassie, Scotland, was solemnized at Montreal by Rev. J. Chisholm, on Saturday, April 23.

The bride arrived in Montreal from Glasgow, per S.S. "Montrose," and there met the bridegroom.

The happy couple will take up residence in Peterboro at 386½ Water Street.

BAKER-CARR.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carr, of Byron street, Trenton, on Wednesday, April 20th, at high noon, when their youngest daughter, Hazel Maude, was united in marriage to Mr. Harry John Baker, of Trenton, by the Rev. R. G. Stewart of the Presbyterian church, of Belleville.

The bride entered the parlor leaning on the arm of her father, and took her place under the beautiful evergreen arch to the strains of the Wedding March, played by Miss Audrey Neilson.

The couple were unattended except for little Berenice FitzGibbons, who acted as flower girl, and carried a basket of sweet peas, and was daintily dressed in pink crepe-de-chine.

The bride was charmingly attired in honeydew chiffon taffeta, trimmed with silver, and wore a tulle veil, with orange blossoms, carrying a beautiful shower bouquet of Sunset roses and lily of the valley.

A buffet lunch was then served to about eighty five guests, after which the happy couple left for an extended honeymoon.

The bride travelled in a dress of navy flat crepe with grey trimming, also coat of navy charmeen, trimmed with Russian squirrel, and gold, and hat of rosewood silk with silver and gold trimming.

The presents were numerous and costly, expressing the high esteem in which both the young people are held.

The groom's gift to the bride was a white gold wrist watch, to Miss Neilson a jewelled compact, and Berenice FitzGibbons a gold necklace.

The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. James McCauley of Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. John Armstrong, and Messrs Eddie and Geo. Armstrong, of Hastings, Ont.; Dr. Michell of Trent River; Mrs. Lochie Fisher of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. George Carr of Warkworth, Ont.; Mr. Willie Carr and Miss Zella Carr, of Campbellford, Ont.

A Kentucky Belle

The production of "A Kentucky Belle" in Victoria Hall last night, under the auspices of Vimy Ridge Lodge, proved to be a successful and entertaining event. The play, a three-act comedy, was staged by the Mission Circle of St. James' United Church, and the parts were cleverly taken, under the skilful direction of Mr. E. Eakins and Mrs. F. Foster. The orchestra, conducted by Mr. Clifford Rusaw, gave several finely-played selections which were heartily applauded, as were readings by Miss Jean Hamilton, piano solos by Miss Annie Rose and violin numbers by Mr. Clifford Rusaw. Repeated encores were given to other between-act vaudeville numbers by Messrs. Al Foster and Leslie Abraham.

RILEY AND HICKEY OPEN SATURDAY

New Men's Shop To Feature Popular Prices—Entirely New Stock.

BOTH LOCAL MEN.

Riley and Hickey open their new men's clothing and furnishings store on Saturday next in the building on George Street recently occupied by R. A. Irwin and Co.

The partner proprietors need no introduction to the people of their home town. Although young men, they have already borne a large measure of responsibility in acquiring the broad, general experience which they bring with them into their brand new men's shop. Mr. Ed. Riley has been six years with Jack Primeau, latterly as partner, and Mr. Butler Hickey has been manager of the men's wear department of Cressman Company Limited.

Riley and Hickey are launching their business on the present day policy of merchandizing which embraces popular prices, smaller profit but larger "turn over" of goods.

Small Profit Plan

"The consuming public today want not only bright attractive shops but especially attractive prices without any sacrifice of quality," is the basis of the Riley-Hickey enterprise. "We have one of the best equipped men's shops in Eastern Ontario," they emphasize; "We have bought our goods from the best houses in the country, and we hope to convince the public next Saturday that our prices are just as popular, just as attractive to the man with the slim purse as to the man with the full purse. Our clothing bears our own label which is our own guarantee of its quality in materials and workmanship. We believe that the people generally like a smart-looking, clean, well lighted store for men's wear, just as they do for groceries and other goods, and we have tried to furnish our store in such a manner that every customer will like it and feel at home with us. At the same time we are confident they will like our prices, for the small profit plan can be applied to the sale of men's wear with the same success as in selling groceries and other lines."

The Riley and Hickey store has been redecorated upstairs and down. New clothing fixtures have been added to the main floor appointments, and suits and coats will be sold on the ground floor as well as upstairs where a most complete range of men's clothing will be shown.

The fixtures for the men's furnishings enable the display of every article; and other similar arrangements are made for the convenience of customers.

The store will be open Friday night at 7:30 for a preliminary showing or house-warming and Mr. Riley and Mr. Hickey extend a general invitation to the public to visit their new men's wear shop before opening for business on Saturday.

PURCHASES OF ELECTRIC FIRM UNDER REVIEW

Customs Board Probing Transactions of Windsor Electric Supply Company.

GOODS SOLD IN U. S.

Involves Invoices of Varying Amounts For Duty and Trade.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 27 (Canadian Press)—Export of liquor gave way to import of electric fixtures before the royal customs commission yesterday afternoon. Transactions of the Windsor Electric Supply Company, involving the use of invoices of varying amounts for duty and trade purposes were under review.

P. Kamin of Windsor, president and manager of the Windsor company took the stand and explained many of the transactions. As invoice after invoice was passed to him by L. Calder, K.C., he volunteered the explanation of why the invoice for customs purposes was apparently appreciably lower than that which actually represented the business transaction.

He was followed on the stand however by William Jacques, preventive officer at Windsor, who said that the duty paid by the Windsor Supply Company since 1925 amounted to $1,750. The duty-paid undervaluation of goods imported during that period Mr. Jacques figured at approximately $7,900, but he qualified this statement by saying that Mr. Kamin claimed some of the goods were sold in Detroit. The explanations of the transactions which were made to the commission, the customs officer thought had been made to him.

Asks Protection

Mr. Kamin caused some amusement at the outset of his examination when his solicitor, J. H. Clark, suggested that he might ask for the protection of the commission.

"Do you want the protection of the court?" asked Chief Commissioner Brown.

"I should say I do," was the reply of the witness in no uncertain tone.

After the laughter had subsided, Chief Commissioner expressed some doubt as to whether the witness understood just what he was asking for. He thought that Mr. Kamin was under the impression that he had asked for protection against counsel rather than against prosecution.

The examination of Mr. Kamin hinged upon documents which have been unearthed in his office by commission auditors. Mr. Calder produced trade invoices from United States firms selling electric fixtures to the Windsor Electric Supply Company, the invoices on which duty was paid, and the cheques covering payment for the goods. He drew attention of the witness to cheques drawn by the company for the larger amount and asked him if that was not the real amount of the purchase.

Mr. Kamin was ready with explanations for nearly all of the half dozen or so transactions which were drawn to his attention. In some cases he explained that his cheque was for the larger amount because he had agreed to pay the duty when buying the goods. The amount on the customs invoice, he contended, was really the amount of the purchase on which duty should be paid.

Witness Warned

Some of the explanations offered by Mr. Kamin, both Mr. Calder and the Commissioners seemed to have difficulty in following. At one time the witness was warned that he was under oath and warned that he was under oath and that he must answer the questions put to him correctly. This was when invoices apparently covering the same goods, but one at a lower valuation than the other, were produced. Mr. Kamin insisted that they did not cover the same goods.

"Were you in the habit of making out customs invoices at your office?" inquired Mr. Calder with reference to a shipment received by the Windsor Electric Supply Company.

"Sometimes," was the reply. "They don't know how to make them out in Detroit."

One of the last transactions brought to the attention of Mr. Kamin, he could remember nothing about.

"It is the only transaction in which your mind is a complete blank," said Mr. Calder. "It is the only one for which you have no explanation."

"I had an explanation—", the witness began, but his statement was not completed.

There will be further discussion of the affairs of the Windsor Electric Supply Company to-day.

Complaint Laid

Earlier the commission was given some rather vague information about a complaint which resulted in holding up the ferry at Port Lambton for five months sometime ago. W. G. Dawson, who operates the ferry there stated that a complaint of "conspiracy" had been laid against him on the United States side because he

GOOD TOURIST HOTELS NEEDED

F. C. Stinson Says Many Visitors Don't Want To "Rough It."

LOOK FOR COMFORT.

That modern hotels be established in Northern Ontario to aid tourist trade of the better class, was the suggestion offered to the public by Frank Stinson on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce this morning. "Not only would it aid our province financially," said Mr. Stinson, "but I think the time is ripe for private interests to build hotels up there that will provide all modern conveniences; not anything elaborate, but the comforts that are really necessary, for although tourists may come for a vacation and are prepared to 'rough it,' they by no means wish to discard certain comforts of home life."

He also stated that the Chamber of Commerce would be prepared to stand behind any prospective hotels as it has those previously erected, but Mr. Stinson expressed his wish that real up-to-date ones would be put up, and he had no doubt but that they would be filed to capacity for the entire vacation season.

RELIEF WORK PROGRESSING IN FLOOD AREA

Emergency Gradually Being Brought Under Control, Says Director.

BOATS CALLED FOR.

Needed To Distribute Food and Rescue Marooned People.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 27 (Canadian Press). — Relief measures advanced throughout the flood-stricken districts of the Mississippi Valley today with accelerated speed as new emergencies were created by the waters that have left more than 160,000 persons homeless and hourly increased their destructive toll.

The emergency situation, in reference to the whole area affected, however, was gradually being brought under control, said Henry M. Baker, director of flood relief of the Red Cross.

With food, clothing, and medical aids being dispatched to the stricken areas and concentration camps as rapidly as these are obtained and transportation provided, a renewed call for boats to speed up the work of relief and rescue came to headquarters here. Mr. Baker called on the Coastguard for 100 fast patrol boats which will be used in rescuing marooned persons and other duties in all States affected.

Prepare to Cut Dykes

MEMPHIS, April 27 (Canadian Press).—While Louisiana authorities were preparing for the unprecedented expedient of deliberately cutting dykes and flooding two parishes to save New Orleans from the mighty flood sweeping down the Mississippi, situations little short of desperate were presented in Southeastern Arkansas and the Mississippi delta. Nearly two score towns within a radius of 100 miles in two States were under water, with the plight of refugees serious in the extreme. Piteous calls are being sent out for boats, clothing, food, and supplies. Secretary of Commerce Hoover, who reached New Orleans today, completing a tour of inspection from Memphis, said he believed the dead would not greatly exceed 200; that homeless would not probably be more than 150,000, and that the greatest problem was the rehabilitation of the homeless in their former habitations.

Radio Receiver Enlarges Pictures Nine Times Are Reproduced By Hot and Cold Air Device

NEW YORK, April 27—Photographs sent by radio are enlarged to nine times their original size by means of a new receiving apparatus which was tested successfully yesterday by the Radio Corporation of America.

The possibilities of the new receiving device were illustrated when full-size advertisements of a fashion magazine were radioed successfully. Radio engineers are now working on a receiving device which will make pictures eighteen times as large as the original. In a short time, it was predicted by Radio Corporation officials, the large size pictures will be received without difficulty from across the Atlantic.

The paper used in receiving the pictures was made especially for the corporation, based on a formula of paper experts. A wave of heat blown on this paper will make an impression much more quickly and visible than on ordinary stock.

The actual enlarging is done by a small asbestos device attached to a rubber tube, through which hot air is constantly being blown. A tiny opening at the end of the tube lets hot air blow on the paper, making a black mark. The pictures are made, however, by a second tube with cold air, the passage of which to the paper is controlled by radio signals. If the cold air passes in front of the current of hot air, it prevents the hot current from making a mark on the paper. Thus there is obtained the succession of black dots and lines and white spaces, which, when seen together, make the picture.

MANY MOTOR ACCIDENTS OCCUR ON CITY STREETS THIS MORNING

Mr. John M. Willys of the Willys-Overland Company, for whom J. J. Duffus Limited become distributors in the city and district.

Three Cylists Knocked Down in Collisions With Automobiles.

ONE RIDER BADLY HURT.

Automobile Smashed By Train On Simcoe Street—Driver Escapes.

Four accidents occurred in the city this morning. The first was at 6:50 a.m., when a car driven by George McMahon ran into bicycle on which Lorne Coombs was riding on Hunter street. A Hydro bus was going west at the time and when Coombs went to pass a Cooney and Jopling bus, he failed to see McMahon coming and so ran into the front of the car. Coombs was carried into the Westclox factory and given medical attention by Dr. O'Brien, who was called at the time of the accident.

Coombs was badly injured and his wheel completely smashed.

The second accident occurred on George street in front of the Grand Hotel when D. McKinnon, 240 McDonnel street, was struck by a car driven by Bert Manning. McKinnon was riding a wheel out from the back of the hotel when he noticed a small boy riding down George street. Apparently the youngster became excited for he kept on going, and McKinnon in an effort to escape collision with the boy, speeded up and was side-swiped by the passing car. The car passed over the wheel but the rider escaped injury.

A third automobile--bicycle accident occurred when a car driven by an unknown man overtook a boy named Carman de Carlo going in the same direction on Park street opposite the Canadian General Electric Co. Although smashing the boy's wheel and injuring him slightly the driver passed on after asking two or three questions. The police have the license number of the car.

The last accident this morning happened when a car driven by Frank Manley was run into by a C. P. R. train at Simcoe street east. Mr. Manley thought the train was on the second track and, realizing his mistake, made an effort to make the crossing and was struck by the oncoming locomotive. The car was badly smashed but the occupants escaped injury.

A serious accident occurred at noon to-day when a little girl named Marguerite Madden was struck by a car driven by a Mr. Jackson. The girl was on her way home from school and in crossing the road on Roger street was hit by the automobile. A fractured skull was the result and she is at present in St. Joseph's hospital in a critical condition.

GRAY ASSERTS MRS. SNYDER HOUNDED HIM

Claims She Got Him "In a Whirl" and Made Him Help Her.

WANTED TO BACK OUT.

Was About To Leave Snyder Home When Couple Returned.

NEW YORK, April 27 (Canadian Pess).—Henry Judd Gray agreed to kill Albert Snyder, magazine art editor, because his paramour and co-defendant, Mrs. Ruth Snyder, "hounded me and got me in a whirl with her love making," he asserted in his confession read in court to-day.

Gray's confession related how Gray met Mrs. Snyder and stated that she told him of half a dozen attempts she had made on her husband's life. He told her he thought she was "terrible," the confession continued.

He got the wire, chloroform and sash weight at her orders, he said, but never really thought he would go through with the scheme until he found himself actually striking the sleeping husband.

Gray said in the confession that he was in a daze throughout and his description of himself was that of a man in a hypnotic trance, unable to withstand the commands of the hypnotist.

He asserted that Mrs. Snyder directed him in his every action and when the husband seized him after the first blow she took the sash weight and beat the already stunned man unconscious.

The confession then told of burning the blood-stained shirt and gown, of turning the house topsy turvey to simulate a burglary, and of his returning to Syracuse after binding Mrs. Snyder.

Gray said that he had decided not to go through with their plans and was leaving the Snyder home when the Snyders returned from the party, and he had to run back to the unoccupied bedroom, where he was hiding. Once Mrs. Snyder came to him and said her husband was asleep and "the time has come," he said he was powerless to disobey her.

PREMIER CALLS SAUVE COWARD

Mr. Taschereau Denounces Tactics Of Leader of Opposition.

OPENS CAMPAIGN.

QUEBEC, April 27 (Canadian Press).—Pride in what has been accomplished under the Liberal regime, confidence as to the future of the province, and a stern denunciation of Arthur Sauve, Opposition leader, for what he termed to be "mud slinging" and attempts to 'murder reputations,' were the points which stood out in relief in the speech with which Hon. L. A. Taschereau, Prime Minister of the Province of Quebec, last night opened the Liberal election campaign in the province.

The term "coward" was applied to Mr. Sauve by the Premier, because of the charge made in his booklet to the effect that Ministers and deputies enrich themselves at the expense of colonization.

"Name them, Mr. Sauve," was the challenge of Mr. Taschereau.

U. S. MARINES WOUNDED BY CHINESE FIRE

U. S. Auxiliary Penguin Shelled From South Bank of Yangtse.

SOVIET GAVE AID.

London Silent Regarding Next Step Britain To Take in China.

SHANGHAI, April 27 (Canadian Press).—Acting as a convoy of the steamers Tungo and Tukwo down the Yangtse River, the United States auxiliary, Penguin, was subject to a heavy and persistent fire on Monday night from the south bank of the Yangtse River, midway between Nanking and Shanghai, occupied by the Cantonese.

A number of bluejackets aboard the Penguin were wounded, one is thought to be mortally wounded and this attack proved to be the most serious affair that any of the United States warships have sustained since they appeared in Chinese waters.

Immediately the Penuin opened up with machine guns and rifles, and the Cantonese replied with field pieces; whereupon the Penguin brought her big guns to bear upon the Chinese, who finally desisted.

The U.S. destroyer Paul Jones was also fired on but from the north bank of the river, where the northerners control. Investigating another attack, the U.S. destroyer John D. Ford, and the British destroyer Cockchafer discovered six Cantonese gunboats all ready for action.

The Cockchafer was fired on later from the south bank of the river and opened up a heavy shrapnel fire which was kept going most of the day.

Supplied Money.

PEKING, Apr. 27 (Canadian Press)—That the Soviet Russian Government during the past year had paid over $10,000,000 in support of the Cantonese military and 'anti-foreign' activities is the claim made in a statement issued by the police yesterday.

The statement asserts that accountants have examined the books of the Dahl (Soviet) Bank, seized during the recent raid on the Soviet Embassy compound. The accounts were found in perfect order and revealed that during the past year the Soviet Government paid over $10,000,000 in support of the Cantonese military and anti-foreign movements.

Through Attaches.

The police statement continues:

"The money was remitted largely through the Soviet military attache in Peking. A complete list of arms and munitions supplied by the Soviet Government was discovered, together with correspondence showing the Soviet officials dissatisfied with the inferior and slovenly work of the Cantonese staff and insisted on Russian advisors in order to ensure success of the campaign."

LONDON, April 27 — (Canadian Press).—A Peking despatch to the Westminster Gazette says that documents seized in the raid on the Soviet Embassy settlement there prove that Russian troops are attached to the Cantonese forces.

The newspaper's message continues:

"A letter dated February 22, signed by Ginera, the Soviet Military Attache, addressed to General Gallen, gives the scale of increased pay to officers and men of the Soviet Army temporarily attached to the Cantonese forces amounting roughly to double the scale paid in Russia."

Overwhelming Evidence.

Chinese Northern authorities raided the Soviet Embassy compound in Peking April 6 last. This led to the recall of the Soviet Charge d'Affaires and the entire Embassy staff but the Consulate personnel remained.

The Peking officials claimed the raid produced "overwhelming evidence" that the Soviet Union was deeply involved in plots to overthrow law and order in North China.

London Silent.

LONDON, Apr. 27 (Canadian Press)—Unavailing efforts were made in the House of Commons yesterday to induce the Government to reveal its next step in China. The Government's spokesmen would only say that the whole situation was still under discussion.

In reply to many questions, Godfrey Locker-Lampson, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, reviewed the existing position in China. The area of the Yangtse Valley, he said, was still disturbed, neither the lives nor the property of foreigners being secure, but elsewhere China was quiet.

Gunboats Withdrawn.

The British Consulates in Changtu, Chinkiang, Ichiang and Changsha were closed, and the British gunboats had been withdrawn from those ports. Likewise the United States, Japanese and French communities had withdrawn. Only about 200 British and 75 Americans, mostly men, remained in Hankow, while the British Consuls at Hankow, Nanking and Chinkiang had been obliged to establish themselves aboard ship. The remaining British residents had also taken to the ships for safety.

The few steamers navigating the

INTERESTING BUSINESS CHANGE MADE BY J. J. DUFFUS LIMITED

Local Firm Gives Up the Ford Franchise To Take Over Willys-Overland.

FOR FIVE COUNTIES.

Change Comes as Surprise To Public—20 Years With Ford Company.

A business deal was consummated in Peterborough today between J. J. Duffus Limited and Willys-Overland through its general sales manager Florian Leduc whereby J. J. Duffus Limited will be the exclusive distributors of Whippet and Willys-Knight cars in the Counties of Peterborough, Northumberland, Durham, Haliburton and Victoria.

This deal is probably the most extensive in motor car agencies that has taken place in the city or surrounding district. For more than nineteen years the name of J. J. Duffus has been synonomous with Ford products within a large radius of Peterborough to which organization Mr. Duffus has given loyal representation and to his clients the best of service possible.

It is Mr. Duffus' long connection with the Ford organization and the sudden change in affiliation that makes the move of great interest to the automobile public in this community.

Open House Week

In order to make the transfer of agency to the Willys-Overland an impressive event J. J. Duffus Limited are going to hold an Open House Week from Saturday, April 30th, until Saturday, May 7th, both days inclusive when they will have on exhibition 18 Willys-Knight and Whippet cars. During this Open House Week a Whippet Four Coach will be given away to some one of the visitors to the show and will be absolutely free.

Calles' Palatial Train Ready For Mexican Trip

CHICAGO, April 27. — The most palatial car ever built by the Pullman Company, yesterday was turned over to Arturo Elias for delivery to President Calles of Mexico, to replace the presidential train in service since 1897.

The five-car train, designed in architecture of Old Mexico, cost $375,000. It will be christened on its 3000-mile, four-day maiden trip to Mexico City. Attached to it will be a sixth coach, built for the secretary of war of Mexico.

On the train will be Consul Elias, fiscal agent of Mexico; Senora Elias and his son. The three will have the train to themselves. The presidential car is the most elaborate, with a suite for the president, one for his wife and reception room for the new mobile white house of Mexico. Other cars consist of an auto car, an escort car for the military guard, a staff car for aides of the president, and a dining salon and kitchen car.

Kingston Company Preparing To Close Down on Saturday.

BUS FRANCHISE SOUGHT.

KINGSTON, April 27. — H. C. Nickle, Manager of the Street Railway Company, stated yesterday that there were no new developments in the situation, and that the company was making all necessary preparations to close down the service on Saturday night. He stated further, that several of his employees had already made arrangements to take other positions, and that the majority was moving to the United States.

Representatives of two bus companies are here looking over the situation with the object of applying for the franchise. On the other hand, in Board of Trade circles there is hope that the street cars will not cease operating and that some agreement will be reached by Friday.

LOCAL UNITS HOLD PARADE

Peterborough Rangers and Machine Gun Company On Route March.

GOOD IMPRESSION.

Peterborough streets resounded to martial music last night when the Peterborough Rangers and the 3rd company, 4th Batt., C.M.G.C., held a route march through the city. Headed by their bands, the two units attracted a great deal of attention as they marched down George street to Brock, east to Water, south to Charlotte, west to Aylmer, north to Simcoe, east to George, and back to the Armories.

Lt.-Col. W. Gordon Hall and Major H. Dodds commanded their respective units. The men marched well to the music, alternately, of the Rangers Band and the Machine Gun Corps pipe band, and made a good impression.

It was announced on parade last night that both units would have a three day camp at the end of June and that there were openings for a few select recruits in their ranks. The machine gunners will parade on Wednesday and Friday beginning May 4, of each week, while the Rangers turn out on Tuesday and Thursdays.

Bayonet drill and shooting will form the major part of the training of the Rangers in preparation for intensive work under service conditions at the camp. This is in charge of Major G. G. Winterbottom.

The machine gunners will spend their drill periods at Vickers gun work and pack saddlery.

After the parade a number of recruits were signed up by the two units.

NEW CHIEF HONORED.

WINDSOR MAN ACKNOWLEDGES USE OF TWO INVOICE SYSTEM

Found Practice Being Followed When He Became Store Manager.

TO EVADE CUSTOMS.

Officer Says Some Detroit Firms Furnish Low Invoices For Purpose.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 27 (Canadian Press).—Intentional evasion of the payment of customs duties was admitted before the Royal Commission on Customs today by George Galbraith, manager of the Windsor store of Gammages, Limited, London, Ontario. Confronted by double invoices covering importations of cut flowers from Detroit, Mr. Galbraith stated that the lower invoice had been submitted to the Customs "to save the payment of duty." The practice had been instituted before he took over the managership at Windsor two years ago and had prevailed ever since.

"When you discovered this double invoicing system, did you take it up with London?" asked Chief Commission Brown. "No."

"Did you think it was an error?" "No."

"You knew it was an intentional evasion of duty?" "Yes."

"Did your head office know it was being done?" "I couldn't say."

Mr. Galbraith said that the main books of the firm were kept in London and his invoices were sent there.

"We'll summon Mr. Gammage," said R. L. Calder, Commission counsel.

"I know it is the practice of several firms over in Detroit to practically encourage Canadian dealers to use false invoices," W. A. Jacques, preventive officer here, told the commissioners. Mr. Jacques said he was now investigating the Gammage case.

"I would suggest that American firms doing this should be blacklisted," he continued.

"Put them on the black-list and publish it—publish it in The Canada Gazette," suggested Judge Brown, forcibly.

Aged Lizard's Hobo Tree Loses Nine Foot Tenant

NEW YORK, April 27.—(A.P.)—A century-old lizard, nine feet long and weighing 300 pounds, has arrived in America for exhibition at the Philadelphia zoo.

The lizard, believed to be the largest in captivity, was brought here by the Red Star liner Belgenland, back from a 30,000-mile cruise around the world. The reptile was found under a sacred hobo tree at the Temple of Anaderaphura in Ceylon.

Four baby white camels and six Gibbon monkeys, known as "missing links," were also brought in the liner.

AIM TO LESSEN RESTRICTIONS ALONG BORDER

Concerted Action By Civic Organizations at Border Points Planned.

MEETINGS HELD.

United States' Workers Are Expected To Give Co-operation.

BUFFALO, April 27. — (Canadian Press).—Concerted action by civic organizations on both sides of the international border in the vicinity of the more populated centres, aimed at lessening the rigidity of the new United States immigration regulations, is in prospect, the Associated Press was informed yesterday.

Starting with a mass meeting at Niagara Falls, Ont., the popular movement for at least partial repeal of the regulations will be guided around various border points, it was intimated.

At Monday night's meeting, held under chamber of commerce auspices, a resolution was adopted asking that the Canadian Government attempt to seek relief from the ruling for thousands of its citizens who are at present employed in the United States.

International Appeal.

Similar resolutions, leaders of the meeting declared, will be sought from other points. Resolutions adopted on the Canadian side will be directed to the Dominion Government, while United States organizations will be asked to communicate directly with the United States Department of Labor, which has jurisdiction over the immigration situation.

Although the new regulations will affect hundreds of Canadians along the border in this vicinity, there was no animosity apparent in Niagara Falls Monday night. Mayor Harry P. Stevens of Niagara Falls, Ont., summed up the Canadian attitude with the statement that "after all, every country has the right to govern itself as best it may." He expressed regret, however, that the hitherto free passage of Canadians, both native-born and naturalized, across the border might be hindered.

Secret Of Making Gasoline Out Of Cold Water Revealed By Boys Under Threat Of a Licking

WINNIPEG, April 27—Cold water as a substitute for gasoline in motor cars. Of course there were drops of secret formula that you had to put in the water. This was the combination that two fifteen year old high school boys of Pembina fooled the wise ones of that village until the trick was disclosed under threats of a licking.

"We just did it to show 'em that the rising generation is not so slow," explained Jess Frank, while Carl Ritter, companion in the snappy fake, stood by with a grin. An old car salvaged by the boys has been the wonder of the town for days, the boys preteading to very jealously guard their great chemical mystery. Any one could pour a gallon or two of cold water into the tank, then the boys would put a few drops of their secret preparation in and drive away. They gave public demonstrations. Even the auto dealers were fooled but the boys' parents got tired of the sensation and threatened to strap the youngsters if they didn't stop their foolishness.

Then a separate tank cunningly concealed in a thin partition was revealed. This was always kept filled with gasoline and the cold water went into the dummy.

LONDON POLICE OUST HECKLERS

Interrupted Archbishop of Canterbury in Speech at Queen's Hall.

PROTEST REVISIONS.

LONDON, April 27 (Canadian Press).—The police had to quell a disturbance at Queen's Hall last night when hecklers interrupted the Archbishop of Canterbury with protests against the recent revision of the Book of Common Prayer of the English Church on the ground that it was "Popish."

"My Lord, I submit a resolution to this meeting calling upon His Majesty's Government to reject the Popish Prayer Book," shouted a man from the gallery when the Venerable Archbishop started his address to the annual meeting of the religious tract society.

Another man shouted a second to the motion. Then several women cried hysterically: "This Popish Prayer Book."

Police and attendants removed the agitators, one of whom struggled violently and was finally removed, shouting: "Take your money and go to Rome."

(The revised Prayer Book, which has been proposed as an alternative to the one now in use, will come before the National Assembly of the Church in July for final approval and will be sent to Parliament. The revision has met considerable objection. On March 30, 100 robed clergyment marching through the west end with banenrs inscribed: "We will not have a compromised book."

NARROW ESCAPE FOR YOUNG CHILD

Presence of Little One in Burning House Almost Forgotten.

LINDSAY, April 27.—A serious fire, which almost culminated in a tragedy, occurred in the village of Haliburton on Monday night about ten o'clock, when the residence of James Howe was burned to the ground. The fire is believed to have started somewhere in the chimney, and by the time the village fire fighters arrived the house was doomed. Practically all of the contents were saved. In the excitiment the workers overlooked a little baby sleeping upstairs. The tot was saved from being burned to death in the nick of time. Mr. Howe is at present in an hospital in the United States, and it is understood there is no insurance on the house.

Flood At Glance

Deliberate flooding of a vast area in Southern Louisiana in order to save New Orleans is considered by state authorities and army engineers with the approval of the federal government.

A civil war is threatened between the state and trappers living in the area south of New Orleans where it is proposed to break the levee.

Three additional deaths increased the known total to more than 110, with estimates of probable dead running as high as 500.

Floods in Arkansas spread with alarming rapidity, inundating six more towns and many thousands of additional acres of farm lands.

New danger points develop in Pine Tree state, with the overflowing of the Cuachita River below Camden and two crevasses developing in the Kochtitzke drainage district in the northeast.

Flood waters of the Mississippi and the Yazoo form junction in Mississippi delta, flooding Rolling Fork.

Flood refugees increased beyond one hundred and fifty thousand mark as more thousand flee before the swiftly moving waters.

The nation's response to President Coolidge's call for funds passed the $2,000,000 mark, nearly half of the five millions immediately sought.

Red Cross medical director calls conference of health officers of seven states in flood area to co-ordinate their work with that of the Red Cross and United States public health service.

Rescue work continues in all sections with many more hundreds taken from perilous positions on housetops, in trees and from mounds and levees.

OLD MASTERS

1 met a traveler from an antique land
Who said: Two vast and trunkless legs of stone
Stand in the desert. Near them on the sand
Half sunk a shattered visage lies whose frown
And wrinkled lip and sneer of cold command
Tell that its sculptor well those passions read
Which yet survive stamped on these lifeless things
The hand that mocked them and the heart that fed:
And on the pedestal these words appear:
"My name is Ozymandias king of kings;
Look on my works ye Mighty and despair!"
Nothing beside remains. Round the decay
Of that colossal wreck boundless and bare
The lone and level sands stretch far away.

LOWER VALLEY OF MISSISSIPPI IS EVACUATED

Situation in Northern Area Improves as Waters Flow South.

ISSUE APPEAL.

Secretary Davis Gives Sanction For Cutting of Levee.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 27.—The Mississippi River has started to retreat from the hundreds of square miles of territory in the northern valley engulfed by floods last week.

Slightly lower stages were reported yesterday by government engineers at Memphis, and practically all river points north of here.

As yet the drip in the river is almost imperceptible, but it gives assurances against further devastation in the upper regions of the flood district.

Already scores of farmers and their families who fled before the onrush of the waters in Kentucky and Tennessee are moving back in their anxiety to repair their property and get crops planted as quickly as possible, advices to relief headquarters here said.

Improved conditions were reported from all of the refugee camps in northern flood territory, where congestion is being relieved by the start of the homeward movement.

Hundreds in these camps, however, will be unable to go home for many days yet to sections where the inundation is deepest and the drainage will be slow.

Evacuation Begins

(By E. W. Lewis, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

VICKSBURG, Miss., April 27. — With the death toll mounting, troops began yesterday to evacuate areas which are certain to be flooded by the Mississippi.

The refugees, clinging to their few possessions, and water - flooded homes, all were to be driven to safety at point of bayonet, if necessary, General Curtis T. Green, commander of the Mississippi National Guard, announced.

Failure of the inhabitants to cooperate with relief authorities has constituted one of the greatest problems of the organization which has undertaken the work.

Lack of enforced evacuation was said by many workers to be the indirect cause of many of the 100 or more deaths which have been recorded.

"It may be necessary to force thousands of persons out of threatened areas by Wednesday night," General Green said yesterday. "The matter is imperative if we are to save lives. This work should start at once."

Simultaneously, virtual martial law was put into effect in Greenville, Deland and Rolling Forks, Miss., to supervise evacuation and distribution of food and medical supplies.

To Save City

WASHINGTON, April 27 (A.P.).—Tacit sanction for the cutting of the levee on the left bank of the Mississippi River at Poydras, La., 10 miles below New Orleans, to save the city from flood inundation, was given by Secretary Davis of the War Department yesterday in a telegram to Governor Simpson of Louisiana.

The Governor proposed this move under a resolution adopted by the Mississippi River Commission at Vicksburg Monday recommending that he order the levee cut at a point to be designated by himself.

Secretary Davis replied that the War Department could accept no responsibility for the action or for injuries or damages which might result, but would interpose no Federal objection to the breaking of the levee if the Mississippi River Commission and Major-General Jadwin, Chief of Army Engineers, found no reason to oppose the plan at a conference to be held in Vicksburg, Miss.

Prince Of Wales Not To Attend Bull Fight Saw One Shot Once; Enough For His Highness

SEVILLE, Spain, April 27 (Canadian Press)—The Prince of Wales saw a young bull shot yesterday after it had fallen and broken its leg, and the sight so affected him that he immediately withdrew from the ranch where he had gone to see how young bulls for arena work are captured.

The Prince and his brother, George, visiting Spain as guests of the king and queen, are seeing much of Spanish life. They attended the provincial fair yesterday afternoon, and then called at a number of homes, where dancing, a popular part of the festival, was in full swing.

Declines Invitation

LONDON, April 27—A special bullfight has been proposed in honor of the Prince of Wales, who is visiting Spain, says the Seville correspondent of the Daily Express, but the Prince has decided not to attend. He saw a bullfight incognito at San Sebastian last year, the correspondent adds, and resolved that he did not want to see another one.

I.O.O.F. SERVICE WELL ATTENDED

I.O.O.F. Service—24 Pt. Millbrook Brethren March in Body To St. Thomas' Church.

MILLBROOK, April 26—The annual parade to attend divine worship of Millbrook Lodge, I.O.O.F., No. 308, took place on Sunday evening to St. Thomas' Church, the Citizens' Band, under the leadership of G. A. Duncan, heading the march from the Oddfellows' Hall at 7 p.m. Between sixty and seventy of the members were in attendance. Brother J. A. Vance, P.G., filled the position of marshal.

Two of the veteran members of the local Order were among those who marched with their lodge on Sunday evening, Brother William Donaldson and Brother David Hampton—the latter has the unique distinction of having held the office of treasurer in the Millbrook Lodge for over twenty-five consecutive years, and has been actively connected with the Oddfellowship of nearly fifty years.

The rector, Rev. Canon Allen, read the prayers at the Sunday evening worship, and the assistant, Rev. P. C. Howard, who is a member of the local lodge, read the Scripture lessons from 1st Samuel, 17, and from Luke 10, and also preached the sermon.

Mrs. Allen presided at the organ, Easter hymns being appropriately used throughout the service.

Rev. Mr. Howard took for his text Genesis 4, 9: "Am I my brother's keeper?"

"Christianity is not merely a religion of personal security, but a gospel of mutual helpfulness. We accept saving grace with its promise of everlasting life not alone for ourselves, but the principles of our Order compel us to go and help others also in the shadow of the Cross.

"Our texts permits only of an affirmative answer, for not even the greatest in this world can live independently of others. A proper conception of the Fatherhood of God leads to a recognition of the brotherhood of man; failure to appreciate the truth of the latter fact is of itself an offence against the equally unassailable fact of God's universal Fatherhood."

Emphasizing the fact that Oddfellowship is a brotherhood whose principles are for the benefit of mankind, demanding not alone "that we preach creed but actively practice it, following our Master in relieving distress among our fellows," the speaker proceeded to deal definitely with the significance of the three links emblematic of the Order.

Bible examples of friendship were cited, "but Jesus has given this grace its fullest expression in that He was the Friend of Sinners." The connecting link, "Love," brought a reference to the wonderful truth that "God commendeth His love toward us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for the ungodly"; and the final link, "Truth," led to the exhortation, "Let us, brethren of this Order, be true to ourselves, true to others, and true to Christ; we cannot commit sin, reject the Saviour, shirk our responsibility to our fellow men, and follow faithfully our Great Example.

"Oddfellowship has made its mark in the noble work of binding lives and hearts together in sympathy and helpfulness. Live then as Christ our Saviour, lived; fight under His banner; and realize the greatest and highest satisfaction life can possibly bring. Thus shall we meet Him beyond death's curtain, and hear from His blessed lips, 'Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord'."

Upon the return to the lodge rooms, the usual votes of thanks were passed.

WILL ARRANGE FOR CONFERENCE

Autumn Gathering of Provinces Planned By the Dominion.

OTTAWA, April 27.—The different provinces are to be sounded out as to the most desirable time next fall for the holding of an interprovincial conference. It will likely be either in September or October. A variety of matters have cropped up in the past few years upon which consultation or agreement with the provinces is sought. Several discussions in the house have been stalled on the grounds that nothing could be done without this provincial consent.

An interesting question will be the provincial subsidy revision. The increased grants to the Maritime Provinces were made in a lump sum with the specific understanding that subsidies to all the provinces would be discussed at a conference in contemplation of a general revision.

Constitutional Problem.

Another question to come up will be whether Canada should have the right to amend its own constitution. It is agreed that this should be done only with the consent of the provinces which were parties to the Confederation pact. Subject to the same condition would be any question of reform to the Senate, of which talk there are periodical spasms.

Apart from these more outstanding questions the conference will deal with provincial adherence to the old age pensions scheme, relative spheres of federal and provincial taxation, and also relative jurisdiction in respect of the incorporation and regulation of companies.

OBITUARY.

REV. DOUGLAS LAING.

KINGSTON, Ont., April 27 (Canadian Press).—The death occurred suddenly yesterday afternoon of Rev. Douglas Laing, who for twenty-eight years ministered as the pastor of the First Baptist Church in this city, but who retired from the active ministry in 1922. Rev. Mr. Laing had attained the age of eighty years and up to a few days ago was in his usual health and spirits. Heart trouble caused his death.

Mr. Laing was born in Roxboroughshire, Scotland, and came to Canada in his boyhood with his parents, settling in Western Canada. He received his education in a rural public school, Stratford High School and Woodstock College. He graduated from the latter in 1879, and later took some special work at Queen's University.

Mr. Laing held pastorates at Sparta, Strathroy, Perth and Beechville and Kingston. He is survived by his widow, and two daughters of his first wife, Miss Jean Laing of New York City and Miss Maybelle of St. Catharines.

HANNORAH CROWLEY

HASTINGS, April 27 — The death occurred on Monday of one of the oldest and most highly respected residents of Asphodel Township in her seventy-ninth year.

The late Hannorah Crowley was born in County Cork, Ireland, in the year 1848, coming to Canada the same year, living first in Otonabee before coming to Asphodel.

The funeral took place from the residence of her nephew, Mr. Bart. Crowley, lot 3, concession 4, Asphodel Township on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock and proceeded to the Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel where Requiem Mass was sung by Rev. C. S. Bretherton, thence to the R. C. cemetery for interment. She leaves to mourn her loss one brother Timothy of Peterboro, several nieces and nephews.

The pallbearers were Messrs. R. J. Walsh, William McCarthy, Thomas Lynch, Michael English, T. J. Lynch, and F. J. Walsh.

ARMS PROBLEM YET UNSETTLED

Preparatory Commission Adjourns Without Fulfilling Task of Preparing Draft.

WILL NEGOTIATE.

GENEVA, April 27 (Canadian Press).—The preparatory disarmament commission adjourned last night without fulfilling its allotted task of preparing a draft treaty for the reduction of armaments. In the opinion of President Loudon, voiced in his valedictory address, the destiny of disarmament now definitely depends upon the power of public opinion and the will of the governments to negotiate agreements on the great unsettled issue.

M. Loudon declared that the Commission's work in the past five weeks had demonstrated that a successful disarmament conference is practically assured in the future and believed that the forthcoming economic conference and the three Power naval conference would prepare the way for a resumption of the discussion, which he hoped would be about November 1.

In the meantime the report goes to the council and the assembly of the League of Nations for action. The only two major points on which an accord has been reached are the decisions to limit military effectives and air forces, though both Great Britain and the United States have made reservations on the failure to limit trained reserves.

Students Go On Skates As "U" Drafts Auto Ban

ANN ARBOR, Mich., April 27. (A.P.)—Scores of university men Saturday jumped back a decade to their roller skating days. Two seniors, on skates, rolled into sight along the fancy concrete entrance to the campus. They gave a half hour exhibition and retired.

This was the cue to others. In half an hour the hardware stores in town had given up all their skates; small boys had parted with their rollers to college youths and as many students as could get eight wheels strapped to two feet were rolling about the college section of town.

There is a hint in some quarters that the adoption of roller skating may be a protest against the announced intention of the Board of Regents to forbid any Michigan student to operate an automobile.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THE FOOTBRIDGE

He felled a tree across a stream,
And went his way, and did not dream
That that would count with God or men.
The years went by, he came again,
And found that men a trail had made
Across the log that he had laid
Across the stream. He went away,
And came again a later day,
And men had built from ridge to ridge
Across the stream a noble bridge.

And so it is I say to you,
Wait not for mighty deeds to do,
But do the little that you can.
Whoever helps his fellowman
In after years may often find
That helping one he helped mankind.
Not all may build a giant bridge
Across the stream from ridge to ridge
But many a bridge was once a tree,
And many a trail a road will be.

STAY AT HOME DOMINION DAY.

From all parts of Canada come stories of great enthusiasm over the Diamond Jubilee celebration.

The event has fired the imagination of the Canadian people, and although they are not usually given to demonstrations of their loyalty, the present occasion is arousing a general desire to do the thing properly and in a manner worthy of a great country.

That spirit is making itself manifest, The Examiner is glad to say, among local citizens, and as the plans for the celebration begin to take definite form and the different committees discuss the details of the features for which they are responsible, the public generally is catching the infection and is getting ready to co-operate.

There are many ways in which help can be given, but the first step should be the making of a resolve that the jubilee shall be celebrated at home.

There will be many other occasions to visit other places; on this great anniversary Peterborough people should decide that they will remain in their home city and do their part in making the Diamond Jubilee celebration the biggest affair in the history of the community.

This should be a stay-at-home Dominion Day so far as Peterborough people are concerned.

THAT SUMMER SCHOOL.

There is double interest in the announcement made by Premier Ferguson of the intention of the Ontario Department of Education to hold a summer course in oral French in the city of Quebec from July 18 to August 12.

In the first place, this course, which will be open to teachers of French in the Continuation Schools, Collegiate Institutes and High Schools of Ontario, will be of considerable value in improving the accent of these teachers through contact with French-speaking people, and will ensure better training in conversational French.

That in itself is enough to make Premier Ferguson's announcement of much interest.

Political sharps are likely to see in it, however, something more than a desire to improve the teaching of French in Ontario's schools.

By many of them Mr. Ferguson's action will be looked upon as a gesture of friendship to Quebec, designed to improve the chances of Ontario's Premier in the fight for the Conservative Federal leadership, in which it is now believed that Mr. Ferguson will soon be actively engaged.

Obviously if the Ontario Premier has his eyes upon the Federal leadership his summer school in Quebec plan will benefit him in quarters where Conservative politicians have in recent years been far from popular.

A PERPETUAL SOURCE OF WEALTH.

Why a Save-the-Forest Week?

Surely that question does not require an answer.

The man on the street is just beginning to realize that in the backwoods of this country lies the second greatest source of wealth in Canada.

Of the primary industries agriculture still leads the forests, mines, fisheries and water powers in net value of products, but the forests come second, yielding annually about $433,000,000 to the income of Canadians.

Unlike many other manufacturing industries, the forest industries are dependent primarily on Canadian natural resources, which need never become exhausted if proper care is taken in their exploitation. The water powers are in turn dependent on the forest cover of their drainage areas for the control of their discharge.

We are now the greatest producers of newsprint in the world, our output in 1926 being 1,881,737 tons, exceeding the United States production by 195,042 tons, and with the equipment that is being added to Canadian paper mills the capacity of these plants will be increased another 350,000 tons this year.

If this position is to be maintained, it is imperative that the forests, both mature and young growth, be protected from fire.

We have ample land, the kinds of timber the world's markets demand and favourable growing conditions.

All the forests of Canada require is rational treatment to make them a perpetual source of wealth.

THE MODERN EVE.

In avoirdupois Eve didn't wear so much less than her sister of 1927. True, the 1927 wardrobe covers slightly more territory than did the trousseau of Paradise Garden, but it would consume little more space in a week-end bag and could probably balance a full-grown fig leaf on a chemist's scales.

There is a considerable amount of truth in the saying that the flapper runs a comb through her bob, makes a few strokes with lipstick and eyebrow pencil, takes a few dabs at her face with rouge pad and powder puff, chooses the tint of her garters and says:

"Well, clothes, if you're going—hang on."

And the modern young woman expects every pin and length of elastic to do its duty. Her faith in the inanimate is amazing.

Lingerie has fallen away to a mere skeleton. The vest, wide brassiere, corset and corset cover have been superceded by the bandeau, which is as narrow as it is flimsy, and the diminutive step-ins. Between bandeau and step-ins there is a hiatus and an even wider breach exists between step-ins and the roll of the rolled stockings.

Milady's shoes consist of a thin sole and less upper. If she wears a petticoat it is of sheer silk usually shadow-proof in the advertisements only. And a yard and a half of silk serves for a dress.

No doubt the brevity and airiness of the feminine costume of the day accounts for the fact that the modern woman can array herself all in silk and kid without bankrupting the nation and overworking the silkworms. —Kingston Whig-Standard.

THE FLOOD SUFFERERS.

The Council of Niagara Falls, Ont., is considering the naming of a substantial donation to the fund for the relief of the sufferers in the Mississippi flood area.

Such a donation coming from a Canadian city would doubtless be appreciated by the American Red Cross as an expression of neighborly sympathy in a time of great trouble.

That great organization of humanitarian service is grappling with the enormous task of taking care of hundreds of thousands of homeless refugees, who must be fed, clothed, housed and guarded against an outbreak of disease.

The waters of the Mississippi and its tributaries have rolled over thousands of acres of land, inundating towns, sweeping away houses, claiming a toll of hundreds of lives, and causing property damage estimated as high as half a billion dollars.

The problem of caring for the refugees will tax the resources of the American Red Cross to the limit, and President Coolidge has issued an urgent appeal to the citizens of United States to contribute to the funds of the society.

Similar appeals, as local listeners-in are aware, have been made from broadcasting stations in all parts of the United States, each of which has constituted itself a collecting agency for the Red Cross, and urges its invisible audience to subscribe.

Station after station "tuned-in" these nights in announcing a ready response, but more funds are still needed, and in view of the extent of the disaster and the magnitude of the relief work necessary, other Canadian centres might well follow the example of Niagara Falls.

There are no boundary lines when 200,000 people are homeless and destitute.

HOW CANADA FEELS ABOUT RECIPROCITY.

(From The New York Times.)

When the Canadian Prime Minister, Mr. Mackenzie King, spoke of the desire of his Government to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements with the United States he was not announcing a definite policy. He was merely disclosing an attitude and putting out a diplomatic "feeler." But Washington promptly cut that feeler off short. Unofficially but positively, the Coolidge administration let it be known that our Government is taking and will take no interest whatever in reciprocity with Canada. The subtle inference was that such a thing might lead to consideration of the protective tariff in other aspects, and that, of course, would be something too horrible for a Republican administration even to think of. In addition to the very cool reception which Prime Minister King's offer met in Washington, a prominent United States Senator from the West made haste to declare that he would never consent to any arrangement by which Canadian farm products should enter the United States without paying a good thumping duty for the privilege.

That this brusque treatment of the Canadian gesture gave offense beyond the border is undeniable. The Canadian Government has said nothing, but the Canadian press has said a good deal. The bluntest statement which has fallen under our eye is that made by the Vancouver Sun in its issue of April 6. Pointing out that Canada is a very large customer of the United States, it went on to say that international trade on such a scale has to be done today "on something approaching a reciprocal basis." It is therefore a problem even more urgent for the United States than it is for Canada to find some plan to "make it possible for Canadians to pay on an equitable trade basis for the goods Canadians are buying in the United States." Here comes the explicit threat:

"If the United States will not enter into a reciprocal trade agreement with Canada, there can be no alternative for Canadians but to put up a tariff barrier that will keep out of Canada all American manufactured goods that can be produced in Canada with some reasonable approximation to their cost.

"And if that does not give Canadians relief, it will be necessary to take the further step of placing such outgoing tariffs or embargoes on Canadian nickel, asbestos, pulpwood and other raw materials as will insure Canadians a reasonable living.

"If Canada has to, she can get along quite nicely entirely independent of the United States."

This may be dismissed as merely tall talk by a newspaper, but it indicates a situation and a peril which prudent statesmanship at Washington will not neglect. Anything like a trade war between Canada and the United States would be the height of absurdity, economically and industrially speaking. Yet it might be forced through the folly of officials on one side or the other. If Mr. Mackenzie King repeats the Canadian advance to our Government, the latter would do well to treat it politely, and not to reject it out of hand.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Even Agnes MacPhail would surely not lift a finger to save the youth nervy enough to appear in public in a pair of those Black Bottom trousers.

Chickens are going to be cheap this summer and autumn, according to market experts. "Nothing but blue skies from now on."

The Peterborough Police Department seems to be a training school for chief constables. John Brown, whose appointment as Chief of Police at Brockville was announced a day or two ago, is the third former local policeman to become a chief constable, the others being Chief Alex. Kidd at Belleville and Chief Dan. Boyd at Galt.

Although Ontario brewers and distillers will be unable to advertise, they are getting plenty of publicity out of the customs investigation.

Up to the present Tommy Church has not been mentioned as in the running for the Conservative Federal leadership. The Toronto member would win in a walk in a hand-shaking competition.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., April 27. Canadian Press.—Extreme dullness marked the export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday, there being no demand from foreign buyers.

A feature of the local cash grain market was the weaker feeling that developed in Canadian western oats and prices generally were reduced 1c to 1 1-2c per bushel, owing to the reduction in the spreads in the west.

The local and export trade in spring wheat flour was fair and prices were unchanged. Business in winter wheat flour was quiet, but values were steady.

A good trade was done in all lines of mill feed and the undertone was firm. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was moderate, and prices were unchanged.

Prices for all grades of eggs were well maintained under a steady demand. The recipts were 3483 cases.

Owing to the continued limited supplies of creamery butter coming forward, the undertone to the market was again strong and prices were advanced another 1-2c to 1c per pound. Ther was a good demand for all offerings. The jobbing market was also much stronger and the prices were marked up 2c per pound, with finest creamery butter selling at 44c per pound in solid packages, and at 45c per pound in one pound blocks. The receipts were 783 packages.

There were no developments in the market for cheese, business being still very quiet, but owing to the strength in butter the feeling was stronger and western grass-made No. 1 white and colored was quoted at 17 3-4c to 18c per pound. The receipts were 732 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, April 27. — Canadian Press. — Indications pointing to the likelihood of rapid progress for the spring seeding for both north and south of the Canadian line, helped to ease the market yesterday. The fluctuations in wheat were narrow, and the close irregular, 3-8c lower to 1-4c advance; with corn 1-4c off to 3-8c up; oats at a shade to 3-8c gain, and provisions showing a rise of 5 to 50c.

Corn was steadied by prospects that there would not be much of a movement of corn from rural sections until after the planting season is over.

CHICAGO CATTLE.

CHICAGO, April 27. — Canadian Press. — Hogs, 21,000; top $10.70; bulk better grade 150 to 200 lbs. $10.40 to $10.70; 210 to 240 pounds, $10.10 to $10.50; 250 to 300 pounds, $10 to $10.30; few good butchers, 320 pounds up, $9.85 to $10; most packing sows $8.70 to $9.10; most pigs $9.85 to $10.35.

WHY NOT COMPETE?

The Editor of The Examiner:

Can some one please tell me why Peterborough is not represented on the list of district contests being held this coming week in connection with the Toronto Star Oratorical contest?

Did we not have boys and girls right here in our local Collegiate compete for this?

If this is so, why not give them a chance to go on and compete with other districts and by so doing help to boost this fair city of ours.

A BOOSTER.

A FEW SUGGESTIONS FOR THE CLEAN UP CAMPAIGN

The Editor:

As regards the clean up campaign being conducted in our city, I would like to suggest to our Health authorities that our dressing rooms at the bathing beaches be thoroughly housecleaned before being opened for our children to use.

Also the lavatories at our city parks could stand a real clean up.

PREVENTING INFLUENZA

Influenza is an acute disorder which is most prevalent during the winter months. The atmospheric changes from year to year determine the severity of this disease. One year all the attacks of influenza will be very mild; while another winter they will be more severe.

Grip, la grippe and influenza are different names for the same ailment. At the start of an attack there will be a slight fever and an aching in the lower back. Finally different joints in the body will ache and a hacking cough develops. The urine is at the beginning very highly colored, which indicates the presence of a great deal of poison, which is being partially eliminated through the kidneys. Consequently, the bladder becomes irritated and acute cystitis frequently develops. The bronchial tubes are inflamed by the feverish breath and a cough, slight at first, soon develops into a hacking cough, but without much mucus for the first few days.

Influenza closely resembles acute rheumatic fever and one is often mistaken for the other. The distinguishing difference is in the absence of the cough in rheumatic fever.

There is no question but what influenza is brought on by two harmful conditions —first, auto-intoxication, and secondly enervation. It is impossible for any disease to develop in the body unless the system is self-poisoned by its own toxins. This is the common fundamental cause of all disease, so the one who has an "attack" of influenza is one whose system is burdened with effete toxic wastes, which the eliminative organs have not been able to throw out. In addition to this, any thing which produces enervation will weaken the body's resistance to disease. Late hours—mental overwork—and the nursing of destructive habits of thought may be cited as the principal causes of enervation.

If influenza is prevalent in your community, it is the better part of wisdom for you to start at once to get your body in such a fine state of health that you cannot develop this ailment which has taken its roll of so many lives in the past few years. Start by giving yourself a good bodily house cleaning. Stop all regular food for four or five days, and take a fruit fast, using some one kind of fruit three times daily in place of meals. You can get good results by using your choice of these fruits, oranges, grape fruit, grapes, pears, apples, pineapple or tomatoes. Take only one kind of fruit on any one day. For instance, if you use oranges for breakfast, you should also take oranges at noon and at night, on that day. The next day change to one of the other fruits, if you so desire. At the same time as you are taking the fruit fast, you must keep the bowels open by using one or two enemas daily. Begin to develop strength and endurance by exercising more with calisthenics and long walks. If you have been working long hours, cut the hours down to not more than eight hours, five days of the week; also take one afternoon off each week, besides an entire day on Sunday. Get out in the open air for an hour or two each day, and while taking long walks, practice deep breathing exercises. If you will follow this advice, you will be able to avoid an attack of influenza.

FAMOUS SINGERS AMONG CANADIANS

Many To Take Part in Folk Song and Handcraft Festival.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company is arranging a personally-conducted tour and sightseeing programme, in connection with the Canadian Folksong and Handicraft Festival, which will be held at the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec, on May 20th, 21st and 22nd.

This festival, arranged in order to visualize the close association between folksong and handicraft in the Province of Quebec, is held under the auspices of the National Museum of Canada, which is co-operating with the Canadian Pacific Railway in organizing this festival on a very comprehensive scale. A number of skilled weavers and spinners from the country districts will demonstrate the complete process of making the flax into thread and spinning or weaving homespun clothes, catalognes (rag carpets), hookrugs, etc. The ancient method of making the colored sashes or "ceintures flechees," as practised at L'Assumption, will also be demonstrated. All such work is done to the accompaniment of folksong, and the workers engaged are either accomplished singers themselves or are accompanied by such singers. There are several well-known women folksong singers of the province, who will be present and two famous fishermen singers, who sing as they mend their nets, are coming all the way from Ste. Anne des Monts, Gaspe, as well as others who are familiar with the songs of the canoemen and the shanties.

The children's rounds or "rondes enfantines" have also been organized, and there will be a series of concerts given with demonstrations from the concert platform of the use of this folksong music. Those who will take part include Rodolphe Plamondon, tenor, for many years with the Paris Opera, J. Campbell McInness, now of Toronto, formerly principal soloist with many of the great American orchestras, Madame Jeanne Dusseau, formerly with the Chicago Opera Company, Mdlle. Juliette Gaultier de la Verendrye, formerly with the Boston Opera and Charles Marchand, well-known chansonnier of Montreal.

Dr. Ernest MacMillan, director of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, Dr. Healy Willan, Oscar O'Brien of Montreal, and others, have composed harmonisations of melodies and arrangements for strings particularly for this Festival, and the famous Hart House Orchestra from Toronto will be present to interpret the music. One of the best-known of the French-Canadian choirs, the Chanteurs de Saint-Dominique of Quebec, will give choral renderings by various composers of some of the native folksongs. Those who attend the Festival will also have the opportunity of hearing the famous choir of the Basilica at Quebec, with its fine traditions of Gregorian music. A full choral musical High Mass will be sung on the morning of Saturday, May 21st, at eight o'clock.

BUSINESS STARTED AT CONFEDERATION

T. Fitzgerald Began Building Carriages Here In 1867.

In the year 1867, T. Fitzgerald and Company established in this city that business which later became known as the Peterborough Carriage Company. It was with a very small beginning, but in time this industry grew to large proportions and the Fitzgerald wheeled vehicles were known all over Ontario.

At the time when Mr. Fitzgerald started to build wagons and democrats there were three other makers in this town of Peterborough, William Metheral, John Doherty and John Douglas.

The early history of this district shows that there was a wheelwright in every small hamlet, but as time went on these men disappeared from business and the Peterborough Carriage Company began to expand. The expansion was slow, but it showed progress, and in time the three storey brick factory was erected at the corner of Water and Brock streets.

Mr. Fitzgerald was an expert in his line and gave to every piece of work his personal supervision and was one of the experienced, progressive and enterprising men of this city.

The last ten years of the nineteenth century and the first ten years of this century saw the day of the buggy, and in the manufacture of these the local company excelled. The Fitzgerald buggy was known all over the province for its strength and length of time it would stand the rough roads. The advent of the automobile saw this industry commence to wane, and in time it ceased operation altogether, for there was no demand for buggies, and the large implement manufacturers were more able to make the wagons and democrats that were required by the farmer.

Many carriage works in Ontario at this time commenced to manufacture automobiles. The McLaughlin Company, of Oshawa turned its attention to the car of that name and the Gray Carriage Company, of Chatham commenced to make the Gray-Dort automobile. The Fitzgerald company did not start the manufacture of automobiles, but ceased making buggies.

The old building did not cease to be an establishment for wheeled vehicles. Part of it was taken over by Vincent Eastwood Jr., as the Dodge service station, and the other part was a place of building bodies for trucks and other vehicles and doing repair work under the name of the old company. This spring Charles Brewer had this part entirely remodelled. New floors were put in, and it is now the Essex, Hudson and Reo service station.

The Fitzgerald Company moved to other quarters on McDonnel street.

THE WONDERFUL NEW AUTOMATIC

The Last Word in Musical Ingenuity—Astounding Achievement.

There is now being demonstrated at the music store of E. V. Warne, 325 George Street, the latest new achievement in musical ingenuity—the new Automatic Orthophonic, made only by the Victor Talking Machine Company of Canada. Already this marvellous instrument is attracting unusual attention. Only half a dozen of these machines are as yet on exhibit in Canada, and Mr. Warne was fortunate in being able to secure one of these Cabinets for demonstrating in his music store. Already it is attracting enthusiastic attention, the remarkable features of the instrument proving a drawing card, and is praised by all who have heard it.

The new Automatic changes its own records; plays twelve records without stopping, and has various other astonishing features which mark it as the greatest forward stride since the invention of the Orthophonic Victrola itself. You merely fill the "magazine," turn the starting lever—and listen to an hour of delightful music, without operating effort on your part!

The mechanism is almost human. It puts the record on the turntable—plays it—takes it off—places it in a drawer—puts on the next record—and so on, through twelve selections. Plays a complete symphony straight through. Furnishes dance music without anyone having to stop and change records.

Continuous music by the world's foremost artists while you dine . . . at bridge parties . . . for dancing . . . for programs of ANY nature, planned in advance. You simply relax—and enjoy! Music of your own choosing, furnished by the new famous Orthophonic Victrola—the instrument that has astounded musicians and music lovers the world over.

See it work, and marvel at modern inventive skill! Hear it play, and thrill to its tonal realism. Go to E. V. Warne's, the local dealer, any time today or thereafter—the sooner the better. 1d, 99, 1023

SILLS HAS ANOTHER STRONG MAN'S ROLE

Virile roles that prove the quality of a real man have fallen to the lot of Milton Sills' naturally, because of his own character and appearance. He is a powerful man with a powerful mentality and both have been brought to play in his First National Pictures, the latest of which is called "The Sea Tiger" will be seen at the Capitol theatre tomorrow.

In this film Sills is a fisherman, a lowly occupation perhaps, but one demanding a maximum of courage to fight the stormy seas off the Canary Islands where the story is laid. He does a tremendous piece of acting and his work throughout is characterized by its vividness. Mary Astor is his leading woman and John Francis Dillon directed the picture.

Carey Wilson, who adapted the story by Mary Heaton Vorse, also produced it for First National.

As an added attraction to "The Sea Tiger", the management of the Capitol are pleased to announce a three day showing of Charlie Chaplin in a reprint of his greatest picture, "Shoulder Arms". This big double bill is offered at regular Capitol prices.

"SCARLET LETTER" A MAGNET FOR FANS

Heart-Stirring Film Starring Lillian Gish Has Wide Appeal

Crowded houses are greeting every showing of "The Scarlet Letter," Lillian Gish's latest starring vehicle at the Regent Theatre, where the elaborate production of Nathaniel Hawthorne's dramatic tale is being hailed as one of the remarkable picture successes of the season.

The story features Miss Gish in the tragic role of a Puritan woman, who, to shield from the intolerance of the Puritans the man she loves, wears a letter of shame on her breast throughout a lifetime. It affords the famous star of "The Birth of a Nation," "The White Sister" and "La Boheme," one of the most appealing and heart-gripping roles in her entire career.

Lars Hanson, famous Swedish star, makes his American debut in the new picture as Miss Gish's leading man, and Henry B. Walthall, the "Little Colonel" of "The Birth of a Nation," is playing with Miss Gish for the first time since that memorable production.

Victor Seastrom directed the play, produced on a lavish scale at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, with hundreds of people in the powerful scene in the village market-place.

The cast includes Karl Dane of "Big Parade" fame; William H. Tooker, Marcelle Corday, Jules Cowles, Fred Herzog, Joyce Coad, James A. Marcus and other well-known players.

A complete replica of the first Puritan settlement in America was constructed for the massive presentation of the famous classic. It is Miss Gish's first picture since her big success in "La Boheme."

OUTLINE OF SCIENCE — CLXV—The Typewriter. — by MAX HAHN

INVENTIONS SOMETIMES CHANGE THE LIFE OF A NATION. IN THE LAST 50 YEARS THE TYPEWRITER HAS GIVEN THOUSANDS OF WOMEN A PLACE IN THE BUSINESS WORLD. BEFORE THE DAYS OF THE TYPEWRITER THERE WERE FEW WOMEN IN BUSINESS.

THE BUSINESS WORLD WAS SLOW TO ADOPT THE TYPEWRITER. ONE REASON WAS THAT THE EARLY MACHINES PRINTED ONLY CAPITAL LETTERS. ANOTHER WAS THE MACHINES QUICKLY GOT OUT OF ORDER. BUT SOON COURT REPORTERS BEGAN TO USE THE WRITING MACHINES FOR RECORDING THE TESTIMONY THEY HAD COPIED DURING COURT.

IT IS EASY TO SEE WHY LAWYERS WERE THE NEXT TO BE CONVERTED TO THE TYPE MACHINES. LAWYERS, THROUGH THEIR CONTACT WITH COURT STENOGRAPHERS, NOTED HOW MUCH MORE TYPEWRITERS ACCOMPLISHED. SOON EACH LAW OFFICE HAD A TYPEWRITER.

FROM THE LAW OFFICE THE TYPEWRITER HAS SPREAD TO ALMOST EVERY BUSINESS. MANY EXPLORERS AND NEWSPAPER MEN CARRY SMALL TYPEWRITERS WITH THEM ON THEIR TRAVELS.

Plan Your Vacation in British Columbia

Noted travellers have stated that in British Columbia, Canada possesses the greatest playground in the world. Mt. Robson, Mt. Columbia, Mt. Assiniboine, and Mt. Goodsir, are but a few of the noted peaks whose snow-capped summits pierce the sky at heights ranging from 10,000 to 13,700 feet. You can enjoy days motoring over the 17,500 miles of magnificent scenic highways. There are game fish in streams, lake and sea, which bring to British Columbia the world's most noted anglers each year; there is big game hunting for grizzly, moose, caribou, and mountain sheep and goat; there are inexpensive trips in luxurious steamers amid scenic grandeur that is only rivalled, but not excelled, by Norway's fjords.

A land endowed by nature with rich and varied resources that ensure and stabilize the prosperity of its citizens. So vast in its dimensions—larger than the states of Washington, Oregon and California, combined—that it is an empire within itself. Capable of sustaining a population of twenty million, it has today but five hundred and sixty thousand souls. Truly the Land of Opportunity!

Where Two-Thirds of the People Live—

British Columbia borders on the Pacific, where two-thirds of the human race live. These Far Eastern people are awakening with new life and enterprise, acquiring new standards of living, affording a rapidly growing market for the rich natural resources of this province. And the opening of the Panama Canal made the harbors of British Columbia—open all year—accessible to ships that ply the seven seas.

The Pacific Era Has Dawned—

The records of the Dominion Department of Labor show that British Columbia had 1,047 industries in 1918. The number has been increased to 4,139 with an annual payroll of $159,959,820—an increase of three hundred per cent. in eight years. British Columbia is rapidly coming to the forefront as one of the world's greatest industrial centres.

The Essentials—

Cheap power is the first essential of industrial growth. British Columbia is blessed with unlimited water power. As a result of the present rate of growth, one company has planned an expenditure for this purpose alone of $38,000,000. Climate, through its relation to health and energy is considered one of the essentials of large industrial growth. British Columbia, with the least fluctuation of temperature, ensures a higher degree of worker efficiency than any area on this continent. Is it to be wondered that Sir Campbell Stuart, director of the London Times, says:

"It seems to me that nature has been very good to British Columbia and has placed resources here to make it a great manufacturing province."

The World Looks to British Columbia—

The greatest of these natural resources is timber. One-fifth of the world's timber is in the British Empire and approximately forty-seven per cent. of the Empire's commercial timber stands in British Columbia. This timber consists of Douglas fir, spruce, pine, red cedar and hemlock—the finest types of softwoods. It is significant that only one-third of the world's timber is softwood and the demand for softwood is four times as great as that for hardwood. The world must look to British Columbia for the high-grade softwood supplies of the future. That this world-wide demand has arrived; is shown in the increase of one hundred and sixty per cent. in British Columbia's lumber industry in the last ten years. Today ships carry British Columbia lumber over the seven seas to thirty countries. The cut in 1926 produced an output valued at $82,000,000, yet the annual growth of timber in British Columbia forests is greater than the annual depletion for commercial purposes.

Fertile Farms—

British Columbia's second industry is agriculture—mixed-farming, dairying, poultry-raising, fruit-growing, livestock and fur-farming. Only 475,000 acres in this vast domain are under cultivation. There remain approximately fifteen million acres of arable lands awaiting the plow. Yet these few acres under cultivation produced wealth totalling $70,000,000 in 1926. This was a return of $145 per acre, or an average of $3,185 for each of the 21,973 families who farm in British Columbia. This is 21.7 per cent. higher than the average income of Canadian farmers.

Rich in Minerals—

Mining engineers state that British Columbia is the most highly mineralized area on the North American continent. Only fifty per cent. of the mineral lands have been prospected, yet British Columbia produced $67,718,400 in mineral wealth in 1926. This is the more remarkable when you realize that lode mining has only been in the process of development for about thirty-five years. British Columbia is the world's fourth largest producer of lead; third largest in zinc. It is Canada's largest producer of copper and ranks first in the production of silver, and second in gold.

Prolific Fishing Areas—

The fishing area off the British Columbia coast is the most prolific on the continent. For the fourteenth successive year, British Columbia has produced more fish than any other province in Canada. The total value of British Columbia's fish production in 1926 was $25,000,000. This fish has world wide distribution and is now being sold in seventy countries.

We Invite You—

We invite you to spend your vacation in British Columbia. We want you to see for yourself this Land of Opportunity. We promise that it will be the most memorable vacation of your lifetime! Mail coupon for detailed information.

CANADA'S EVERGREEN PLAYGROUND!

PRESBYTERIAL W. M. S. HOLDS BIG MEETING

Over 250 Delegates Present at Second Annual Gathering.

AT BOWMANVILLE.

Reports Show Much Work Done —Allocation For Year Raised.

MILLBROOK, April 27. — The second annual meeting of the Cobourg Presbyterial Women's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada was held in Trinity Church, Bowmanville, on April 26th, with over 250 registered delegates in attendance.

The executive and nominating committees met on Monday evening, at 7.30, practically a full quota of members being present, and prepared their slate of recommendations, list of officers, etc., ready to present to the convention on the next day.

In spite of unfavorable weather the church was fairly well filled when the morning session opened at 9.30 a.m., the president, Mrs. J. W. Roberts, of Grafton, in the chair. The initial devotional period was in charge of Mrs. A. L. Nichols, Mrs. Crozier, and Mrs. Adams.

Appointment of committees included the following: Courtesy committe, Mesdames (Rev.) H. W. Foley, Mrs. Barbour and Mrs. Bunting; Finance committee, Mesdames W. M. Pringle, J. F. Mears, J. Crozier and G. Chase; Nominating committe, Mrs. E. B. Cooke (Newcastle), Mrs. E. Martyn, (Newcastle), Mrs. T. Todd (Bowmanville), Mrs. J. E. Young (Oshawa), and Mrs. G. Hammond, (Campbellford.) The first three are presidents of Auxiliaries, and the other two members of the executive, with Mrs. Hammond acting as convenor.

The nominating committee which served the previous year, was Mrs. G. Jackson (Port Perry), Mrs. F. E. Hare, (Oshawa), Mrs. J. S. I. Wilson, (Brighton), Mrs. F. Wilson (Colborne), and Mrs. Andrew Haig, of Campbellford.

Mrs. Wagar and Mrs. W. W. Jones wer appointed press reporters.

The formal address of welcome was given by Mrs. L. A. Tole, Trinity Church, Bowmanville, and greetings from sister societies were extended by Mrs. Hugh Cameron, of St. Andrew's Auxiliary and Mrs. Alexander of St. John's Angliran Auxiliary. Mrs. W. J. Clarke of Pickering, replied.

Reports Presented.

The reports of secretaries were full of interest, Mrs. J. E. Young explaining that 1411 copies of the Missionary Monthly are taken by 74 Auxiliaries in the Presbyterial, and Mrs. W. H. Johnston of Grafton, the Strangers' Secretary, telling that besides a great many other very helpful activities, 545 strangers, or New Canadians, had ben cared for during the year.

The Young Women's Auxiliary is a new department in the Missionary organization of the Presbytery, and the paper prepared by Mrs. (Rev.) J. S. I. Wilson, and read by Miss Solomon of Brighton, on the "Importance of the Y. W. Auxiliary and the Mission Circle," had many practical suggestions, and gave in detail the many ways in which these societies interest and hold the young people who have not yet graduated into the Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. D. O. Scott of Claremont, Children's Work Secretary, had the next paper on "Mission Bands," presenting many encouraging facts regarding the work with the boys and girls, the lack of leadership being a regrettable drawback. There are 50 mission bands in the Presbytery, six new ones last year, 12 using mite boxes, and 16 taking the Palm Branch. The membership in the 35 which reported to the secretary, is 1248, and the total contributions $1717; one band with only 15 members gave $168. Membership in mission bands is ten cents a year, and a life membership is $5. In the Baby bands the fee is also ten cents, and life membership $1. All children 5 years old and under, are eligible for members. Mrs. C. A. Chant, 201 Madison avenue, Toronto, supplies the cards, certificates, etc., for this organization.

Mrs. P. L. Juil, of Brooklyn, had charge of the Quiet Half Hour which closed the morning session.

The Women's Hospital Auxiliary of Bowmanville served dinner in the lecture room of St. Paul's United Church, the delegates thoroughly enjoying the excellent meal provided at noon, and again at the tea hour. Proceeds in aid of the hospital funds.

"In Memoriam" Service

The afternoon session opened promptly at 1.30 with an "In Memoriam" service conducted by Mrs. Daley, of Port Hope, and Mrs. Ashton, of Campbellford. Between twenty and thirty members have been called home during the year, the list of names, and the Auxiliary represented, being read by Mrs. Daley, while Mrs. Ashton chose her Scripture lesson from Revelation 21, and spoke briefly on the need of faith and faithfulness among those left to carry on the work.

Mrs. (Rev.) C. C. Washington, of Courtice, was called upon for her paper on "Mission aBnds," held over for lack of time from the morning session; the plan adopted on the Ebenezer circuit by which the mission band is held one afternoon a month in the public school building from 3 to 4 o'clock, by permission of the trustees, was detailed and showed how the problem of having this organization for the boys and girls may be solved when the children cannot conveniently come to the church.

"We have fifty-five of a membership, and usually an attendance of sixty-five," said the speaker with a smile: "the children are not compelled but invited to stay, and we have found a point of contact with some homes otherwise out of touch with religious services of any kind."

The Child in the Midst

"Jesus Christ put the child in the midst; some folk think they can improve on His plan, but the centuries have proved its absolute correctness. Children are sometimes put so far in the background that they experience a distinct loss physically, mentally and spiritually.

"There are two reasons for the wisdom of Jesus' placement of the child —one is that the homemakers should learn the importance of the proper study and training of the little ones in the home; and the second is because you and I need to learn to 'become like little children' to find our own place in the Kingdom."

Some of the things listed as working against those who would uplift childhood were: immorality; the liquor traffic, and homes where vice and sin reign. "The freedom of thought and life premitted in this day may become a great menace to our children, and one of the greatest things we have to work against today is the so-called Christian homes that are indifferent toward this training which is vital to their children's development. Parents could do so much to help.

"We are working for a better Canada. If we would mend the world we should mend ourselves, helping these little ones to become what we have failed to be. Money and lives will not be given without understanding, and a real heart interest. We need a Canada that will reach out to other nations with a healing touch because she is healed herself."

A closing appeal for leadership ended with the statement: "We have the very best material to work with. Aren't they worth the best we have to give?"

The Story of the Year

The corresponding secretary, Mrs. George Jackson, of Port Perry, called her report "the story of the year, which however in all its detail will never be read by us, but is tabulated in the Book of Life by the Recording Angel."

Mrs. Jackson felt that the blank page for 'Remarks' on the report form sent out had not been used sufficiently; some Auxiliaries did not mention whether their allocation had been reached or exceeded; or whether they had failed to meet the objective. The need of legible writing was also stressed.

Of the 74 Auxiliaries, Trinity Church, Bowmanville, has the largest membership with 18 enrolled, and it is also the best organized; King street church, Oshawa, had the most new life members, six having been added in the year; Smithfield and Simcoe street church, Oshawa, came next with five each; the largest contributors through the envelopes were Campbellford, King street, Oshawa, St. Andrew's church, Whitby, and Oshawa Simcoe street. More auxiliaries used the envelopes for offerings last year than ever before, twenty-two adopting this system.

There are 2,574 annual members in the 74 Auxiliaries; 718 life members; 226 associate helpers; 768 members in the Y.W. Auxiliaries and Circles; 111 members affiliated by C.G.I.T. groups; 1,248 in mission bands; a total of 5,656 enrolled in the 176 organizations.

Mrs. Jackson paid a deserved tribute to the work of Mrs. S. J. Sweetmon of Brighton, third vice-president of the Presbytery, who had helped in organizing 13 new societies in the year; two of the four new Auxiliaries, those at Mount Carmel and Morganston, were to her credit, the other two being at Cavan and Gore's Landing. Mrs. Sweetman had also brought into being 8 Baby Bands, and 4 Mission Circles. There were 32 new organizations in all in the twelve months.

Mrs. (Rev.) F. H. Howard of Millbrook gave a most helpful paper on "The Undeveloped Possibilities of Our Auxiliaries," urging the need of prayer, and the wonderful assistance the shut-in- members may give in this regard; "Keep them informed of the needs and progress of the work, so they may have a keen interest and pray definitely."

"Why undeveloped? Keeping the same officers in their positions too long may be one reason; the group system develops latent talent, provides a new leader each month, with others taking part, and the Missionary Monthly is good seed to sow. Circulate good missionary stories, have live public meetings, missions band entertainments, and request the Circle Girls to take charge of the little ones occasionally in a separate room, thus allowing the shut-in mothers to attend a meeting.

"Proper instruction and training will win our girls to respond to the call for missionary workers in some capacity; a right conception of the stewardship of time, funds, intellect, the work of hands and brains, with the reading of missionary literature, and this topic in our conversation at times, and prayer, example and teaching, will develop the possibilities which Auxiliary activity and opportunities open up."

Some beautiful examples of the work done in the Industrial Mission Schools in foreign countries were on sale at St. Paul's Church, and Miss Jameison brought this subject briefly before the convention. All profits go to the mission fields. The work was begun twenty-four years ago, and there are now seven stores, and forty depots.

Treasurer's Report

The treasurer, Mrs. W. M. Pringle of Whitby had a pleasant duty in presenting her report, the allocation of $20,000 having been exceeded and $21,188.05 raised. Expenses this year had to be taken out of this, hence the amount sent to the branch treasurer would be $20,870; this was deeply regretted, and after the excellent paper on "Systematic and Proportionate Giving," by Mrs. J. F. Mears, of Port Hope, Secretary of Christian Stewarship and Finance, Mrs. Ashton came to the platform and in a few moments, in answer to her appeal, the $130.00 necessary to make up the even $21,000 was raised either by personal subscriptions, or by amounts given by the different organizations represented at the convention. The entire gathering rose and sang the Doxology in gratitude for the generous response. The amount actually subscribed was $141.00.

Mrs. Pringle urged that the local treasurers fill out the report sheets accurately and in detail each time money is remitted to her; and put the name Auxiliary, Circle, or Band, etc., at the top—such a name as "Willing Workers" for instance is not sufficient without the address and designation mentioned. Send money by money order rather than bank draft as too often the exchange is omitted. Put only the life membership fees paid in during the year in that column, not the annual fees which such members usually pay each year.

Musical numbers at the afternoon session were a particularly enjoyable feature, including selections by the Kalon Quartette, from Oshawa, Mesdames Fry, Friend, Found, and Crozier, and a solo by Mrs. Annis, of Courtice.

Allocations Interesting.

The allocations for this year were of peculiar interest; they are: Belleville $18,000; Cobourg $17,200 (later accepted by a standing vote); Lindsay $15,000; Kingston $8,000; Renfrew $12,000. The year will be a nine months one as by the new regulations it will close in December; these amounts are three-quarters of the actual assessment which is the same as the year just closed.

A recommendation from the Grafton Auxiliary that the expenses be raised by a levy of ten cents per member for each Auxiliary was carried. It was also decided to have two of the eleven delegates to the Branch meeting chosen from the Young Women's Auxiliaries and Circles, Misses Solomon, of Brighton, and Cameron, of Cobourg, being later elected.

A banner for which the mission bands of the Presbytery will compete was decided upon, Mrs. Scott, of Claremont, arranging the standard of requirements and sending the list to each Band superintendent.

The president's address covered the work of the year in a most comprehensive manner, expressing gratitude and optimism, and urging the aim, "An Auxiliary in every church in the Presbytery, and every woman a member."

Officers Elected.

Mrs. Daley took charge of the election of officers, the list being: Honorary President, Mrs. Ballagh, Cobourg; President, Mrs. J. W. Roberts, Grafton; Vice-President, Mrs. J. T. Field, Cobourg; 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. J. W. Robins, Cobourg; 3rd Vice-President, Mrs. S. L. Tyrrel, Wooller; 4th Vice-President, Mrs. F. J. Maxwell, Oshawa; recording secretary, Mrs. G. Hammond, Campbellford; corresponding secretary, Mr. G. Jackson, Port Perry; treasurer, Mrs. W. M. Pringle, Whitby; Strangers; Secretary, Mrs. W. H. Johnston, Grafton; Church Stewardship Secretary, Mrs. J. F. Mears, Port Hope; Missionary Monthly Secretary, Mrs. J. E. Young, Oshawa; Young People's Secretary, Miss V. Spargo, Bowmanville; Literary Secretary, Miss A. Henwood, Port Hope; Supply Secretary, Mrs. J. McKinnon, Cobourg; Associate Helpers' Secretary, Mrs. J. F. Wilson, Colborne; Children's Work Secretary, Mrs. D. O. Scott, Claremont; Mrs. Harry Thompson, Whitby, was appointed assistant treasurer.

Rev. H. W. Foley, Fraserville, dismissed the gathering with the benediction.

Quite a number of delegates remained for the evening session at which Rev. J. U. Rollins, pastor of the convention church, was chairman.

After a prayer and praise service and an anthem by the choir, the mission band of St. Paul's church presented a very attractive pageant, "The Conquering Cross."

Interesting addresses, illustrative of work with which each is connected, were given by Miss Alice Jackson, formerly of Nelson House, whose subject was "The Need of Medical Work Among the Indians and Foreign Peoples," and by Miss S. Smythe, of All Peoples' Mission, Hamilton, who made it clear that the new Canadians are being reached and were responding splendidly to the help and instruction being given them.

Rev. Dr. Best, pastor of St. Paul's church, installed the new officers in their several stations.

The report of the Courtesy committee, presented by the convenor, Mrs. H. W. Foley, was a final item, and what had been a crowded, but most successful programme, was brought to a close with an appropriate hymn, and the benediction by the pastor.

SALVATION ARMY TEMPLE

"If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me."—Matt. 16, v. 24.

In all ages that still small voice has been calling to men to follow Him—men of the counting bench, fishermen, men of the plow. It is the desire of Christ that all men should follow Him. Today, that call is as clear and definite as ever. Those who did answer the call Christ sent out into the world to preach the Gospel—that which He had taught His disciples and they went and preached the pure, simple Gospel. The record, as read in the Acts of the Apostles, shows of the wonderful accomplishments of their preaching. They encountered the same enemy as you and I find true, that is, sin. You will remember that Paul on one occasion says, "When I would do good, evil is present with me." There is someone here tonight whose experience is exactly the same as that.

If we look through the history of the world and God's dealings with mankind, we find that God trusted the common men, the wonder of the accomplishment of the ordinary man when yielded to the hands and will of God. The Bible gives many references for instance, it was only a little boy, who ultimately slew the giant; it was the man following the plow upon whom the mantle of the prophet was to fall, for, when the chariot took up Elijah it was on Elisha that the mantle fell. And so we find it in these days, the ordinary individual becomes a powerful instrument in the hands of God. It is very evident in religious life and also in commercial life and in all spheres of life today.

With all that we have in life today—all that modern invention has given us, the fundamental sin is unchanged. Men are seeking pleasure all the time; there is a deplorable lack of home life—a wilful wandering from the things of God, but how are we to settle the problems. By committees of men, by laws, by plebiscites. No! We find that laws are frustrated on all hands. What is going to help you fight sin? Nothing but Jesus Christ—"Thou shalt call His name Jesus, for He shall save His people from their sin." There are testimonies here unnumberable that would tell of the accomplishments of His power, in the greatest sorrow of life; when deserted by friends and loved ones; when in the darkness it is the angel of the Lord that is present.

I am glad to add my testimony here tonight to a living Christ with the many here who have responded to the call. Will you not answer? "The harvest truly is great, and the labourers few." In order to follow Christ there must be the fulfillment of certain conditions. First, you must "deny", the principle of loyalty and service. Self-denial, a personal affair, possibly the cutting off of the right hand or the plucking out of an eye. It may not be something that you feel it is. Maybe the giving up of companions, choosing the fellowship of Jesus Christ or of worldly friends. For the other it is the giving up of worldly pleasures, for "if we deny Him He will deny us." Conquering oneself is greater than conquering a city. Paul said, "I can do all things through Him that strengtheus me." Everything must go and Christ be supreme. It costs to serve Christ, but it pays for, "If we lose our life for His sake and the Gospel, we shall gain all."

Secondly, there must be a "taking up of your cross." The reading says, "let him take up his cross and follow me." Not follow a denomination, a system, a theory, but follow Jesus Christ. He is the foundation of the Christian life, many follow with the mind, as a teacher; others with indignation; others because of sorrows of life—but it is a question of following all the way.

Do you want to be a real Christian? You may say I would, but for the many hypocrites of the day. Study Jesus Christ more, not individuals or denomination, but Him, and His life. Turn and listen to that voice which says—"If any man will follow me, let him DENY himself, take up his cross, and follow me."

"Love so amazing, so divine,
Shall have my soul, my life, my all."

MORE EVIDENCE FOR CONVICTION

Judge Can't Recommend Verdict of Guilty on Present Testimony.

TORONTO, April 27 (Canadian Press).—"If there is no more evidence against Mrs. Fisher, and I don't know what will be produced, I shall not recommend a conviction," declared Mr. Justice Riddell during the trial of Mrs. Myra Fisher and J. A. Vaughan in the Assize Court here today on a charge of murdering Albert Fisher, husband of the former, at Woburn on February 7. His Lordship, however, declined to accede to the requests of counsel for both the accused to take the case from the jury after hearing argument from both the Crown and defence counsel.

RUM SIGNALS.

ROCKLAND, Me., April 27.—Coast patrol forces with headquarters here have revealed an ingenious plan used by rum runners in this district. A brush fire, recently extinguished on Mount Schoodic, disclosed that rum runners were using the mountain as a signal centre to warn boats miles out in Frenchman's Bay. Neighbors had reported seeing the fires often at night and told the patrol forces.

A Benefactor

A public benefactor is one who helps people to be happy. Such a man was Dr. R. V. Pierce.

It is impossible to be happy if you are suffering—in pain or distress—ill. To restore health and strength to ailing people was Dr. Pierce's mission. As a skilled physician, an honored citizen, Dr. Pierce was known far and near for integrity and fair dealing. His phenomenal success was due to the unquestioned purity of his medicines.

Women in every walk of life today say Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has relieved them of nervousness, weakness and kindred ills. It is a reliable medicine made from roots and herbs, sold by druggists, in both fluid and tablets. Send 10c for trial pkg. tablets to Dr. Pierce's Laboratory, Bridgeburg, Ont.

USE OF "DOCTOR" LIMITED BY LAW

Judge Finds That Osteopaths and Chiropractors Can't Use Title.

TORONTO April 27 (Canadian Press).—Osteopaths and chiropractors are debarred from using the word "Doctor" as an occupational designation relating to the treatment of human ailments in a decision handed down today by Mr. Justice Middleton on a stated case submitted by Magistrate J. SYNOPSIS

Bob Ward, college student, gets work as a dancing partner for rich women in a New Jersey roadhouse. There he meets the prettiest, sweetest girl he has ever laid eyes on—Sally Smith, the cigarette girl. Reciprocating his interest, she warns him against the mysterious and beautiful Mrs. Hammond, habitue of the Inn, who finds her "thrill" in "hunting" Bob for her lovenest apartment. Mrs. Smith, meeting Bob, is hostile; favoring Mannion, a rich suitor. Mrs. Hammond tells Bob she frequents the Inn only as a writer secretly in search of color.

CHAPTER XII—Continued

Bob was quite overwhelmed by Mrs. Hammond's long explanation of her "playing"; and flattered, of course, at the apparent extent of her interest and trust in him.

"It's nice of you, Delia, to tell me all this," he said earnestly.

"I did so because I like you; because I know your talents, your mind, are much above the ordinary," she smiled.

During all this conversation they had been alternately dancing and resting at Mrs. Hammond's table. Bob had the feeling that a great load had been lifted from his chest. That a most wonderful thing had happened to him. He believed Mrs. Hammond implicitly. There could, indeed, be small grounds to doubt the sincerity in her low-pitched voice, in her anxious manner. It surely was a grand thing for him to have found so influential a friend. It was lucky he had not credited too much the catty quips of the women about Mrs. Hammond; the wisecracks of his chums. Delia Hammond was far and away too good to be spoken of in the same breath as most of the people around here.

Excepting Sally, of course. Enraptured though he was by the revelations of Mrs. Hammond, Bob had not neglected to pay constant tribute to pretty little Sally, in the way of admiring smiles, caressing smiles, all sorts of smiles, and, now and again when the chance offered in passing, whispered words of endearment.

"Please be sure to explain to Bob!"

Mrs. Hammond had observed these last things with a beautifully modulated smile masking the hatred in her heart; the frustrated, longing, passion in her blood. She had even essayed a complimentary word or two about Sally. That was part of her scheme.

There was also another part of her scheme that struck from an unseen, unsuspected angle. Acting upon secret instructions from Mrs. Hammond, the all-wise Madame Leonine, about an hour before the usual closing time, called Sally to her.

"Listen, honey," she said, "Mazie Revere is throwing a party tonight, see, and I want you to go to her house for me right away with a message. That's a dear. I'll make it square with you—"

"But," protested Sally, "I've a date to ride home with Bob Ward."

"Oh, Bob won't mind when he knows you're doing an errand for me. I'll see Bob after this dance is over, and explain to him. Leave Bob to me, honey. I'll set him straight. But you've got to hurry, honey; Mazie is waiting. Please, run right along."

Madame Leonine had a way with her; shy little Sally Smith was quite overridden by the aggressiveness of her employer, and before she knew it was bundled off on her way to Mazie's. She tried to catch Bob's eye before she had been hustled into the dressing room willy nilly, by the Madame; but Bob was dancing. Departing through the side door, she had not had another chance to see him.

"Please be sure to explain to Bob!" Sally cautioned the Madame, in leaving.

"I will!" Madame Leonine promised easily.

Then Sally was gone. Bob missed her quaint figure from among the crowded tables presently, but thought nothing of it for the time being.

Another dance started.

"Bob," said Mrs. Hammond suddenly, "I've been busily thinking over ways and means to help you best, according to the sort of help I can give. I can't very well explain it to you now. You really must ride home with me tonight. I can go over it with you on the way."

"Sorry, Delia, really I am, but I've a date to take Sally Smith home. You wouldn't want me to run out on that, would you?"

"I'll be disappointed if you don't place your future above such silly little things as a date with Sally Smith, Bob!" she said earnestly, and in such a reproachful way that Bob felt not a little sheepish.

"It isn't that I put the date ahead of more serious things," he tried to explain, but without even convincing himself, "but I hate to break appointments."

Mrs. Hammond said nothing to that; but just contrived to look inwardly disappointed and impatient. Bob felt very dumb and guilty.

After the dance, he excused himself to Mrs. Hammond and went in search of Sally. A brief glimpse of her dear face would reassure him in his course. Her absence had become noticeable. He looked for her unavailingly. He questioned Freddy and Arch. No; they had not seen her. He anxiously sought out Madame Leonine, who said, with her mechanical and frozen sort of smile:

"Sally? Oh, Sally left a little while ago, Bob. Said she had to get home early. Date or something."

"Did—did she leave any message for me?". Bob was hurt.

"No, Bob!"

Off in the gaudily embowered orchestra platform, the jazzy strains of the last dance were beginning. Bob hurried to Mrs. Hammond.

"Delia," he said as they danced away upon the glassy boards, "I'll ride home with you tonight, if you still want me to!"

CHAPTER XIII

They were in the cozy interior of Mrs. Hammond's imported limousine: Bob's strong, heavy young body sunken luxuriously into seat pillows of a softness and beauty that had never been more than a remote fancy to him heretofore; Mrs. Hammond's aristocratic figure gracefully disposed, with crossed legs that subtly displayed an exquisite ankle and calf, and—just as subtly!—modestly covered the knee.

She rode in that gorgeous coach of wealth as one to the purple manner born; as Cleopatra of old must have sat upon her Nile barge.

Bob rode unbelievingly—as one to the bus and subway born!

The chauffeur was shut off from them by a thick glass partition. This chauffeur, anyway, Bob noted, was an automaton, a Robot, and hardly a thinking or interested human being. He was a perfect chauffeur.

Now and then, when the exigencies of traffic or road conditions were too much for even the marvelous springs of this marvelous car to take up entirely, Mrs. Hammond would cleverly manage enough of a sway so that she could accidentally brush Bob's hand, or arm, or shoulder. In each of those thrilling momentary contacts she lived a lifetime. It was genuinely difficult to control her impulses, her fevers, now that she was so intimately situated with her big boy prey. He was her Adonis, and she wanted to be Venus. But Venus was a crude and vulgar creature compared to Mrs. Hammond. Venus had no self-control. Mrs. Hammond had magnificent self-control.

Inwardly she reveled in her thrill. Outwardly she sat serene and rather haughty.

The great car fled noiselessly, like a chariot on air, through the Palisade hinterland, and later threaded pantherlike through the jungle of Manhattan's traffic.

Sometime during the trip across the Fort Lee Ferry, Mrs. Hammond had diffidently broached the subject which Bob was dying to hear, though from sheer politeness he had foreborne to question her.

"It's awfully hard for me to talk this over with a chap like you, Bob, for several reasons. In the first place, your inexperience with life no doubt makes you suspicious of all women; and in the second place, I am sure that the people at the Palisado Inn have poisoned your mind against me—" she said softly.

"No one can poison my mind against you, Delia," he interrupted with the hot loyalty of youth. "I think you're a square shooter, and that's all that counts!"

Mrs. Hammond smiled to herself to see how easily he had stepped into the trap of her pre-alibi.

RUSSIAN GIRLS TOBE TRAINED FOR WAR WORK

Soviet Commissar Says They Are Integral Part of Defence Forces.

PREPARE INDUSTRIES.

Peace Hangs By a Hair, He Says, But Will Hang For Years.

MOSCOW, April 27. — (United Press.)—Flappers will be prepared to do their bit and then some if Soviet Russia ever goes to war.

The government plans to rivet its attention on training girls for their part of the national defence, Clemence Veroshilov, people's commissiar for war, told the All Union Congress of Soviets to-day.

Young women, he said, are an integral part of the defence as are young men.

"The militarization of our population is only beginning," he said. "It is not yet effecting the masses. We must prepare to put industry on a war footing if it becomes necessary, as the United States and other nations are doing."

Peace "hangs by a hair ,but probably will continue to hang for many years," he added.

After years of unceasing experiments three British scientists have succeeded in obtaining moving X-ray photographs of the human body.

WOMAN SAVES TWO FAMILIES

Rescues Her Own Children and Awakens Neighbors in Burning House.

ALL HOMELESS NOW.

TORONTO, April 26 (Canadian Press) — Awakened early to-day by the glare of her house on fire, Mrs. John Aitken roused her husband and two children who were sleeping on the first floor, then plunged up the smoke filled stairs to rescue two other children who were asleep on the top floor, receiving severe burns in doing so. Her husband rescued the other two children.

Mrs. Aitken's screams awakened the family of Thomas Cotton in the adjoining apartments who escaped via an eavestrough ledge with the help of firemen. Both families, three adults and six children, were rendered homeless by the fire.

NEW RECTOR OF CAMPBELLORD CHURCH IS SOLEMNLY INDUCTED

Rev. N. Clarke Wallace, of Toronto, Receives Church Keys.

AND BISHOP'S MANDATE.

Ven. Archdeacon Davidson Officiated at Impressive Ceremony.

(By an Examiner Reporter.)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 27.—The spiritual welfare of the parish of Campbellford was formally entrusted to Rev. Nathaniel Clarke Wallace with his induction into the rectorship of Christ Church here last night by Ven. Archdeacon J. C. Davidson, representing His Lordship Bishop Sweney of Toronto. Assisting Archdeacon Davidson were Rural Dean J. T. O'Connor-Fenton of Norwood, Canon Broughall of Grace Church on the Hill, Toronto, who preached the induction sermon; Rev. Dr. Blagrave of Peterborough, who read the lesson; Rev. C. E. Clarke of Christ Church, Belleville and formerly pastor in Campbellford, who conducted the preliminary part of the service; Rev. J. Lyons of St. Thomas' Church, Belleville, who read the Bishop's license to the young incumbent, and Rev. J. D. Paterson of Peterborough.

The ceremony was impressively solemn in its religious and ecclesiastical significance, and just as impressively simply in its central incidents and symbolism such as the proclamation of the Bishop's mandate and license, the new minister's avowal of assent, and also in the delivery to him of the keys of the church by the Wardens, John M. Bygott and Charles Bonnycastle. And the devotional spirit was accentuated by the prayerful assistance of the congregation and the choir and the hymnal accompaniment of the organist, Miss Gertrude Maynard.

After the recital of the prescribed invocation, the Bishop's commission was read by Rural Dean O'Connor-Fenton, and his letter of license was read by Rev. Mr. Lyons. The Bishop's authorization of induction as pronounced by Archdeacon Davidson was as follows: "By virtue of the mandate of the Bishop I do now induct you into the real, actual and corporal possession of this church with all the rights, privileges and emoluments thereto belonging."

Rector Receives Keys

And in presenting the keys of the church, Mr. Bonnycastle addressed Rev. Mr. Wallace as follows: "On behalf of this parish, and in obedience to the mandate of the Bishop of this diocese, I present to you the keys of this church, in token that we acknowledge you as the lawful incumbent of this parish."

Rev. Mr. Wallace replied: "I receive these keys at your hands as the pledge of your recognition of me as your appointed Minister." To which Archdeacon Davidson added: "The Lord preserve thy going out and thy coming in, from this time forth, for evermore."

The rector of Christ Church was then conducted to his accustomed seat by Archdeacon Davidson, Rev. O'Connor-Fenton and the Wardens.

Later in the ceremony Rev. Mr. Wallace received from the officiating ministers admonitions respecting his diligence in administering baptism, in public prayer, in the reading of the Gospel, in preaching and finally in celebrating Holy Communion.

At the baptismal font Rural-Dean O'Connor-Fenton took up the ritual, quoting from Saint Matthew: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

Followed Archdeacon Davidson: 'It is the duty of the Minister frequently to admonish the people that they defer not the baptism of their children; and diligently to seek out and bring any unbaptized persons in the parish to the holy sacrament of Baptism; and to catechize and prepare for Confirmation by the Bishop, those who have been baptized."

Rev. Mr. Wallace replied: "I will so do, the Lord being my helper."

The People's Duty.

The other charges were given in detail in similar manner, and finally Archdeacon Davidson made an appeal to the people as follow: "It is the duty of the people to afford to their Minister at all times all needful help and encouragement in his work, and to give of their substance to his support; so that, being free from wordly anxieties, he may devote himself wholly to the preaching of God's Word and the ministration of the Sacrament. Therefore, I charge and exhort you, Brethren and Churchwardens of this parish, to pray continually for this your Minister, who is set over you in the Lord, and to help him forward in all the duties of his calling. Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ."

The Induction Sermon.

Rev. Canon Broughall, pastor of Grace Church, Toronto, of which the Rev. Mr. Wallace was curate prior to his appointment to Campbellford, prefaced his sermon with a personal reference to the new minister, whom, he said, he had learned to love as a very dear friend in their association in the work of the church in Toronto.

Canon Broughall spoke on the text from Saint Mark: "Ye seek Jesus, which was crucified; He is risen; He is not here. He goeth before you into Galilee." In the angel's tidings of the resurrection to the women who approached the sepulchre in which Jesus had been laid a few days previously all their doubts were swept away and their sorrow was turned to joy. They had been wondering how they would roll back the stone from the door of the tomb. The words of the angel was the pledge of all Jesus had been to them. He had not failed them. He had proved Himself Lord and Master. He had fulfilled their highest aspirations and hopes by His victory over death.

"By His resurrection He proved Himself the Son of God, and soon they all came to know it. The disciples had forsaken Him and fled. On the night of the crucifixion they had deserted Him and fled to the four winds. They came together in secret in an upper room because of their fear of their enemies. Yet a little while after the resurrection, especially after the spirit of God had come upon them, they are altogether changed. They are full of courage. They don't seem to care what they do so long as they obey God. They were forbidden to preach, yet they felt they ought to obey God rather than man, and they continued to preach His word in spite of the sufferings they faced and endured even unto death.

Passing from the theme of Easter to the induction service, Canon Broughall said it was designed to emphasize the awful responsibility undertaken by the ministers of God. Men, in themselves and without other help were not fit for the task. They set themselves to it because they felt the call to God and felt the power of the risen Christ to use whatever gifts He has given some men to make the Gospel effective in the hearts and lives of mankind. That was true, not only of the ministry but of the whole Church.

"We don't gather together because we like the society and companionship of others; we are not carrying on just a society, but because we feel we are fulfilling the purpose of God in this world."

"This faith should help us to greater triumphs. It should encourage us to uplift the whole world. We haven't done so yet, but we can go on trying because we have the power of the risen Lord to help us to higher things."

"We should feel that He has laid upon our shoulders a work which we are unfit to take of ourselves, and we should feel compelled by some commanding impulse to do our best for God's purpose and not for our own, and that in it we have the whole power of God.

"It is in that faith your new Rector must work among you, not relying on human gifts, and he has them, but as something entrusted to him by God."

After the induction service a congregational reception was held at the parish hall. A feature of that social intercourse was Mayor Kingston's cordial welcome to Rev. Mr. Wallace to Campbellford.

The new Rector, of Christ church, is a war veteran, having served in France and is at present chaplain of the Governor-General's Body Guards, Toronto, from whom he received a telegram yesterday wishing him every happiness and success in his responsibility as the incumbent of the parish of Campbellford.

HELPS young TEETH to be STRONG and WHITE

Good teeth in children are an important safe-guard to health. Sound, healthy gums are the first requirement of good teeth.

This should be in the forefront of every mother's thought in planning meals.

Turn often to Quaker Puffed Wheat and your child will become your ally in the selection of wholesome foods.

The nutlike flavour of the whole grain is a delight. The crunchy crispness promotes mastication and thus healthy, active gums. The gentle roughage of these fairy grains polishes the tiny teeth.

All the mineral salts . . . which build bone and teeth and are a tonic to the blood . . . are retained in Puffed Wheat, as well as all the bran.

Very easily digested . . . for puffing the grains at extreme heat has broken down all the starch cells. The wholesome nutlike flavour turns children to them gladly when appetite fails for other food.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

Although it was nearly one o'clock—past the normal hour for adjournment for lunch—neither the jury nor the audience seemed restive on account of hunger. Banning, flushed with pride at the sensation which his witness' testimony had created, went on with the examination of the farmer, Jefferson Anderson:

"Now, Mr. Anderson, I want you to try to remember anything else that you overheard, and tell this jury exactly what it was!"

"Well," the farmer considered, scraping his chin thoughtfully with a work-roughened forefinger, "I heard her yell out, 'You vile thing! Stop it! Don't tell me any more!' And little bit later she was crying hard, real loud, and she screamed, 'I'm going home! I won't live wit' you'?"

"Yes, yes, Mr. Anderson. And did you hear anything else?" Banning asked exultantly.

"Well, yes, I did—once," Anderson answered, his dull grey eyes lighting up. "I heard the lady say something like this—'To think I got rid of Ralph Cluny for a thing like you'?"

Cherry grasped at Churchill's coat-sleeve, her white face suddenly aflame with color. The lawyer listened attentively, nodding as Cherry whispered breathlessly.

Banning's voice, as he put his next question, was loud and triumphant:

"You say the defendant said 'something like this—'To think I got rid of Ralph Cluny for a thing like you!' Now, Mr. Anderson, remember you are on oath. Are those the actual words of the defendant, as nearly as you can remember them?"

"Yes, they are. That's what she said. I said to my wife, 'Here's pretty howdy-do—'"

"Never mind what you said to your wife, Anderson," Banning smiled. "Now, Mr. Anderson, can you remember anything else that you overheard that night, anything said either by the man or the woman occupying your spare room?"

"Wil, the man didn't talk as loud as the lady," Anderson grinned. "But I heard him say once or twice, or maybe more, 'Don't be a little fool!' and 'We're married now, and you're going to make the best of it!' And once he yelled out at her, 'Shut up! You're making enough noise to wake up the dead!'"

"Very well, Mr. Anderson. Now go on with your story. When did you and your wife get up?"

"I got up at half past six and made a fire in the kitchen range, and then went out to do my chores—milking and feeding. When I got in from milking, my wife was cooking breakfast."

"Had Mr. and Mrs. Wiley appeared by that time?" Banning prompted.

"No, sir. Me and the wife had our breakfast about 7:15, and it was about a quarter of eight when the man—Wiley—come out of their bedroom and asked for hot water for shaving and washing up. He said him and his wife would have breakfast in a few minutes and then go on their way. Wiley said they was bound for Chicago on their honeymoon, was going to drive through, if the weather wasn't too bad. My wife give him a kettle of hot water and he went back into the spare room, and about ten minutes later him and his new wife come into the kitchen—"

"Did they look like a happily married young couple, in love with each other?" Banning persisted.

"Far from it," the farmer answered positively.

Before Banning could put another question to his witness, Judge Grimshaw announced an adjournment for lunch. Just as Cherry was led away, she flung her arms about Faith's neck, and whispered brokenly:

"He's got it in for me, Faith! I'm scared, I'm scared! But you know I didn't do it, don't you?"

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

White and purple handkerchief with purple border and initial matches the purple alligator purse and purple violet boutonniere worn with a beige frock.

It is not enough to be sure that your handkerchief is perfectly fresh and of fine quality. Besides this it must suit the occasion and the dress with which it is carried. It is better to have a handkerchief a little less fine than to have one that gives a discordant note to one's costume. It is in the careful attention to such details that the woman of taste shows distinction.

Here at least is a way of adding to one's well-dressed appearance without going to any extra expense because it costs no more to carry a handkerchief that suits the costume than one that doesn't. All it takes is the exercise of that little attention to details in dress that is sometimes said to be natural to every really womanly woman. It is an attention to details that is less attractive when we see it markedly developed in a man. There is usually something foppish—or at least we usually assume that there is—about the man who takes pains to wear a gray-bordered linen handkerchief when he wears gray socks and a gray cravat or unerringly chooses a blue-bordered handkerchief when he wears other blue accessories.

The other day Olga Petrova wore a gray two-piece costume with a gray felt hat white blouse gray shoes and stockings and a white gardenia. Then to give that final touch of exquisiteness she carried a plain white linen handkerchief with a gray border. If she had carried a bright figured handkerchief or a dainty lace-edged handkerchief—or any sort of handkerchief besides the one she did carry—her appearance would never have been so perfectly attractive.

City women sometimes speak of women from out of town as looking provincial—or suburban. Why is it that they call "provincial"—"suburban?" Stores in smaller towns offer very often precisely the same frocks materials and accessories as the stores in the large cities—and they have new fashions practically as soon. The suburban woman often buys her clothes and accessories at the same shops as the women of the city.

Often the women who use these adjectives have nothing at all on which to base their remarks. If there is any difference in the way women of the large cities and women from small communities dress it is not so much in what they wear as in how they wear it. The suburban woman is more apt to distinguish her every-day clothes from her best clothes—when she goes to the city she sometimes makes it a little too obvious that she is dressed in her best and wears her clothes with a certain caution. But this distinction cannot always be found.

THURSDAY, APRIL 28, 1927

Benefic planets dominate in influence today according to astrology. Early in the morning and late at night adverse aspects are strong.

Business affairs are subject to fortunate conditions today and all the stars appear to indicate saisfactory prospects for the entire year.

New millionaires are to be recognized and projects amazing in their scope are to be undertaken.

If the seers are to be believed the United States is to be the most powerful country in the world. Great service will be rendered to foreign nations that will have reason to rejoice because of our resources of money and industry.

Women are to achieve beauty through natural means, the seers predict and they are to develop their intellectual and altruistic possibilities for they are to perform supreme public service.

There will be extraordinary travel abroad this year it is prophesied but warning is given that the total eclipse of the Moon June 15 presage tidal waves and great storms.

The first eclipse visible in England of the sun in two hundred years which will affect the British empire serious will take place June 29.

Paris Rome Belgrade and Warsaw will suffer seriously from the Sun's eclipse it is prognosticated.

Forces of evil will cause the breaking out of many incendiary fires in the next few months the seers foretell.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a rarely important year.

Children born on this day probably will have eventful and successful lives. High army officers are born under this sign.

Uncle Wiggily

By Howard . Garis

To-day's Bedtime Story.

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND WUMPLE'S WHIZZ

"Could you take me with you when you go adventuring this morning, Uncle Wiggily?" asked Wumple, the little yellow Wogglejig boy as he saw the rabbit gentleman hopping away from the bungleump on Tuesday.

"Why, I suppose I could," slowly answered Mr. Longears. "But what about school? The Lady Mouse Teacher will wonder why you aren't in class, and she may blame me if I take you adventuring."

"Oh, no she won't!" quickly said Wumple. "She told me to go adventuring with you!"

"She did!" cried Uncle Wiggily with a jolly twinkle of his pink nose. "Why did she do that?"

"Well, you see," explained Wumple, "yesterday Miss Mouse told me before

Pretty soon Uncle Wiggily fell asleep.

I came to school this morning that I was to go to the woods to see if I could find any May flowers, after the April showers. She wants some flowers to make the schoolroom look pretty, I guess."

"A very good idea," agreed Uncle Wiggily.

"And when I told her," went on Wumple, "that you went adventuring every morning just about the time when I started for school, Miss Mouse said perhaps I might go with you and get May flowers while you were looking for adventures. So if you'll take me it will be fine!"

"All right! Come along!" invited Uncle Wiggily. "I'm not going to stay with you Wogglejig children much longer, so you might as well have all the fun you can while it lasts."

"Oh, are you going away from our bungleump?" asked Wumple sadly as he ran along beside Mr. Longears.

"I must go back to my own bungalow and my forty 'leven little bunny rabbits, to say nothing of my wife and Nurse Jane," answered Uncle Wiggily. "But I shall often come over to see you and your brothers and sisters, Wumple, also Boppy and Um. I'll come and visit you again."

"That's good," murmured yellow Wumple, and then he and Uncle Wiggily hurried to the woods, one to look for flowers and the other for adventures.

Uncle Wiggily glanced this way and that way with his bright eyes, seeking some sort of adventure such as helping an April Bug over a wide brook or carrying home a green leaf for a tired Ant lady. But there was no sign of any such adventures as these. However, the bunny gentleman saw where some purple, white and yellow violets were growing near a log, and he pointed them out to Wumple.

"Oh, what lovely flowers!" cried the Wogglejig boy. "Miss Mouse will be glad to get them. I'll pick a big bunch for her." Standing on his hind legs, Wumple began picking the blossoms with his front legs, while Uncle Wiggily sat down on a mossy log hoping an adventure might come along.

It was warm in the woods and pretty soon Uncle Wiggily fell asleep. He did not fall very far—not even off the log, for it was only a little sleep. And while he had his eyes closed, all of a sudden, the bear came stalking out of the bushes. Seeing the sleeping rabbit, the bear growled deep down in his throat:

"Ah, I see something good for me to eat."

Just then, when the bear was shuffling nearer and nearer to Uncle Wiggily, and Wumple had picked all the flowers he wanted, the Wogglejig boy looked up and saw the bad chap.

"Oh, I must not let the bear bite Uncle Wiggily!" whispered Wumple. "What can I do to stop him? I know I'll whizz my head around fast and make the bear so dizzy that he'll fall down. When the bear falls down Uncle Wiggily will wake up and he and I will run away."

No sooner said than done. Running up the hill Wumple stood in front of the bear, between the bad chap and Uncle Wiggily. Then, all of a sudden, Wumple began making his wooden head turn around very fast on his wooden neck peg. Faster and faster Wumple turned his head. The bear blinked his eyes and shivered as he growled:

"What are you doing?"

"I am whizzing, that's what I'm doing! I'm whizzing my head at you!" cried Wumple. He made his head, which he could turn all the way around on his neck, go faster and faster, so that at last the bear grew dizzy from looking at it, and down he fell ker thump. "Wake up, Uncle Wiggily, and run!" cried Wumple. And before the bear could get over being dizzy, the bunny and Wogglejig boy were far far away. So Mr. Longears had an adventure and Wumple whizzed his head as well as getting some flowers.

CANTON MINT IS SET ON FIRE

Communists Accused Of Starting the Blaze—All Leaving City.

40,000 MEN MARCHING.

LONDON, April 27 (United Press)—The mint at Canton was afire today and Communists were charged with having started the blaze, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Hong Kong said. Secret executions of Communists were reported to be occurring nightly in Canton.

A great troop movement from Wuhu towards Nanking was reported by Sir Percival Phillips, Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Mail. Forty thousand men were on the march, he said, but it was impossible to learn whether they were adherents of the Hankow Radical Government, advancing to attack Nanking, or Chiang Kai-Shek's Moderate Nationalist troops going to reinforce the Nanking defences.

The British warships Mantis, Kepel and Wolsey were reported to have engaged Chinese ashore with artillery fire. Foreign property in Nanking was still being stolen and sold at auction, Sir Percival reported.

CHURCHES WAR ON PAGAN CHARLESTON

By NEA Service.

JOHANNESBURG, April 27.—A new origin of the Charleston has come to light here with the announcement that it is a Kaffir dance. The Christian churches have made it a religious issue. Notices posted in shops and factories warn employees they will be discharged if they continue to practice the pagan prancings. One missionary says modern ballroom dances are very similar to those of the Bantu people. "For the last 19 years," he says, "I have seen the natives dancing the Charleston in the jungles of Africa."

BON AMI LIMITED, MONTREAL

PRESENT PLAY AT KNOX CHURCH

"Go Slow Mary" Presented By Senior Classes of Sunday School.

GIVEN TABLEAU.

A three-act comedy entitled "Go Slow Mary" was presented by the senior classes of Knox church in the lecture hall, Sunday school, last night. The plot of the play centred around a young unhappy married couple, who found it very difficult to agree on anything. The husband claimed that it was a very easy life to just keep house all day, so his wife decided a plan that she thought would soon change his mind and she proposed that he keep house while she got a position as stenographer.

Two more characters, Sally Carter and Burt Childs are introduced into the play and as friends come into the life of the already dissatisfied couple Mr. and Mrs. Abbey, in an effort to patch up the quarrel, make it appear worse for the Abbeys think that one another are flirting with their respective guests. Bobby and Dolly Berdon, childen "on the way to Vancouver", lend real humour to the play by their originality of child acting. Of course there is a stupid maid who has her "beaus," and increases the audience's merriment with her indecision in picking the tough or the policeman for a husband.

The final act sees the Abbeys once more reunited and happy for Mrs. Abbey is once more back "doing housework" and her husband is offered a position by one of her former guests that was supposed to be causing trouble. The characters were:

Billy Abbey—George Wallace.
Mary Abbey—Jean Ingram.
Mrs. Berdon—Mary Morton.
Sally Carter—Lillian Campbell.
Harry Stevens—Hugh Morton.
Dolly Berdon—Bill Morrison.
Burt Childs—Deburke Sproule.
Bobby Berdon—Bill Morrison.
Katie—Lena Johnson.
Danny Grubb—George Hutchinson.
Murphy—Bill Mantel.

The play was under the direction of Malcolm N. Clark.

Between the second and third act an eastern tableau in costume was presented, directed by R. J. Devey, with Miss Beatrice Morrison as the leading lady.

FLOODED AREA.

The shaded portion of the above map indicates the vast territory in the Central Mississippi River Valley, now submerged by torrents of water. It is estimated that 8,000,000 acres are inundated. The crest of the flood is moving southward from a point near Cairo at the junction of the Ohio river. Parts of seven states are hit by the great flood and the menace is reported increasing hour by hour.

POPULAR BLUFF, Mo., April 27.—Judge D. B. Deem has performed 5285 marriage ceremonies in the past 30 years and never has used the word "obey." He recently was elected for his eighth consecutive 4-year term as probate judge. "No one ever requested the use of the word," he said, "and I wouldn't marry them if they did. It's ridiculous for a woman to swear that she will obey when everyone knows she won't." Judge Deem has divorced some of the couples he married and says he knows less about marriage every day.

Women's New Hygiene

Ends disposal problem — Discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

THE old-time sanitary pad has been supplanted by a new and better way called KOTEX.

It ends the embarrassment of laundry and disposal. You discard Kotex as easily as tissue.

It's five times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads, and thus protects amazingly. You wear sheer gowns and gay frocks under the most trying conditions.

Also deodorizes, and thus ends all fear of offending. 8 in 10 better class women now use it. Great hospitals employ it. Doctors widely urge it.

Most stores have Kotex on counters wrapped in plain paper, ready to be picked up without even asking.

Costs only a few cents for a package of 12. Be sure you get the genuine KOTEX, for only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

"Why, Doris, this dessert tastes like fresh wild raspberries"

"YES, Bob remarked the same thing the other evening at dinner and he's getting to be quite an enthusiast for McLaren's 'Invincible' Jelly since he learned the secret of its distinctive flavor."

In the conversation that followed, Bob smilingly admitted his conversion to delicious, healthful desserts that contain the actual juices of choice, fresh fruits and have the tender, quivering texture that instantly identifies them as McLaren's "Invincible" Jellies.

Bob was interested—as most husbands will be—in knowing that Muskoka wild raspberries supply the juice that flavor "Invincible" Raspberry Jelly. That the actual juices of selected, fresh strawberries, cherries, currants, grapes and pineapples account for the natural, "fruity" flavor of other McLaren's "Invincible" dessert jellies—and that repeated tests assure uniform high quality. BOOK REVIEWS

EARLY DAYS OF THIS DISTRICT NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK

"Early Days in Upper Canada: Letters of John Langton." Edited by W. A. Langton.

Mr. John Langton, the Cambridge graduate and future auditor-general of Upper Canada and vice-chancellor of the University of Toronto, came from England to Sturgeon Lake in 1833, and immediately began the uninterrupted and detailed account of his settlement for the benefit of his people in England, which was preserved by those who received it, and has now been published by his son, the well-known architect of Toronto.

W. Langton's diary, for that is what his letters amount to, is by far the most important account ever given of the very beginnings and of the gradual rise of this district, then known as the Newcastle district, named after the Duke of Newcastle. There was no such place as Lindsay at that time. Peterborough was the centre and from the large and constant influx of Old Country people to it, it was plainly marked out as the future supply-centre of a large country. The optimism of the newcomers and the later pessimism and failure of many of them are the marked features of those days. It was to the few old countrymen who stuck it out that Upper Canada is indebted for the continued increase in population from the old land which at one time appeared altogether likely to give Canada up as a bad job and to go to Australia instead. Early frosts and ague seemed likely at one time to turn the tide of post-Napoleonic immigration elsewhere. But even worse than the fever and ague and the thousand natural shocks that flesh is heir to was the attempted paternalism of the provincial government at York (Toronto) which did then, as it will always do wherever the plan is practised, its best to stamp out individual enterprise and to exasperate beyond endurance those who were bold enough and had brains enough to found and develop a new country for themselves. Strange as it may seem, a government depends upon the energy and enterprise of its inhabitants, as it must, and then, stranger still, it sometimes seeks to rule and regulate them in the name of socialistic government-ownership in a way which failed then and always will fail. This is one of the most important lessons to be learned from the Langton letters, and they come to us as a timely moment n our history. The government of those early days gave up its paternalistic policy, however, on finding that it discouraged private enterprise and just in time to prevent the collapse of the whole province. These are the salient features of this remarkable collection of letters.

The general reader wil find a great deal to interest him also. For the first time we are given the inside history of this district, not omitting the early enthusiasm of the people over the Port Hope canal project (the T. V. C. was originally intended to cut through from Rice Lake to Port Hope or Cobourg). Canadian government literature, freely circulating in England, backed up by the "lure of owning one's own land," induced many of the half-pay officers, left over after the cessation of the Napoleonic wars, to emigrate with their families to this country. Some young men, in search of fortune and an opening not found in the Old Countries, came hither also. Major Hamilton, the father of the Hon. Robert Hamilton of Auburn, and of Mrs. Dennistoun wife of Judge Dennistoun, of Inverlea came to Peterborough at the dawn of the thirties with his young family of sons and daughters, going into business here. Mr. Langton gives account of the burning of Mayor Hamilton's mill, distillery, brewery, &c. —enough to discourage most men, one would think. "I do not know if I ever mentioned the mayor to you in any of my letters. He is a very gentlemanly old man who bought a wife at Peterborough last autumn and has lately been joined by an agreeable family of all sexes and ages . . ." And then again: "Besides these more formal gatherings we from the back lakes spend all our vacant evenings at Mayor Hamilton's, where we generally of late have contrived to get up a dance."

From Sturgeon Lake, near Fenelon Falls, which Mr. Langton thought could one day be a future Peterborough, he, and those like him who had come from afar in search of an opening, voyaged and walked constantly to Peterborough. In those days, before dams were built, and had raised the level of the lakes, the water was considerably lower. Thus what we have got out of the T. V. C. project so far has been higher lake-levels or more water and more power, but less commerce. The provincial government, however, has now resumed its formerly discarded policy with respect to power. As the old saying has it, "A government may furnish power but it can't make the people use it." The uncertainty of government ownership and control renders private capital suspicious, and though the latter should always be "regulated" by government supervision, it is fatal to attempt to dictate to it. It will go elsewhere so long as there is any elsewhere to go to.

These "letters" are almost a constant record of rowing or paddling down from Sturgeon to Bridgenorth, which at that time had one house and then walking in to Peterborough. Afterwards, a mill was built at Fene on, but still Peterborough had to be visited for government land purposes, the purchase of supplies and for social enjoyment. Bob-cajwin-unk, as Mr. Langton calls the village of "bright waters," was first named "St. Alban's," as the village of Lakefield was first known as "Selby" until sold by Hon. L. Burnham to Col. Strickland for seven shillings and sixpence ($1.50). Mr. Boyd came a little later into the life of this northern district.

Throughout the letters, which are very fully and frankly written, there is bound, however, to run the thread of inquiry by the reader. "Why did these people with their money and education not learn to provide themselves from the beginning with better boats and home-buildings than they did? Why did they live near swamps and absorb the poison of decaying vegetation when they could have done otherwise? Was there no mosquito-netting in those days?"

The early settlers seem to have handicapped themselves needlessly. A back-laker of later days would have put them in better shape in a few minutes. Steam, of course, as a motive power, was in its infancy and railways unheard of. The natives (Indians) were a fine, easy going people, who caused no heart-burnings or other burnings, and were of great service to the settler. The scarcity of dogs strikes us as peculiar, when, to-day, the town is overrun with them, especially at the dead of night. A lack of knowledge how to preserve food, as by ice, which surely was plenty enough, and the corresponding and acknowledged great abundance of game would have done away, one would think, with the continual importation of salt-pork. Fish, too, were plentiful. Everything indeed but a ready system of transportation and wise precaution.

It is true that a future in the wilderness is no great thing to look forward to, but why did they begin it if discouraged at the outset unless, perhaps, they were driven to it by pressure at home. Many a failure in Canada was due to that cause.

It will be seen from these remarks that the review of this book calls for more than casual references. The letters teach us much—very much—and whilst very entertaining they are even more instructive. It is true, also, that while we may find fault with the earliest settlers of Mr. Langton's kind for a certain lack of "nous" we must ask ourselves, "Have we displayed any more of that quality of late in Peterborough ourselves?"

From 1825 to 1895, the progress of Peterborough was steady and rapid. The overflow of the same tide continued for a few years longer. But as Col. Worsley, an inspecting officer, once said to a local Napoleon, after some evolution: "Ah! Mr. So and So, and where are we now?" Has even the echo of our former glories and promise died away? Do we appreciate our "strong" men? Are we afflicted with a certain jealousy of them which has ruined many a promising land from Mexico to the Southern Cross? Or is it fear?

Towards the end of the book we have to follow Mr. Langton to Toronto and other fields not less interesting to the student in a larger way, but to the people of "Peterborough and the surrounding country." The earlier experiences are most interesting and valuable. The Historical Society of Peterborough did an immense amount of valuable work in providing first-hand written accounts by the old settlers themselves of their early days, but there are no days earlier than Mr. Langton's, and Peterborough, as well as Upper Canada, generally has a historical foundation which is second-to-none. Is it to be of any use to us? Have we "run out" alread?

Mr. Wallis, of "Menino," an Irish gentleman, was another young member of the Sturgeon Lake colony. Mr. Dennistoun, who came out from Scotland at the age of twenty, afterwards became our county judge. But most of the Sturgeon Lake colonists gave up the ghost and returned whence they came. This immigration here preceded that from Cobourg, which latter provided most of our engineers and doctors.

In contrast to those who found Canada impossible there was a large immigration of Irish people brought out by Hon. Peter Robinson, Commissioner of Crown Lands, who worked their way sturdily and steadily to a condition of independence and prosperity. It is, however, with the Sturgeon Lake colony and Peterborough that this book especially deals, and to all interested in our earliest "past" it will prove a source of information not to be gleaned elsewhere.

Mr. Langton gives a sly kick at the Family Compact, composed of what he calls the aristocrats of those days, the United Empire Loyalists who because they gave up much to live under the British flag, wanted all when they got to Canada. The currency referred to throughout is sterling, the Halifax equivalent not coming in till later, to be followed by dollars and cents at a later date still.

A curious, though minor error, is made by the editor on page six, where he "notes" that the Cambleton on the Otonabee River referred to by his father is now Campbellford. Campbelltown, where the river-boats wooded up for so many years, is on the river still. Campbellford is twenty miles away. But where is Sully?

A Blessing to People of Advanced Years

"I wonder if you really know what a blessing Gin Pills are to people of advanced years.

"I am 72 years of age, and suffered for a considerable time with kidney and bladder trouble. My rest was broken through having to get up in the night three and four times. Later I suffered with pains in the bladder, and my son, who had used Gin Pills for pains in the back and lumbago, bought me a box. Before I had finished it I was relieved of the pains in my bladder and had to get up less frequently. At my age I can scarcely expect to be permanently free from troubles of this kind, but if Gin Pills will give others the relief they have given me, they will be a blessing indeed."

(Name on request.)

Prompt and lasting relief has been found in Gin Pills by thousands of people of advanced years who have had kidney or bladder trouble. If even slightly troubled in this way, get a box today at your druggist's—50c. National Drug & Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto, Canada. 126

1867 — DIAMOND JUBILEE SERIES — 1927

The Bassano Dam, near Bassano, Alberta. Construction commenced early in 1911. Formal opening April 21st, 1914.

"WE all know how the Canadian Pacific Railway helped to make a nation," said the present King, when he was Prince of Wales.

The actual creation of communities, planting farms, villages, towns and cities; these were visions of the founders of the country and of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The task of opening up much of this territory, of irrigating the dry belt, proving its fertility and providing it with a population, was left to this colonizing railway, which set about to perform the work with energy and efficiency.

The Bow River, fed by everlasting snows of the Rockies, was utilized to transform a semi-arid desert into a source of great national wealth.

Under its charter, the Canadian Pacific Railway found itself possessor of many acres of good farm land. By offering this on easy terms, keeping prices at a reasonable level, organizing demonstration farms, presenting shade trees and blooded stock to farmers, rendering aid to growing towns and cities, erecting hotels, encouraging the spirit of citizenship, fostering travel by admirable train service over a route of unparalleled majesty, the Canadian Pacific has helped to create a new country for the use of Canadians and the delight of their visitors who now come from all parts of the world.

To have thus assisted in the making of a great nation is one of the accomplishments of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Normile Heads East to Arrange Dempsey's "Comeback"

FUTURE PLANS OF EX-CHAMP HELD SECRET

Expected Will Demand Bout With Present Heavyweight Champion Only.

TRAINING HARD.

Messenger Bears Dempsey's Answer For Test Match With Uzcudum.

NEW YORK, April 27 — Carrying the message for which the world of fight has been eagerly waiting, Gene Normile was on his way to New York last night as the confidential emissary of Jack Dempsey.

Normile will arrive by Thursday, it was learned through reliable sources last night. He comes direct from the former heavyweight champions "comeback camp" near Los Angeles, California.

Secrecy has attended Normile's departure from the west coast. Tex Rickard admitted yesterday that a messenger from Dempsey is en route, but he would not admit the identity of the courier.

Normile bears Dempsey's answer to Rickard's offer of a test match with Paulino Uzcudun. The former champion, after four weeks of mountain climbing, wood chopping and outdoor life, is finally ready to answer the question which has interested boxing enthusiasts for the past six months.

May Insist on Tunney

According to latest reports his answer will be in the affirmative. He has decided that he is still good enough to claim a return match for the title he held for seven long years. It is not known definitely whether he will consent to any other match but one with Tunney, however. He may insist that he will fight only in the event he can meet Tunney.

When he entered training a month ago Dempsey weighed 210 pounds. He has reduced to 199 pounds, which is within nine pounds of his fighting weight.

SOFTBALL MEETING AT CAMPBELLFORD

Decided Not To Enter Team in the Ontario Finals.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 27 — The Softball Association executive at their meeting in the Public Library Monday night decided to pass up the Ontario Association for this year. All the executive were in favor of using the 12 inch inseam ball and this was adopted as the official ball in all league games of the local Association. In view of this, the executive thought it hardly fair to the team qualifying to compete in the Ontario finals to have to change to the 13 inch ball when meeting outside competition and was the main reason for the decision not to affiliate with the Ontario body. There were five teams represented: the Mill, the Millionaires, Hydro, Clerks and St. Andrews, and Rev. Mr. Daniel and Grant Anderson will be asked to take the responsibility of organizing a sixth team to make the Association a six club organization.

The schedule will get under way Monday, May 9th, the task of arranging a schedule being left to H. Atkinson and H. Beatty, to be submitted for approval at the final meeting before the opening, to be held in the Library next Tuesday. All the managers were asked to submit for approval a list of bonafide players at the next meeting, any players not connected with any of the clubs and wishing to play ball will be equally divided among the contending teams.

Another question left for the next meeting was the use of finger mitts for the first baseman, with one of the Clerks advocating mitts for the entire infield. The managers promised to try out the scheme in practice this week and report at the Tuesday meeting.

The secretary was instructed to purchase 1 dozen 12 inch inseam balls, each club being expected to repurchase two balls.

Rev. Mr. Daniel was again appointed chairman of the committee of umpires. A list of umpires approved by the executive will be forwarded to Mr. Daniel, to which he can add any additional umpires. He is to make the appointments for the first half of the schedule and submit it for approval at the Tuesday meeting. The list already sanctioned includes: Rev. Mr. Daniel, C .S. Weston, C. Massie, H. Tinney, F. DeCarroll, F. C. Bonnycastle, C. Montgomery, V. Farrell, J. Cowell, C. Holmes, W. Blakely, H. Beatty.

PIRATES TIED WITH GIANTS

Meadows Gains Fourth Straight Victory By Holding Cards.

CUBS LOSE 3-5.

NEW YORK, April 27 (Canadian Press).—The Pirates went into a tie with Giants for the National League leadership yesterday by defeating the St. Louis Cardinals on their home grounds, 9 to 5. It was the fourth straight victory for Lee Meadows, Pirate hurler. Wright and Southworth each made home runs with two men on.

The Giants, making their first appearance of the season at Brooklyn, batted hard behind the splendid pitching of Fred Fitzsimmons to score a 7 to 2 victory over the tailenders. Bill Terry led the New York attack with a home run, a double and a sacrifice fly. The Giants reached Jess Barnes and Guy Cantrell for 14 hits.

The Cincinnati Reds clouted their way through Jones in the sixth to defeat the Chicago Cubs, 8 to 5. Lugue was driven from the mound in the sixth, when Gonzales knocked a long single with bases full. Jones, succeeding, was unsuccessful in stopping the rally, and the Reds made six runs off him before he went to the showers.

It rained at Philadelphia and the game with Boston was postponed.

COBB STARS IN ATHLETICS' WIN

Overcome Six Run Lead To Down Rex Sox 9 To 8.

SLAMS TWO HOMERS.

NEW YORK, April 27 (Canadian Press).—Ty Cobb in a Philadelphia uniform was the whole show at Boston yesterday as Connie Mack's rehabilitated Athletics overcame a six-run Boston lead to down the Red Sox, 9 to 8. The Georgia Peach stole home, drove in two runs, scored twice himself and ended the game with a circus catch, an unassisted double play, racing in to catch a fly and double at first.

Cleveland beat St. Louis, 6 to 2, when Willis Hudlin held the Browns to five hits. The Indians landed on Gaston hard in the first three innings, bunching four hits for three runs in the opening round.

Ted Lyons held Detroit to six hits and the White Sox hammered a quartet of Tiger pitchers, winning easily 9 to 3. Ward's fielding was a feature of the Sox defence. Three detective bureau squads armed to the teeth tore into the ball park at breakneck speed in response to a riot call. There was no riot, just a Sox celebration.

The Yankee-Senator game was postponed by rain.

had been given some money to hand a United States customs officer. The commission endeavored to ascertain from Mr. Dawson what he was charged with conspiring to do, but the ferryman could not say. The money had been given to him by a mysterious person driivng a yellow automobile whose name he did not know. He was released, he said, and he denied absolutely that he carried liquor across on the ferry.

Mr. Jacques was examined briefly about a barge which had been moored at the foot of a Windsor street in 1924 and which, he said, supplied the thirsty, who went aboard, by the bottle. He had been informed that the barge was used by the Carling Brewing Company. He had been offered an opportunity "to buy a case" when he boarded the craft, but had declined the offer.

The commission adjourned until 10 o'clock to-day.

IS SUSPENDED BY COMMISSION

Paulino's Failure To Keep Engagement With Keeley is Complaint.

TIME INDEFINITE.

NEW YORK, April 27 (Canadian Press).—Paulino Uzcudun, the woodchopping Spaniard, prominently mentioned as an opponent for Jack Dempsey in the former heavyweight champion's contemplated comeback fight, yesterday was suspended by the State Athletic Commission upon the request of Masachusetts boxing officials.

Paulino's failure to fulfill an engagement with the New England heavyweight, Ed. Keeley, on April 18, was the complaint resulting to yesterday's action by the board. He will remain on the inactive list of the Commission here until he makes a satisfactory settlement with Boston promoters who hold his contract.

Photo shows Clarence De Mar, veteran of long distance races, breasting the tape in the annual Boston A.A. marathon race, the winner for the fifth time. He covered the distance in 2 hours, 40 minutes, 22 1-5 seconds. This race carries with it the American championship. Above is shown the start of the race with the long distance runners breaking away.

are marooned on a levee at Arkansas City, and 3,000 to 6,000 more are in the nearby country, Mayor C. C. Hemingway of the flood-swept town said to a staff correspondent of the Associated Press, who flew from Arkansas City to Little Rock.

"We are in desperate need," the Mayor said. "The town has no food. There are 2,000 persons on the levee and they have not been fed since Monday.

"Please tell the world that we need food, boats, shelter, tents and bedding. All of the people on the levee are in dire need. Any aid you can send the stricken town will save lives."

'PHONE SYSTEMS CHARGE FOR CALLS

Fees To Be Collected By Murray and Cramahe Boards.

ORLAND, April 27.—The Murray Township and Cramahe Township Telephone Systems have at last had their petitions to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board granted, to charge line fees from adjoining Municipal System calls. The first Commissioners of the Municipal Telephone Systems planned to have all the municipal systems exchange messages free and keep down expenses to the subscribers but one after another has broken away and asked the Board to allow exchange charges. Brighton and Haldimand still held to the original plan but were ruled out by the Board at their last sitting and the new plan will go into effect about July 1st.

While Earl Williams is having his new stage motor undergoing some repairs in Belleville, he has secured the services of W. J. Latimer to handle the freight end of the work from Campbellford to Brighton.

A rather peculiar freak of nature is a white backed robin which, with its mate, is building a nest in the large elm tree on main street in this village. There are a very few dark feathers on the back while the wings and breast are the usual colors. It and its mate may be seen at any time busy at home building along the main highway.

C. A. Lawson who is running the Provincial County grader has had to lay off work in Seymour township on account of the recent bad breaking up of the highways there. There has as yet been no breaking in the road in Brighton of late, though there were several very bad places a month ago.

Many farmers have their early potatoes planted and considerable done. Those farmers who had tomatoes planted on the front will have to do it all over again as the recent cold snap has frozen the ground.

Mr. Tennyson Adams has bought a new car.

The all day services at Wooler Holiness church were largely attended on Sunday, April 24, to listen to the Rev. Blanchard of Roblin and Rev. Mr. Winters of Madoc, whose services were secured for the occasion by the pastor, the Rev. J. Woodland.

Fall grains and new seeding will be much injured by the frequent heavy freezing. Strawberries will also suffer from the same cause.
